Lance quits as budget chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, his voice choked with emotion, announced Bert Lance's resignation Wednesday, saying his close friend and budget director decided independently to step aside and "I think he's made the right decision."

In a televised news conference delayed two hours so Lance could compose his farewell letter, Carter acknowledged some of the allegations against Lance were true, but placed much of the blame on the "extraordinary standards" his administration has tried to set.

Although the Prsident said he agreed with Lance's decision to return to Georgia after eight months in the administration, he paid tribute to the 46-year-old banker and said he considers him irreplaceable. He did not name a successor.

Lance, in a letter Carter read at the news conference, said his conscience remains clear and he still feels he could be an effective budget director.

BUT, NOTING THE continuing controversy surrounding his name, Lance said, "I have to ask the question: at what price do I remain?"

"I am convinced that I can continue to be an effective director of the Office of Management and Budget," Lance said. "However, because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it, I have decided to submit my resignation as director of OMB.

"I desire to return to my native state of Georgia."

Said Carter:

"Bert Lance is my friend. I know him personally as well as if he was my own brother. I know him . . . to be a good and an honorable man . . . nothing that I have heard or read has shaken my belief in Bert's ability and integrity."

Carter said Lance's resignation was "a courageous and also a patriotic decision . . . I don't think there is any way I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance who would be as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and adviser as he's been.

"His replacement will be adequate, of course . . . But I don't think I can find anyone to (truly) replace him."

LANCE HAS BEEN under intense pressure to resign for several weeks because of allegations stemming from his years as a Georgia bank executive. He acknowledged incurring large bank overdrafts and other problems.

But he denied trying to hide his past from the Senate committee which recommended his confirmation as budget director in January, and he said he never used political clout to get the federal government to close investigations of his activities.

Carter said Lance did a "superb" job of defending himself in three days of testimony before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee last week and "he was ahle to clear his name when he testified."

Carter said he had met with Lance for 45 minutes Monday and "I told Bert I thought he had exonerated himself completely . . . and asked him to make his own decision," about resigning.

On Tuesday, Carter said, Lance informed him he would step aside.

"This was a decision that Bert made," Carter said. "I think he's made the right decision."

CARTER SAID he did not request a resignation but he and Lance communicated on the subject "without embarrassment."

The President acknowledged "there have been numerous allegations

Resignation welcomed by bankers

Bankers from throughout the nation, including the Northwest suburbs, generally welcomed Bert Lance's decision to resign as budget director.

"It was inevitable, I think he's lost his effectiveness," said Gerald Fitzgerald, an officer of the Suburban National Bank and the Palatine National Bank.

Lance's leaving may affect business confidence in the Carter administration, Fitzgerald said.

"HE WAS DEFINITELY thought of as one of the few conservatives in the financial area of government and that's going to be a loss," Fitzgerald said.

James Lancaster, president of the Bank of Elk Grove, said, "I think it was a good thing and I think his usefulness to the Carter administration has long since ended." He said Lance's affairs will cause a legislative backlash that may hurt bankers.

"I'm concerned that they're writing regulations that are harmful. It's like when somebody takes advantage of the tax system. Congress in its wisdom modifies the IRS regulations, so what we have is a system in which the average guy can not do his own income tax," Lancaster said.

FRANK MICHAELSON, manager of a Security Pacific National Bank branch at Dinuba, Calif., echoed the feelings of many small bankers.

"I think Lance's resignation was necessary," Michaelson said. "The image he has given bankers is something we'll have a tough time living down. I also don't think he would have been able to function (as budget director) with all the publicity he's received."

But Lance was not without sympathy.

A spokesman for the American Bankers Assn. in Washington said,

"One can only view Mr. Lance's resignation with a high degree of compassion. It has been a most difficult period for him, for his family and for President Carter.

Others voiced concern over who might replace Lance.

Monte Gordon, vice president of Dreyfus Corp. in New York, said, "I

Hersey sinks teeth into lunch test

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

High school students are notorious for grabbing lunch at favorite fast-food spots rather than eating in school cafeterias. The federal government would like to see this changed.

A study aimed at getting more high school students to eat school lunches and to waste less of them is now under way at 48 randomly selected schools across the country, including Hersey High School in Arlington Heights.

"Studies have shown that eating balanced meals improves students' school performance," Judson Harper, co-director of the stuly, said. "If you believe this, then it's desirable to increase participation in school lunch programs."

THE $250,000 STUDY is being conducted by Colorado State University for the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture and results probably will not be available until next summer.

Three alternate menu patterns are being tested in the study and data will be collected to show the costs, food waste and student attitudes associated with each.

The menu patterns include the traditional Type A lunch that requires students to take a meat entree, two fruits and/or vegetables, bread and milk; a lunch that requires students to take an item from each of the four basic food groups; and a lunch where students choose freely from a potpourri of items, Harper said.

"The free choice lunch emulates the open campus situation where students can go out and purchase whatever they want," he said. "It will show us whether students are making bad choices or relatively good ones."

THE LUNCH MENU planned around the basic four food groups would reinforce the nutritional education students receive throughout their school years, Harper said.

For its part in the study, Hersey will test the Type A lunch that was the national standard for about 30 years until last year when it was replaced by an amended version requiring students to take only three of its five components.

"Even though the government decided to abandon this program the decision was made on a rather skimpy set of data and a fair amount of political pressure to reduce plate waste," Harper said. "This study should give us more conclusive data."

For the 10-week testing period, that began Sept. 12, Hersey will be on the amended Type A lunch program for four weeks and the traditional Type A lunch program for the following six

Israelis enter Lebanon, exchange Palestinian fire

Israeli tanks and troops pushed deeper into Lebanon Wednesday pounding Palestinian positions with heavy artillery barrages. Palestinian gunners retaliated with the first rocket attacks on an Israeli town in 18 months.

Both Lebanese Christian and Palestinian sources reported Israeli gunboats had set up a naval blockade of the ancient Biblical ports of Tyre and Sidon through which Palestinians get arms shipments from Arab allies.

Israel denied the blockade report but refused either to confirm or deny the reports of increased troop and armor raids across the border nearly 3 miles inside Lebanon.

TYRE IS LOCATED some 12 miles north of Israel. Sidon is 20 miles north of Tyre.

The Christian and Palestinian sources did not specify how far offshore the Israeli boats were, what type they were, or how many of the boats were involved in the blockade.

The fighting further threatened a Syrian-Israeli confrontation and coincided with a meeting in Washington between Sec. of State Cyrus Vance, President Carter and Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismael Fahmi. Fahmi and Carter agreed Israel and the Arab states should meet in Geneva before the end of 1977.

The escalated fighting came two days after President Carter met Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv said American diplomats were in contact with the governments of Israel, Lebanon and Syria in an effort to stop the fighting.

LEBANESE REPORTS from the border war zone said Israeli armored troops, which crossed the frontier into Lebanon and set up positions at Kfar Kila Tuesday, had pushed further north and set up new positions near the village of Deir Mimas.

Percy backs expanded landing rights for SST

U.S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., Wednesday made a strong pitch in support of expanded landing rights for the controversial supersonic jet Concorde.

Refusal to allow the plane to land at U.S. airports will build up "anti-United States feeling" in Europe, Percy said following a breakfast meeting with President Carter and other GOP senators.

Carter is expected to make a decision by Saturday on whether the Concorde will have federal approval to land at O'Hare or other U.S. airports.

Residents who live near O'Hare already have organized a protest against the SST.

"I don't think we ought to be the fall guys" by banning the SST, Percy said. "I strongly opposed our own SST. I thought it was a flying Edsel, and I still think it would have been the worst investment we could make."

ALTHOUGH THE English and French "made a bad investment," Percy said, "I don't think we ought to shoot it down.

"It ought to drop of its own economic weight, and you would hand a hatchet to the left wing, the Euro-Communists," if the plane were banned, he said.

"They are hopkng we will stand in the way of its landing and build up this anti-United States feeling in Europe," he said.

He inadvertently changes lanes

A newspaper deliveryman was forced to make a change in his schedule Wednesday night when he lost $250 in change on the Edens Expressway near Wilson Avenue in Chicago.

A bag of change fell out of the truck at about 6:15 p.m., spilling its contents over three southbound lanes.

Authorities sealed off part of the expressway while the loose change was picked up.

The driver, from the Chicago Daily News, told police he recovered all but $6.

The incident created few problems for motorists because most of the rush-hour traffic had already passed.

Eleanor feared being buried alive, son writes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eleanor Roosevelt once asked that her wrists be opened when she died "for fear of being buried alive," according to her son Elliott.

Roosevelt writes of his mother in a new book, "Mother R: Eleanor Roosevelt's Untold Story." Excerpts from the book are appearing in the October issue of McCall's.

Roosevelt said his mother, her body wracked by tuberculosis just before her death at 78, on Nov. 7, 1962, wanted to be allowed to die. When she was hospitalized in September of that year she had "so many injections that the nurses had to search for areas of unscarred skin," Roosevelt wrote.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

"BELIEVING IT was nonsensical to go on any longer, she spat out the pills she was handed, or held them under her tongue."

After three weeks of hospitalization, Mrs. Roosevelt was sent home to her New York apartment.

Roosevelt describes sitting in his mother's room, holding her hand as she lay sleeping, only rarely stirring into consciousness. He wrote, "Once at the thrust of yet another hypodermic, I watched her wake and mutter, 'Let me die.' "

A month later, while on a business trip in Miami Beach, Roosevelt said he got a call from his brother Franklin in New York, who told him: "I'm sorry old man, but Mummy's gone."

ROOSEVELT SAID his mother spelled out her funeral arrangements in a letter. She wrote: " . . . A simple oak coffin, covered not with flowers but with branches from evergreen from the Val-Kill woods; her wrists to be opened for fear of being buried alive; Charlie Curnan and Les Entrup of the Hyde Park luncheonette to be her pallbearers."

Roosevelt said his mother's oak coffin rested in state at Val-Kill Cottage in Hyde Park, N.Y., "not under evergreen boughs, but covered with a magnificent floral blanket."

He did not say whether his mother's wrists were cut after she died.

He inadvertently changes lanes

A newspaper deliveryman was forced to make a change in his schedule Wednesday night when he lost $250 in change on the Edens Expressway near Wilson Avenue in Chicago.

A bag of change fell out of the truck at about 6:15 p.m., spilling its contents over three southbound lanes.

Authorities sealed off part of the expressway while the loose change was picked up.

The driver, from the Chicago Daily News, told police he recovered all but $6.

The incident created few problems for motorists because most of the rush-hour traffic had already passed.

Eleanor feared being buried alive, son writes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eleanor Roosevelt once asked that her wrists be opened when she died "for fear of being buried alive," according to her son Elliott.

Roosevelt writes of his mother in a new book, "Mother R: Eleanor Roosevelt's Untold Story." Excerpts from the book are appearing in the October issue of McCall's.

Roosevelt said his mother, her body wracked by tuberculosis just before her death at 78, on Nov. 7, 1962, wanted to be allowed to die. When she was hospitalized in September of that year she had "so many injections that the nurses had to search for areas of unscarred skin," Roosevelt wrote.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

"BELIEVING IT was nonsensical to go on any longer, she spat out the pills she was handed, or held them under her tongue."

After three weeks of hospitalization, Mrs. Roosevelt was sent home to her New York apartment.

Roosevelt describes sitting in his mother's room, holding her hand as she lay sleeping, only rarely stirring into consciousness. He wrote, "Once at the thrust of yet another hypodermic, I watched her wake and mutter, 'Let me die.' "

A month later, while on a business trip in Miami Beach, Roosevelt said he got a call from his brother Franklin in New York, who told him: "I'm sorry old man, but Mummy's gone."

ROOSEVELT SAID his mother spelled out her funeral arrangements in a letter. She wrote: " . . . A simple oak coffin, covered not with flowers but with branches from evergreen from the Val-Kill woods; her wrists to be opened for fear of being buried alive; Charlie Curnan and Les Entrup of the Hyde Park luncheonette to be her pallbearers."

Roosevelt said his mother's oak coffin rested in state at Val-Kill Cottage in Hyde Park, N.Y., "not under evergreen boughs, but covered with a magnificent floral blanket."

He did not say whether his mother's wrists were cut after she died.

Fisherman's Wharf site explodes, seven injured

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A gas line exploded into a roaring fire that destroyed a two-story building at Fisherman's Wharf Wednesday, sending bodies flying through a Harbor Tours office and blasting walls a distance of 25 feet.

Fire and hospital officials said seven persons — all either office employes or gas company repairmen — were injured, three critically. Five of the injured were under treatment at San Francisco General Hospital.

Dennis Fullalove, 23, a cashier in the Harbor Tours office, said the explosion occurred as Pacific Gas & Electric Co. workers were repairing a gas main in the building.

"Suddenly I heard this roar and it just felt like a giant picked me up and dropped me on my rump," he said.

FULLALOVE ESCAPED with an arm injury but said "other people were blasted away, flying through the air." The walls were blasted at least 25 feet.

Hundreds of tourists and workers watched as flames enveloped the pier during the noon lunch hour. The smoke spread out many blocks away.

Employes from nearby stores pitched in to rescue some of the persons stranded inside the building after the entrance steps were destroyed.

Remo Gaustucci, 46, a barber, dashed across the street and jumped on to a landing from where he helped three women climb to safety.

"The whole building was just shattered and people were running all over the place," he said.

"PEOPLE WERE running around out of their minds," said Dave McCloud, 21, an ambulance paramedic who took critically burned victims to Mission Emergency Hospital.

A dozen fire trucks fought the blaze as panic-stricken friends and relatives of victims sought information.

"I thank the Lord I am still alive," said Fullalove. "All we were doing was standing in the lobby when — wham! — me and my coworker were just lifted up as if we had no power."

The blast occurred in a tourist area where an old schooner called the Balclutha is open daily to the public.

Lance resigns as budget director

which I admit are true but a lot of the problem has been brought on Bert Lance by me, because of the extraordinary standards we have tried to set in government and the expectations of the American people that were engendered in my own campaign and my inauguration statement."

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, the consensus appeared to be that Lance did the right think in resigning.

Sen. Charles Percy, top Republican on the Senate committee which held nine days of hearings into Lance's fitness to continue as head of the Office of Managmenet and Budget, commented after President Carter's announcement:

"I believe the President and Mr. Lance have made the correct decision. The greatest assets that any person can have in life are family and friends. My heart goes out to the President and to the Lance family at this time.

"I believe the decision for Mr. Lance to step down is in the best interest of the country and the best interest of the administration."

"RELIEVED, I think is the proper phrase for me and most of the people who were concerned about the attention and time that was being used up by the Lance affair," said U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th.

"Whether Lance was innocent or guilty, or could have defended himself against the charges became almost of secondary importance to the fact that he couldn't be effective in the office.

"The president pays a high price for emphasizing morality and integrity as he did in the opening days of his presidency. That is why the Lance affair took on such high priority with the American people," Mikva said.

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, said, "I think the President really had very little choice but to accept the resignation unless he was going to suffer the continuous erosion of the American people's confidence in him."

Recent poll results show Carter's credibility was being damaged by the allegations against Lance and that a slight majority of the American people thought Lance ought to resign, Crane said.

"Lance would have been seriously handicapped if he had tried to continue," he said.

CARTER CONCEDED his own credibility might have been hurt by the Lance controversy and acknowledged he was slightly diverted from his presidential responsibilities at the height of the controversy. He said government did not suffer.

Carter said his standards for government employes remains high and "I don't think any blame should accrue to Bert Lance for having acted improperly or lowering the standards of our government."

He said he has not thought about a successor, and does not known when his friend will return to Georgia.

Lance was at his Georgetown home during the news conference. After it was over, his wife, LaBelle, told reporters waiting outside Lance would have no further comment. She said she had advised her husband not to resign but accepted his decision.

"He's honest and good and I'm proud of him," she said.

CARTER PROMISED an "orderly transition" in the budget office, but said, "I've not thought about a successor because the vacancy has just become apparent to me."

But because OMB is "an extension of the Oval Office," the abilities of Lance's immediate subordinates are well known, Carter said. "They are highly competent," he said. "They've been chose by him and me, or are long-time professionals there."

The interim head of OMB will be James McIntyre, current deputy director, who came to Washington after serving as Georgia budget director.

In Georgia, McIntyre pushed the zero-base budgeting concept being implemented by the administration.

McIntyre's top aide is Bowman Cutter, a former assistant to the president of the Washington Post Co., who has daily responsibility for putting together the fiscal 1979 budget.

Another high ranking OMB official is Harrison Wellford, a former legislative assistant to the late Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., who oversees Carter's efforts to reorganize the federal bureaucracy and make it more efficient.

Lance never was known as a detail man, leaving much of the nuts-and-bolts operation to McIntyre even before his financial problems began to overwhelm him.

Bankers welcome Lance resignation

think the financial community is unhappy with Lance leaving because he represented a strong conservative voice in the administration."

A UPI SURVEY indicated the general reaction of banking officials favored Lance's departure.

Carl A. Schmitt, California's banking commissioner, said, "I think the resignation was called for." He said Lance's banking activities involved "some rather gross practices."

Colorado Banking Comr. Harry Bloom said,

"I don't think a lot of people had a lot of confidence in him."

John Eng, chairman of the House Financial Institutions Committee of Washington State, said, "Clean government, especially the look of clean government, is very important these days. It's probably better that he resign because the important thing right now is the assurance to the public that officials are clean without any doubt."

CAROL KIEBALA has learned to laugh with her talking friend in the refrigerator. The device, Your Diet Conscience, is her invention and has helped her shed 12 pounds in three months by merely chastising her each time she opens the door, discouraging in-between meal nibbling.

Mouthy refrigerator curbs chEATer

by LUISA GINNETTI

You say you've tried every diet known to man but no matter what you do, the pounds continue to cling like a slip full of static electricity?

And you've reached the point where you're convinced fate has you destined for lifetime membership at the nearest fat farm?

Well take heart, chubby, there may be hope for you.

Carol Kiebala, 1040 Partridge Dr., Palatine, has suffered with you and knows the agony of fighting the calorie battle. But she's found a way to beat the bulges with a by 4-inch talking plastic invention called "Your Diet Conscience."

THE DEVICE IS INSTALLED in the refrigerator and is triggered when the door is opened, in the same way the refrigerator light is turned on.

And if you have any intention of grabbing that extra piece of chicken, "Your Diet Conscience" definitely will make you think twice.

"You're eating again," a shrill voice with a diabolical laugh shouts. "No wonder you're getting fat."

Or, "Close the door, it's getting warm." And how about "Don't forget to turn out the light."

How can anyone eat with those constant taunts?

That's the principle behind the device and Mrs. Kiebala said it has been the most successful way to get her to stop nibbling that she's ever tried.

"I'M ALWAYS DIETING and I remember telling my husband if there would only be someone in the refrigerator telling me to stop every time I opened the door, it would probably be the best thing," she said.

She decided the idea was not as crazy as it sounded and after reading an advertisement two years ago about a company which helps people get their inventions on the market, she made a prototype.

The device was made with the voice tape from her daughter's toy talking telephone, masking tape and a foundue stick which triggered the device when the refrigerator door opened.

The company which agreed to help the 35-year-old inventor with her product, Lawrence Peska Associates, Chicago, commissioned marketing studies to test the sale potential of the product. They found the market was ripe for such a device and also found a manufacturer to produce it.

Mrs. Kiebala said she's had the device in her refrigerator and pantry for three months and during that time the attractive brunet has shed 12 pounds from her 5-foot 9-inch frame.

THE DEVICE AT THE moment is available only by mail for $6.95 plus $1 for postage and handling, but Mrs. Kiebala said plans are in the works to begin retail sales.

The product began selling six weeks ago and Mrs. Kiebala said about 2,000 have been sold. "I've gotten letters from people who say it's wonderful and others who ask for us not to wait for their checks to clear but to send it right away."

She said she is becoming used to the male voice on the 15-second record which plays in the battery operated device. "At first I didn't like it," she said, adding she has no idea who the speaker is. "But I'm becoming more aware of it being in there and I'm beginning to laugh with him."

Mrs. Kiebala said her husband, Leo, has been very supportive throughout the venture and has encouraged her to try to market her idea.

"HE TOLD ME TO do the best I can so he can retire," she said. "We had planned to buy a sailboat this summer and we had it all picked out but when this started going we needed money for it. Now when our friends ask my husband what happened to his sailboat, he takes them to the refrigerator and opens the door."

Mrs. Kiebala said she always was convinced the product would be effective and she said it has been a definite help to her. "I took it out of the refrigerator for one day and I found myself nibbling on cheese," she said. She said the male voice probably is more effective than a female voice because women dieters will be more conscious of reacting to a male voice.

Mrs. Kiebala, whose weight has fluctuated from a low of 130 pounds to a high of 205 pounds when she was pregnant, said she hopes to shed another 10 pounds with the help of the "talking taunter."

"The people at Peska think it's a great idea and some of them are talking about it being another pet rock," she said.

$2,000 camera theft is bad news for Bill Kurtis

• WBBM-TV news anchorman Bill Kurtis was fit to be tied on his birthday Wednesday. He discovered an estimated $2,000 worth of camera equipment and $300 in cash were stolen from his station wagon the night before. The car was parked on Erie Street near the Channel 2 studios. The theft occurred while Kurtis was doing the early and late evening newscasts.

Public's 'advice': close nude beach

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Shocked supporters of naked swimming at the only public beach in the nation where nudity is legal said Wednesday they would try to persuade the city council to ignore a voters' decision to end the "no-swimsuit option."

Voters Tuesday approved a referendum proposition to require the city council to outlaw sunbathing in the buff at all city beaches, including widely publicized Black's Beach, where nude bathers have been the rule for the past three years.

"We had expected to win, I want you to know," said David Law, a member of and fund-raiser for the Nude Beaches Committee. "Losing is a big shock."

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN Robert Jacobs called the vote merely an "advisory" to the council. He said an effort would be made to persuade the council not to repeal the ordinance allowing nudity on a 900-foot strip of Black's Beach. The percentage of voters favoring the proposition was about 55-45.

"It's not a landslide, but it's not a squeaker," Jacobs said. "I can't second guess the council, but I'm confident."

Law also said court action to retain the nude beach was a possibility.

Stanwood Johnson, who headed the campaign to ban nudity, said, "The people of San Diego have spoken and now it's up to the city council to act."

PREELECTION opinion polls showed up to 58 per cent of city residents favored keeping nudity legal at Black's Beach, but opponents of sunbathing in the buff responded vigorously with allegations that the nude beach spawned crime and lewdness and ultimately would saddle taxpayers with undue expense.

Nudity supporters contended the issue was one of freedom, not crime or costs.

The stretch of Black's Beach in question was designated "swimsuit optional" by the council in 1974, when lawyers advised members that a total ban on nudity probably would not survive a court challenge.

As many as 43,000 people a day have walked the mile and a half from the nearest beachlevel parking or have climbed down the 350-foot cliff overlooking the beach to use it or look at its users.

Percy backs more SST landing rights

senator did not address the problem of noise from the SST.

In London, a parliamentary advisory committee said Wednesday that manufacturing costs for the Concorde are so high that future production of the plane is doomed.

"THERE APPEARS TO be no practical possibility of production beyond the 16 aircraft being authorized," the Public Accounts Committee said in a report on the Anglo-French aircraft. The report is not in any way binding on the British or French governments.

"Current manufacturing costs exceed the escalated sale price to British Airways by so large an amount that even with a substantial new order, considerable losses would result," the report said.

British Airways has five Concordes in service and Air France four. Two have been optioned to Iran and Five that are being built have not been sold.

The committee said the British taxpayer would have to pay about $348 million in losses on the present limited production program, plus their $800 million share of development costs.

These losses "would increase substantially if the five remaining unsold aircraft could not be sold at a price ... fully escalated for increased (inflation) costs," the report said.

A major problem for the makers of the Concorde has been the refusal of the New York Port Authority to allow the airliner to land at Kennedy Airport, despite a federal decision to allow commercial flights for a limited period to conduct noise tests.

The interim head of OMB will be James McIntyre, current deputy director, who came to Washington after serving as Georgia budget director.

In Georgia, McIntyre pushed the zero-base budgeting concept being implemented by the administration.

McIntyre's top aide is Bowman Cutter, a former assistant to the president of the Washington Post Co., who has daily responsibility for putting together the fiscal 1979 budget.

Another high ranking OMB official is Harrison Wellford, a former legislative assistant to the late Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., who oversees Carter's efforts to reorganize the federal bureaucracy and make it more efficient.

Lance never was known as a detail man, leaving much of the nuts-and-bolts operation to McIntyre even before his financial problems began to overwhelm him.

Bankers welcome Lance resignation

think the financial community is unhappy with Lance leaving because he represented a strong conservative voice in the administration."

A UPI SURVEY indicated the general reaction of banking officials favored Lance's departure.

Carl A. Schmitt, California's banking commissioner, said, "I think the resignation was called for." He said Lance's banking activities involved "some rather gross practices."

Colorado Banking Comr. Harry Bloom said,

"I don't think a lot of people had a lot of confidence in him."

John Eng, chairman of the House Financial Institutions Committee of Washington State, said, "Clean government, especially the look of clean government, is very important these days. It's probably better that he resign because the important thing right now is the assurance to the public that officials are clean without any doubt."

Mouthy refrigerator curbs chEATer

by LUISA GINNETTI

You say you've tried every diet known to man but no matter what you do, the pounds continue to cling like a slip full of static electricity?

And you've reached the point where you're convinced fate has you destined for lifetime membership at the nearest fat farm?

Well take heart, chubby, there may be hope for you.

Carol Kiebala, 1040 Partridge Dr., Palatine, has suffered with you and knows the agony of fighting the calorie battle. But she's found a way to beat the bulges with a by 4-inch talking plastic invention called "Your Diet Conscience."

THE DEVICE IS INSTALLED in the refrigerator and is triggered when the door is opened, in the same way the refrigerator light is turned on.

And if you have any intention of grabbing that extra piece of chicken, "Your Diet Conscience" definitely will make you think twice.

"You're eating again," a shrill voice with a diabolical laugh shouts. "No wonder you're getting fat."

Or, "Close the door, it's getting warm." And how about "Don't forget to turn out the light."

How can anyone eat with those constant taunts?

That's the principle behind the device and Mrs. Kiebala said it has been the most successful way to get her to stop nibbling that she's ever tried.

"I'M ALWAYS DIETING and I remember telling my husband if there would only be someone in the refrigerator telling me to stop every time I opened the door, it would probably be the best thing," she said.

She decided the idea was not as crazy as it sounded and after reading an advertisement two years ago about a company which helps people get their inventions on the market, she made a prototype.

The device was made with the voice tape from her daughter's toy talking telephone, masking tape and a foundue stick which triggered the device when the refrigerator door opened.

The company which agreed to help the 35-year-old inventor with her product, Lawrence Peska Associates, Chicago, commissioned marketing studies to test the sale potential of the product. They found the market was ripe for such a device and also found a manufacturer to produce it.

Mrs. Kiebala said she's had the device in her refrigerator and pantry for three months and during that time the attractive brunet has shed 12 pounds from her 5-foot 9-inch frame.

THE DEVICE AT THE moment is available only by mail for $6.95 plus $1 for postage and handling, but Mrs. Kiebala said plans are in the works to begin retail sales.

The product began selling six weeks ago and Mrs. Kiebala said about 2,000 have been sold. "I've gotten letters from people who say it's wonderful and others who ask for us not to wait for their checks to clear but to send it right away."

She said she is becoming used to the male voice on the 15-second record which plays in the battery operated device. "At first I didn't like it," she said, adding she has no idea who the speaker is. "But I'm becoming more aware of it being in there and I'm beginning to laugh with him."

Mrs. Kiebala said her husband, Leo, has been very supportive throughout the venture and has encouraged her to try to market her idea.

"HE TOLD ME TO do the best I can so he can retire," she said. "We had planned to buy a sailboat this summer and we had it all picked out but when this started going we needed money for it. Now when our friends ask my husband what happened to his sailboat, he takes them to the refrigerator and opens the door."

Mrs. Kiebala said she always was convinced the product would be effective and she said it has been a definite help to her. "I took it out of the refrigerator for one day and I found myself nibbling on cheese," she said. She said the male voice probably is more effective than a female voice because women dieters will be more conscious of reacting to a male voice.

Mrs. Kiebala, whose weight has fluctuated from a low of 130 pounds to a high of 205 pounds when she was pregnant, said she hopes to shed another 10 pounds with the help of the "talking taunter."

"The people at Peska think it's a great idea and some of them are talking about it being another pet rock," she said.

$2,000 camera theft is bad news for Bill Kurtis

• WBBM-TV news anchorman Bill Kurtis was fit to be tied on his birthday Wednesday. He discovered an estimated $2,000 worth of camera equipment and $300 in cash were stolen from his station wagon the night before. The car was parked on Erie Street near the Channel 2 studios. The theft occurred while Kurtis was doing the early and late evening newscasts.

Public's 'advice': close nude beach

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Shocked supporters of naked swimming at the only public beach in the nation where nudity is legal said Wednesday they would try to persuade the city council to ignore a voters' decision to end the "no-swimsuit option."

Voters Tuesday approved a referendum proposition to require the city council to outlaw sunbathing in the buff at all city beaches, including widely publicized Black's Beach, where nude bathers have been the rule for the past three years.

"We had expected to win, I want you to know," said David Law, a member of and fund-raiser for the Nude Beaches Committee. "Losing is a big shock."

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN Robert Jacobs called the vote merely an "advisory" to the council. He said an effort would be made to persuade the council not to repeal the ordinance allowing nudity on a 900-foot strip of Black's Beach. The percentage of voters favoring the proposition was about 55-45.

"It's not a landslide, but it's not a squeaker," Jacobs said. "I can't second guess the council, but I'm confident."

Law also said court action to retain the nude beach was a possibility.

Stanwood Johnson, who headed the campaign to ban nudity, said, "The people of San Diego have spoken and now it's up to the city council to act."

PREELECTION opinion polls showed up to 58 per cent of city residents favored keeping nudity legal at Black's Beach, but opponents of sunbathing in the buff responded vigorously with allegations that the nude beach spawned crime and lewdness and ultimately would saddle taxpayers with undue expense.

Nudity supporters contended the issue was one of freedom, not crime or costs.

The stretch of Black's Beach in question was designated "swimsuit optional" by the council in 1974, when lawyers advised members that a total ban on nudity probably would not survive a court challenge.

As many as 43,000 people a day have walked the mile and a half from the nearest beachlevel parking or have climbed down the 350-foot cliff overlooking the beach to use it or look at its users.

senator did not address the problem of noise from the SST.

In London, a parliamentary advisory committee said Wednesday that manufacturing costs for the Concorde are so high that future production of the plane is doomed.

"THERE APPEARS TO be no practical possibility of production beyond the 16 aircraft being authorized," the Public Accounts Committee said in a report on the Anglo-French aircraft. The report is not in any way binding on the British or French governments.

"Current manufacturing costs exceed the escalated sale price to British Airways by so large an amount that even with a substantial new order, considerable losses would result," the report said.

British Airways has five Concordes in service and Air France four. Two have been optioned to Iran and Five that are being built have not been sold.

The committee said the British taxpayer would have to pay about $348 million in losses on the present limited production program, plus their $800 million share of development costs.

These losses "would increase substantially if the five remaining unsold aircraft could not be sold at a price ... fully escalated for increased (inflation) costs," the report said.

A major problem for the makers of the Concorde has been the refusal of the New York Port Authority to allow the airliner to land at Kennedy Airport, despite a federal decision to allow commercial flights for a limited period to conduct noise tests.

Scoutmaster found guilty in molesting

An assistant scoutmaster of the Boy Scouts was found guilty Wednesday of taking indecent liberties with an 11-year-old boy at the Thunderbird Youth Camp during a weekend outing last June Charles Fugate, 22, Chicago, was found guilty by DuPage County Circuit Court Judge J.J. Bowman after a bench trial. The scout, also from Chicago, testified Tuesday Fugate molested him after taking him into a tent where scoutmaster Patrick Weglarz, 26, and another scout were looking at obscene pictures. Weglarz is scheduled to stand trial later. Sentencing for Fugate was set for Oct. 12.

Impostor identified as robber

A male model, hired by two Joliet lawyers to pose as the defendant in a robbery trial, was identified as the robber by three witnesses to the crime. But the judge apparently was not impressed. Will County Circuit Court Judge Michael Orenic ordered the two lawyers Tuesday to appear in court Oct. 3 and explain why they should not be held in contempt of court. The three witnesses on Sept. 6 identified the model, who was sitting at the defense table, as the man they saw rob the Country Mart grocery store in Crete last Jan. 24.

The witnesses — the store owner, a clerk and a customer — had earlier pointed out the real defendant in a police lineup. "We did it to attack their identification," attorney Louis Bertani said. Bertani and Martin Rudman are representing Chester Gow, 44, New Lenox, on an armed robbery charge. The model sat quietly at the defense table while witness after witness identified him as the robber. Meanwhile, the real defendant sat in the back of the courtroom disguised in a wig, a thick-black mustache and glasses.

Suspect captured after chase

A man suspected of critically wounding a Milwaukee motorist and then shooting at police during a high-speed, two-state chase was captured early Wednesday along U.S. Rte. 41, northwest of Waukegan, police said. The suspect, Alan T. Strube, 29, Greenfield, Wis., drove up to 100 miles per hour in the chase that ended when he crashed into a tree. He fled into a cornfield and was captured about seven hours later by Lake County sheriff's police. Strube was taken to St. Therese Hospital for treatment of injuries suffered in the crash.

A police spokesman in Milwaukee said the suspect was believed to have pulled up at a stop sign Tuesday night and fired at a couple in the car next to him. The bullet pierced the door of the car, wounding Ronald Bezie, 41, Milwaukee. Bezie was listed in critical condition after surgery at a Milwaukee hospital. His wife, Janet, 39, was uninjured.

More student loans may be available

Students may find it easier to get educational loans under a bill signed Wednesday by Gov. James R. Thompson. The bill (H1789), sponsored by Rep. Michael Brady, D-Chicago, creates the Illinois Designated Account Purchase Program to take over problem loans from lending institutions. Institutions should therefore be more willing to increase their student loan portfolios, Thompson said. The Illinois State Scholarship Commission will administer the program.

Thompson also approved a bill (H679) which gives non-voting student members of state university governing boards the right to make motions and attend executive meetings. In other action, Thompson approved bills (H1002) making obscene telephone calls punishable by up to six months in jail and a $500 fine; (S968) allowing crime victims to receive court-ordered monetary compensation for property loss or damage; and (S350) expanding the role of physician assistants.

U of I requests $34 million

University of Illinois trustees Wednesday voted to seek $34 million more for the 1978-79 school year budget. Trustees also approved the appointment of William P. Gerberding as chancellor of the Champaign-Urbana campus. The U of I's budget request for the coming year totals more than $321 million. It includes a 10 per cent pay raise for university employes, expanded evening classes and a recruitment program for minorities and women at the Chicago Circle campus. Gerberding, 48, who comes from UCLA, will begin his new post Jan. 1. He succeeds Jack Peltason, who has resigned to become president of the ...erican Council on Education.

Harper management report results to be aired tonight

A potentially sensitive report on the results of a three-month, $10,000 study of the Harper College administration will be publicly aired for the first time at 8 p.m. today.

The report, to be presented in Room 106, Building E, on the Harper campus, will focus on the management of the college and interrelationships between Harper's president, administrators and board of trustees.

Board members and school officials have been briefed on the findings, but no one has seen the written version, which will be delivered by consultant Max Tadlock when he arrives at the college today.

Board members have confided the report could be "innocuous" or explosive, depending on whether Tadlock stresses the negative or the positive, and have expressed uneasiness that they will not see the document until just before tonight's meeting.

THE LATE RELEASE of the report may require a second meeting with Tadlock because the board will not have enough time to "digest" the material and zero in on their questions, Board Chairwoman Shirley Munson said Wednesday.

Part of the suspense over the report has arisen because of the unexpected response of Harper staff members and faculty to Tadlock's study. While only board members and about 30 administrators originally were scheduled for interviews, another 90 persons volunteered to talk with the consultant. Tadlock has said he "never anticipated" that kind of response.

Management audits of Harper's various departments are routine, but this is the first time in the school's 12-year history an audit has focused on the administration. The study was commissioned in June by the board of trustees, which since the April school board election has consisted of a majority of members critical of Harper Pres. Robert E. Lahti.

'Landlord's market' faces renters

by NANCY GOTLER

The two-bedroom Arlington Heights apartment isn't much, but to Joanne Rugerri it is a symbol that she has survived.

Survived desertion by her husband, loss of her home, unemployment and a year on welfare.

But now, because she testified against the apartment manager in an assault case, Mrs. Rugerri and her three children are being forced to move from Country Club Apartments, 16 E. Lillian Ave., when their lease expires next month.

And after five years as tenants, there is nothing the Ruggeris legally can do, area attorneys and officials say.

The Rugerris' plight is one example of what some area officials see as a growing number of unexplained evictions and lease nonrenewals.

Landlords involved in recent cases in the area refuse to say why tenants were forced from their apartments.

SOME LOCAL administrators say the problem is aggravated by high occupancy rates, making it " a landlord's market." Others contend increased awareness of tenants' rights has led to more cases being publicized.

"More and more we're getting complaints from tenants who won't identify themselves because they fear retaliation if the landlord finds out," Dan Tarry, Arlington Heights environmental health officer, said. "Now I'm beginning to think there may be some merit to their fears."

George Kyprianidis complained to Arlington Heights officials last winter about lack of heat, a broken water tank, broken drapery rods and doors and the need for freshly painted walls.

This month, after four years of living with his wife and three sons in the Brandenberry Park East Apartments, 2424 E. Oakton St., Kyprianidis was given one week's notice and no explanation why his lease would not be renewed.

IN A SIMILAR case, Yvonne Herron, of Palatine Township was told in April by the management of Arrowhead Village Apartments, 1912 Cambridge Ct., that her lease would not be renewed after she applied for a low-income housing certificate through the compelx.

And Mrs. Rugerri was notified earlier this month that she must move by Oct. 31 after testifying in April against manager Oskar Starick, whom she saw strike a young boy last year. Starick was found guilty of misdemeanor assault and placed under supervision of the court for one year.

Although most cities and villages have ordinances against outright racial discrimination and violation of health and building codes, local officials say they usually do not become involved in land-lord-tenant problems.

Palatine Village Mgr. Anton Harwig, Rolling Meadows City Mgr. Thomas Palmer and Arlington Heights Pros. Atty. Ernest Blomquist all said a lease is a private agreement between landlord and tenant and not a public matter unless health or building laws are violated. Others agreed.

"BECAUSE WE consider it a private matter we normally don't get involved," Buffalo Grove Pros. Atty. Ron Sandler said.

When a leaste is not renewed, the landlord is not required to give the tenant a reason or advance notice for the decision, said Joel Sideman, managing attorney for the federally-funded Cook County Legal Assistance Assn. in Evanston.

"Unless it can be proven the lease was not renewed because of racial discrimination, children in the family or complaints made by the tenant, not a whole lot can be done," he said.

"Like any other private contract, when it expires the landlord is just as free not to renew it as a tenant," Sideman said.

Some landords, like Baird and Warner Inc. real estate company, which manages 1,800 apartment, condominium and commercial units in the Northwest suburbs, have strict policies to protect their tenants.

"When a tenant is evicted or a lease not renewed there is always justification, it's not just based on personalities," Marilyn McGee, Northwest suburban branch maager, said. "We're not ogres. The tenant has definite rights spelled out in our lease."

But, she said, if a violation of the lease continues after a warning and sufficient time to correct the situation, a tenant will be evicted or his lease not renewed.

Grounds for that action include keeping a pet when one is not allowed or disturbing neighbors, and at least 30 days notice is always given, she said.

"We have rules and we have to protect ourselves, too," she said.

Despite those policies by some landlords, officials say the number of renters forced out of their apartments is growing.

Michael Raimondi, executive director of the Northwest Opportunity Center in Arlington Heights, said "quite a few" of the area residents asking for legal assistance at the center are having problems with a landlord.

"It's (eviction and nonrenewal of leases) a common problem and happens pretty regularly," Raimondi said. "And if discrimination is involved, it sometimes is hard to prove."

The problem is aggravated by the fact that it is a "landlord's market," Tarry said.

Studies completed several months ago show a 95 per cent occupancy rate of Arlington Heights apartments and Tarry said the level is similar in other nearby suburbs.

"THAT DOES MAKE a difference because when a landlord knows other renters are available he can be more selective about who to rent to if he wants to be," Tarry said.

One solution giving tenants more legal leverage and preventing misunderstandings is a land-lord tenant ordinance similar to ones passed by Evanston and Peoria two years ago, Sideman said.

weeks, cafeteria manager Betty Shaw said.

ONE HUNDRED sophomores will be surveyed during each phase concerning how many times they eat at school per week and what they think of the food and the cafeteria atmosphere, she said.

For one week during each phase, personnel from an independent opinion research group will tag the trays of 50 sophomores as they leave the lunch line and weigh the leftover food when the trays are returned.

Mrs. Shaw said she already knows from experience that there will be more food left on the trays when students have to take all five Type A lunch components than when they have to take only three.

"WE NOTICED A lot less waste since we started the (amended version) last year, but I guess the real story will be at the end of the testing," she said.

If food was wasted in the past it was usually vegetables, but now if students don't like the vegetable being served they simply don't take it, she said.

"By the time kids reach high school they have definite likes and dislikes and they're old enough to decide what they want to eat," Mrs. Shaw said. "The Type A lunch is supposed to provide a balanced meal with one-third of the minimum daily requirements, but if kids are putting vegetables on their plates, but not eating them, they're still not getting the nutritional value they're supposed to."

By and large, food waste in high school cafeterias is not nearly as great as most people believe, Harper said.

Suspect charged in gas station theft

A Chicago man has been charged with the theft of $101 in cash late Tuesday from the Shell station at 406 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

Police waid that after purchasing gas, the man snuck into the office and took the money from the register when the attendant was distracted.

The man, Roger R. Scott, 29, of Chicago, was charged with theft by deception after he was apprehended by Palatine police.

Scott was released on $1,000 bond and is to appear at 9 a.m. Oct. 14 in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

'Landlord's market' faces renters

by NANCY GOTLER

The two-bedroom Arlington Heights apartment isn't much, but to Joanne Rugerri it is a symbol that she has survived.

Survived desertion by her husband, loss of her home, unemployment and a year on welfare.

But now, because she testified against the apartment manager in an assault case, Mrs. Rugerri and her three children are being forced to move from Country Club Apartments, 16 E. Lillian Ave., when their lease expires next month.

And after five years as tenants, there is nothing the Ruggeris legally can do, area attorneys and officials say.

The Rugerris' plight is one example of what some area officials see as a growing number of unexplained evictions and lease nonrenewals.

Landlords involved in recent cases in the area refuse to say why tenants were forced from their apartments.

SOME LOCAL administrators say the problem is aggravated by high occupancy rates, making it " a landlord's market." Others contend increased awareness of tenants' rights has led to more cases being publicized.

"More and more we're getting complaints from tenants who won't identify themselves because they fear retaliation if the landlord finds out," Dan Tarry, Arlington Heights environmental health officer, said. "Now I'm beginning to think there may be some merit to their fears."

George Kyprianidis complained to Arlington Heights officials last winter about lack of heat, a broken water tank, broken drapery rods and doors and the need for freshly painted walls.

This month, after four years of living with his wife and three sons in the Brandenberry Park East Apartments, 2424 E. Oakton St., Kyprianidis was given one week's notice and no explanation why his lease would not be renewed.

IN A SIMILAR case, Yvonne Herron, of Palatine Township was told in April by the management of Arrowhead Village Apartments, 1912 Cambridge Ct., that her lease would not be renewed after she applied for a low-income housing certificate through the compelx.

And Mrs. Rugerri was notified earlier this month that she must move by Oct. 31 after testifying in April against manager Oskar Starick, whom she saw strike a young boy last year. Starick was found guilty of misdemeanor assault and placed under supervision of the court for one year.

Although most cities and villages have ordinances against outright racial discrimination and violation of health and building codes, local officials say they usually do not become involved in land-lord-tenant problems.

Palatine Village Mgr. Anton Harwig, Rolling Meadows City Mgr. Thomas Palmer and Arlington Heights Pros. Atty. Ernest Blomquist all said a lease is a private agreement between landlord and tenant and not a public matter unless health or building laws are violated. Others agreed.

"BECAUSE WE consider it a private matter we normally don't get involved," Buffalo Grove Pros. Atty. Ron Sandler said.

When a leaste is not renewed, the landlord is not required to give the tenant a reason or advance notice for the decision, said Joel Sideman, managing attorney for the federally-funded Cook County Legal Assistance Assn. in Evanston.

Israeli units push into Lebanon

raelis had declared the Kfar Kila area a "military zone" and barred Lebanese from entering it.

Israeli jets flew reconnaisance missions over the battle zones, directing artillery fire, as Israeli long-range guns poured barrages into Palestinian positions, particularly at the guerrilla stronghold of Khiam.

Palestinians responded with two rocket attacks on the Israeli town of Safed.

The bombardments of 122mm Soviet-made Katyusha rockets screamed into the Safed area, about nine miles south of the Lebanese border, an hour apart. The first slightly wounded two persons and caused some damage, the Israeli military command said. The second hit in Ramat Alma, a village just north of the town and caused neither casualties nor damage.

ISRAELI ARTILLERY returned the fire.

It marked the first such Palestinian attack since Jan. 12, 1976, when the Lebanese civil war erupted. The attack came on the eve of the solemn Jewish Yom Kippur holiday, four years on the Hebrew calendar since the outbreak of the last Middle East war.

The Palestinians said they had repulsed a Christian attack on Khiam during the night. But asked how long he thought the Palestinians could hold out in Khiam under Israeli fire and with Christian forces to the north cutting off the town's supply lines, PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi said simply, "Let's hope."

Labadi said PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat had sent urgent messages appealing for support from Arab leaders, but added that so far "there have been no offers of material support."

"The Palestinians are fighting alone with their Lebanese (leftist) allies," he said.

ISRAEL MILITARY officials refused to confirm or deny Israeli involvement in the fighting. "There has been no substantial change in the Israeli position of supplying artillery and humanitarian aid for the Christian forces," a spokesman said.

The rocket attack on Safed came after witnesses said they saw Israeli troops returning from Lebanese territory near the scene of the fighting.

One missile slammed through a building and collapsed the roof before blowing up in the kitchen of a woman who was preparing a chicken for the last meal before the fast.

"It's a miracle, a miracle for Yom Kippur," her husband told reporters at the scene.

Another rocket damaged four cars but nearby pedestrians were unhurt and a third set fire to a field outside of the town.

The only injured were a man and a woman who were released after treatment at a local hospital. The housewife with the chicken was hospitalized for shock.

Protestors chant 'kill Berkowitz'

Chanting "Kill Berkowitz," some 35 friends and relatives of victims of "Son of Sam" picketed Wednesday in front of the hospital where David Berkowitz, suspected of being the .44-caliber killer, is undergoing psychiatric examination. The demonstrators outside Kings County Hospital were led by Eva Freund, whose sister Christine, 26, was shot to death last Jan. 30, 1977. Berkowitz has been charged with the murder of Miss Freund and five other young people who died in the year-long string of ambushes around the city. The 24-year-old postal worker has been held at the hospital for psychiatric tests since his capture Aug. 10 outside his suburban Yonkers, N.Y., home.

Besides Miss Freund and her family, the families of Virginia Voskerichian, 10, who also was shot to death, and Stacy Moscowitz, 20, Son of Sam's last victim, joined the march to call for the quick trial and punishment of Berkowitz. "Don't let him get away with murder so he can kill again," read a plywood sign carried by Miss Freund, 20. "I think he is guilty," Miss Freund said, "and I want him brought to trial and convicted. "He was bloodthirsty," she said. Looking toward Berkowitz' cell window she added, "Why shouldn't I want revenge?"

Jury finds Drollinger guilty

A jury of seven men and five women late Wednesday convicted Roger Drollinger on four counts of first-degree murder in the shotgun slayings of four brothers last St. Valentine's day. The jury deliberated an hour before it signaled the bailiff that it had a verdict against Drollinger, the accused ringleader of a gang that executed the brothers Feb. 14, in their Hollandsburg, Ind., trailer home.

Conviction of first-degree murder carries a mandatory life sentence. Attorneys gave no immediate indication there would be an appeal. Blackford Circuit Court Judge Bruce Bade announced sentencing would be Oct. 17, but ordered a pre-sentence investigation to be filed by Oct. 4.

Crude oil tax vote postponed

The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday postponed a vote on President Carter's unpopular crude oil tax, giving its staff time to work out a compromise with the administration on how to spend the billions of dollars it would raise. The most likely outcome appears to be a version of former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's energy development corporation, possibly combined with long-term lifting of price controls on oil. Committee members, who Tuesday killed Carter's proposed tax on gas-guzzling cars, indicated the crude oil tax would be lucky to get even one vote if taken up in its present form. The tax was designed to boost price-controlled oil — some of which is held as low as $5.25 a barrel — to the world price of about $13.31, with all the proceeds going back to the public as tax rebates. The idea would be to discourage energy use, but to return the money to the economy.

A-debris moves toward Lakes area

Radioactive debris from last week's nuclear test in China moved over the Pacific Northwest Wednesday to an altitude of about 35,000 feet and was rapidly blowing toward the Great Lakes region, the Environmental Protection Agency said. There were no reports of short term damage from the nuclear particles as they passed over Oregon, Washington, Northern California and the Intermountain region of Idaho, Nevada, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado. Scientists said the long term impact won't be assessed for several days.

"Our big concern is the weather," said an EPA spokesman in San Francisco. Rain could filter the deadly nuclear particles out of the atmosphere into the meadows and pasturelands where cattle and sheep might eat the contaminated plants. Ingested radioactive particles could be stored in the animals until slaughtered and eaten by humans, or could be transmitted into the milk of dairy cows, he said.

S. Africa cops kill black youth

Riot police in South Africa Wednesday shot and killed a 15-year-old black and wounded several others outside two churches in the Soweto ghetto following memorial services for student leader Steven Biko, witnesses said. The witnesses, other students attending the Soweto memorial services, said the police also carried jamboks — leather whips — fired rubber bullets and swung clubs at the crowds of youths who gathered to mourn the 30-year-old black power leader who died in prison last week, reportedly after a one-week hunger strike. Brig. Jan Visser, police chief in the black ghetto outside Johannesburg, said the students brought on police retaliation by hurling stones outside the churches.

Carter needs 'success': Rhodesia

A Rhodesian government minister said Wednesday President Carter is trying to bring black rule to Rhodesia because he "desperately needs a success" in foreign policy. "President Carter appears to be highly selective in regard to those areas in which he wishes to enforce his high moral principles and values," said Minister Rowan Cronje.

ISRAELI ARTILLERY returned the fire.

It marked the first such Palestinian attack since Jan. 12, 1976, when the Lebanese civil war erupted. The attack came on the eve of the solemn Jewish Yom Kippur holiday, four years on the Hebrew calendar since the outbreak of the last Middle East war.

The Palestinians said they had repulsed a Christian attack on Khiam during the night. But asked how long he thought the Palestinians could hold out in Khiam under Israeli fire and with Christian forces to the north cutting off the town's supply lines, PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi said simply, "Let's hope."

Labadi said PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat had sent urgent messages appealing for support from Arab leaders, but added that so far "there have been no offers of material support."

"The Palestinians are fighting alone with their Lebanese (leftist) allies," he said.

ISRAEL MILITAR officials refused to confirm or deny Israeli involvement in the fighting. "There has been no substantial change in the Israeli position of supplying artillery and humanitarian aid for the Christian forces," a spokesman said.

The rocket attack on Safed came after witnesses said they saw Israeli troops returning from Lebanese territory near the scene of the fighting.

One missile slammed through a building and collapsed the roof before blowing up in the kitchen of a woman who was preparing a chicken for the last meal before the fast.

"It's a miracle, a miracle for Yom Kippur," her husband told reporters at the scene.

Another rocket damaged four cars but nearby pedestrians were unhurt and a third set fire to a field outside of the town.

The only injured were a man and a woman who were released after treatment at a local hospital. The housewife with the chicken was hospitalized for shock.

Protestors chant 'kill Berkowitz'

Chanting "Kill Berkowitz," some 35 friends and relatives of victims of "Son of Sam" picketed Wednesday in front of the hospital where David Berkowitz, suspected of being the .44-caliber killer, is undergoing psychiatric examination. The demonstrators outside Kings County Hospital were led by Eva Freund, whose sister Christine, 26, was shot to death last Jan. 30, 1977. Berkowitz has been charged with the murder of Miss Freund and five other young people who died in the year-long string of ambushes around the city. The 24-year-old postal worker has been held at the hospital for psychiatric tests since his capture Aug. 10 outside his suburban Yonkers, N.Y., home.

Besides Miss Freund and her family, the families of Virginia Voskerichian, 19, who also was shot to death, and Stacy Moscowitz, 20, Son of Sam's last victim, joined the march to call for the quick trial and punishment of Berkowitz. "Don't let him get away with murder so he can kill again," read a plywood sign carried by Miss Freund, 20. "I think he is guilty," Miss Freund said, "and I want him brought to trial and convicted. "He was bloodthirsty," she said. Looking toward Berkowitz' cell window she added, "Why shouldn't I want revenge?"

Jury finds Drollinger guilty

A jury of seven men and five women late Wednesday convicted Roger Drollinger on four counts of first-degree murder in the shotgun slayings of four brothers last St. Valentine's day. The jury deliberated an hour before it signaled the bailiff that it had a verdict against Drollinger, the accused ringleader of a gang that executed the brothers Feb. 14, in their Hollandsburg, Ind., trailer home.

Conviction of first-degree murder carries a mandatory life sentence. Attorneys gave no immediate indication there would be an appeal. Blackford Circuit Court Judge Bruce Bade announced sentencing would be Oct. 17, but ordered a pre-sentence investigation to be filed by Oct. 4.

Crude oil tax vote postponed

The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday postponed a vote on President Carter's unpopular crude oil tax, giving its staff time to work out a compromise with the administration on how to spend the billions of dollars it would raise. The most likely outcome appears to be a version of former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's energy development corporation, possibly combined with long-term lifting of price controls on oil. Committee members, who Tuesday killed Carter's proposed tax on gas-guzzling cars, indicated the crude oil tax would be lucky to get even one vote if taken up in its present form. The tax was designed to boost price-controlled oil --- some of which is held as low as $5.25 a barrel — to the world price of about $13.31, with all the proceeds going back to the public as tax rebates. The idea would be to discourage energy use, but to return the money to the economy.

A-debris moves toward Lakes area

Radioactive debris from last week's nuclear test in China moved over the Pacific Northwest Wednesday to an altitude of about 35,000 feet and was rapidly blowing toward the Great Lakes region, the Environmental Protection Agency said. There were no reports of short term damage from the nuclear particles as they passed over Oregon, Washington, Northern California and the Intermountain region of Idaho, Nevada, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado. Scientists said the long term impact won't be assessed for several days.

"Our big concern is the weather," said an EPA spokesman in San Francisco. Rain could filter the deadly nuclear particles out of the atmosphere into the meadows and pasturelands where cattle and sheep might eat the contaminated plants. Ingested radioactive particles could be stored in the animals until slaughtered and eaten by humans, or could be transmitted into the milk of dairy cows, he said.

S. Africa cops kill black youth

Riot police in South Africa Wednesday shot and killed a 15-year-old black and wounded several others outside two churches in the Soweto ghetto following memorial services for student leader Steven Biko, witnesses said. The witnesses, other students attending the Soweto memorial services, said the police also carried jamboks — leather whips — fired rubber bullets and swung clubs at the crowds of youths who gathered to mourn the 30-year-old black power leader who died in prison last week, reportedly after a one-week hunger strike. Brig. Jan Visser, police chief in the black ghetto outside Johannesburg, said the students brought on police retaliation by hurling stones outside the churches.

Carter needs 'success': Rhodesia

A Rhodesian government minister said Wednesday President Carter is trying to bring black rule to Rhodesia because he "desperately needs a success" in foreign policy. "President Carter appears to be highly selective in regard to those areas in which he wishes to enforce his high moral principles and values," said Minister Rowan Cronje.

State probes care home charges

by TOM LAUE

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — State officials are investigating a Springfield nursing home charged with tolerating drug abuse and open sexual activity by staff members and grossly unsanitary conditions for patients.

An Illinois Dept. of Public Aid file on the Ridgewood Nursing Home details those charges. It also includes allegations a woman was threatened with cigaret torture, a man had urine thrown in his face, routine hygiene was ignores and a patient was allowed to have vodka in his room.

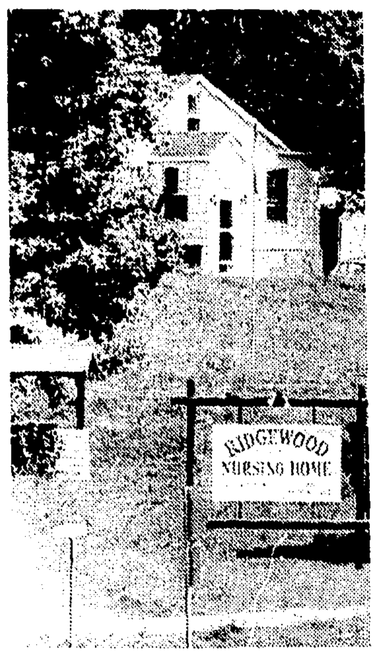
Most charges are lodged by former Ridgewood employes in signed statements given to public aid investigators late last year and examined by UPI.

STATE PUBLIC Aid and Mental Health Dept. workers also told UPI a quadrapalegic patient whose arm was broken went untreated for days and another had bedsores so severe "you could see bone and tissue on his bottom. He was just eaten raw.

Ridgewood owner John B. Rotherham vehemently denied the accusations, and in a point-by-point discussion of the charges called them "ridiculous falsehoods. I have to discount every cockeyed thing they say because Public Aid is trying to hijack our patients. They're trying to move them all out."

Ridgewood, with a capacity of 61 patients, now houses about 30, two-thirds of them welfare or mental health cases. The remainder are private patients.

Rotherham's attorney, James Drake, called the charges a "retaliatory attack going back to 1975 when we got an injunction against the Public Aid and Public Health departments because they tried to shut Ridgewood down without notice."



ACCORDING TO an Illinois Dept. of Public Aid file on the Ridgewood Nursing Home, north of Springfield, staff members took drugs intended for patients, had sex in full view of patients and gave one habitually drunk patient access to alcohol.

But Drake said statements made to Dept. of Public Aid investigators were new to him and Janet Blair, a Dept. of Public Health lawyer, said a current department probe which could cost Ridgewood its license is based on other charges.

RIDGEWOOD, RUN by Rotherham since 1960, also is the object of a Dept. of Public Aid investigation which could cut off Medicaid funds and a flap over unsanitary kitchen conditions. The Springfield Journal-Register recently reported health officials found cockroaches and rotten food in a damp pantry.

"Drugs from previous patients were kept in the medicine cabinet," a former Ridgewood nurse said. "The nursing home knew of two employes taking these drugs." She then named two nurses and said, "They would get high right at the home."

Three former Ridgewood workers alluded to sexual encounters. One said she found "an aide who was to have been on duty in bed with her ex-husband. On another occasion, an aide and an orderly were in an empty bed. Some of the patients were awake and became very upset."

Former workers also said bedpans, urinals, water pitchers and dishes all were washed together. "it was a commercial washer but it didn't get hot enough to sterilize anything," said one. Another ex-employe said enemas were performed one after another without equipment being sterilized.

The state tried to take away Medicaid funds in 1975, charging Ridgewood failed to meet standards. Sangamon County Circuit Court Judge J. Waldo Ackerman, however, issued an injunction permitting the home to remain in business. Later that year the Dept. of Public Health began license revocation proceedings.

AMONG PUBLIC Health Dept. complaints against Ridgewood then were failure to meet safety standards in two frame houses (one of which now is unused), too few trained nurses, careless handling of medicine, inadequate diets, inadequate clothing for patients, untrained cooks and unsanitary procedures.

Rotherham also denied those charges, updated during the revocation hearing, and took reporters through Ridgewood to try to refute them. He permitted no photographs, however, "because of privacy rights." Workmen were patching cracks in the pantry which no longer is used for storing food.

Drake said public aid regulations say Rotherham would lose Medicaid funds at other homes he owns if Ridgewood is "barred from the program, and that is blatantly unconstitutional." Rotherham has another home in Springfield and facilities in Kankakee, Virden, Momence and Bradley.

One man and wife with a relative at Ridgewood defended it. "We went to others, and this is the best," she said. "They treat him good. Occasionally he is dirty but they clean him up right away. All they ask in their final years is a warm, clean place and something to eat, plus a little attention. They get that here."

Commuter buses expected by Dec. 1

A target date of Dec. 1 has been set for the start of a new commuter bus service in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

A revised route for the bus service between Rolling Meadows and the two Chicago and North Western Ry. stations in Arlington Heights will be presented by Regional Transportation Authority officials at 7 p.m. Monday in Room 223 of city hall, 3600 Kirchoff Rd.

The RTA met with city and village officials in August and proposed a route that extends west of Ill. Rte. 53 to Vermont Street in Rolling Meadows, as far south as Algonquin Road and White Oak Street in Arlington Heights and as far east as Arlington Height Road.

THE BUSES WILL take commuters to Chicago and North Western Railway stations in downtown Arlington Heights and at Arlington Park.

Arlington Heights officials endorsed the route, but Rolling Meadows officials said the route would interfere with morning traffic from Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road. The original route had buses running along Owl Drive, Jay Lane and Central Road.

Police Chief Lewis Case and Assistant City Mgr. Charles Green met with RTA officials last week and the RTA agreed to change the plan to bypass the high school.

The buses will meet trains leaving the Arlington Park railway station at 6:37 a.m., 7:13 a.m., 7:56 a.m., and 8:34 a.m. and the downtown Arlington Heights station at 6:42 a.m., 7:19 a.m., 8:01 a.m. and 8:38 a.m.

THE BUSES WILL meet afternoon trains arriving at the Arlington Heights station at 5:23 p.m., 5:56 p.m., 6:25 p.m. and 7:01 p.m. and at the Arlington Park station at 5:48 p.m., 6:20 p.m. and 7:11 p.m.

The two bus routes will be operated by private companies because the RTA has a shortage of buses. The RTA is making up bid packages to send to bus companies.

Demand for the service in Rolling Meadows is uncertain. Laurie Fox of the RTA's regional affairs office for northern Cook County, said the RTA did not do studies to see if residents want the service.

"We didn't do them because we find people say yes just because they want to have the choice of taking the bus," she said. "They don't really indicate if they will take it so the study would be invalid."

But the RTA did take population studies, determined the number of monthly train ticket holders and studied the routes people take to the train stations.

Programs worry area officials

Some area township officials have voiced concern over two programs operated by the Northwest Opportunity Center in Arlington Heights, saying townships could run the programs more efficiently.

Richard Hall, Elk Grove Township supervisor, said he and fellow township officials believe the food stamp program and Head Start should be under their control.

"We're not too happy about it," Hall said Tuesday, referring to the food stamp operation. "We've gotten a lot of complaints. They range from inefficienty to people at the opportunity center being rude."

THE COMPLAINTS surfaced after a meeting Monday night of area township officials. Michael Raimondi, executive director of the Northwest Opportunity Center, said the charges are without merit and he regrets not being invited to the session to answer the critics. Representatives from Wheeling, Palatine, Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships attended.

Hall said township supervisors would try to get a change in the law that would allow the townships to administer the food stamp program.

Howard Olsen, Palatine Township supervisor, said the trustees noted the townships were billed different amounts for similar services by the Northwest Opportunity Center. The apparent discrepancy involves service charges for Head Start pupils.

Ethel Kolerus, Wheeling Township supervisor, described the variances in billing as "probably a clerical thing."

Raimondi said the difference in billing is a reflection of the different costs in each township. He said rents and space requirements in each Head Start program are different, therefore the charges vary.

"I HOPE WE can rectify the situation in the future," he said. He said he would answer any questions they have about the agency.

Some concern also was expressed for the Crisis House for Boys, a temporary home for youngsters in Arlington Heights. Although the services are available to the residents of Maine and Hanover townships, those governments have not contributed to the program, according to Vern Laubenstein, Schaumburg Township supervisor. The house is operated by Shelter Inc., another agency which cares for youngsters.

The trustees also discussed other general problems facing governments, including participation in the Northwest Municipal Conference, providing unemployment insurance for municipal employes and the financial needs of various social service agencies funded by the townships.

The dinner meeting Monday was the first of what is planned as a series of quarterly meetings for township trustees to provide a forum for discussing topics of mutual interest. The next meeting is tentatively set for January.

"We want to be sure we are addressing the needs of the community without duplicating services," Ms. Kolerus said. "We can save a lot of effort if we are together on these things."

Battery suspect's trial delayed

The trial of an Arlington Heights man charged with aggravated battery in a bizarre incident on Schaumburg Road last month was granted a two-month delay Wednesday.

Prosecutor Joe Farmar requested the trial be postponed until Nov. 16 in order to give Denise Duignan, 29, of 1522 Chatham Ln., Schaumburg, time to recover from a broken pelvis and broken knee suffered in the incident Aug. 29.

The defendant, Everett D. Correa, 29, of 427 E. Seegers Rd., Arlington Heights, requested a trial but entered no plea Wednesday in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

CORREA IS charged with aggravated battery for allegedly causing Miss Duignan's car to crash into a utility pole near Schaumburg Road and Braintree Drive on the morning of Aug. 29.

According to Schaumburg police, Miss Duignan was stopped for a traffic signal at Schaumburg Road and Salem Drive when Correa bumped her car from behind and signaled for her to pull over.

Miss Duignan told police Correa walked over to her car and handed her a note that said, "I've got a gun."

Miss Duignan told police she tried to pull away from him but that he grabbed the steering wheel and continued to hang on as she drove away. He was dragged for about a half-mile until she said she lost control of the car and smashed into a utility pole.

Throughout the brief getaway attempt, Miss Duignan told police, Correa's hand was on the steering wheel, preventing her from maintaining control of the car.

Correa appeared in court wearing a cast on his broken right arm. He was accompanied by attorney Nicholas DeJohn.

Parks name winners in tennis programs

Winners at Camelot Park were Sue Migely, Patty Migely, Lenee Wittig, Alire Kim, Jay Gaseuico, Lisa Calvin, Dawn Kasella, Debbie Ebel, Blair Pattyjohn, Tony Tanale, Sue Morris, Caryn Teder and Lynn Hallin.

At Frontier Park top finishers were Debbie Feliciano, Spencer Ely, Joy Wiedmann, Jim Klein, Ann Kjerkind, Jill Howe, Lori Fulkowski and Sue Horton.

Winners at Hasbrook Park were Steve Ludwig, Brad Schuldt, Nancy Horton and Laura Ludwig.

FIRST PLACE winners at Pioneer Park were Pat Baker, Sandy Blane, Brian Toomey, Jill Isocksen, Jim Callanan, Kevin Matz, Liz Meleko, Cathy Flores, Jim Cox, Christina Van Tassel, Tim Hathaway, Kevin Arsalanion, Joe Ticueneoand, Chip Thor and Leonard Van Tassel.

Winners at Heritage Park were Sue Hodgron, Kelly Clark, Kathy Livingston, Eric Joansen, Kris Affleck and Mike Ryan.

Monaco's fined for sales to minor

Monaco Drugs and Liquors, 1828 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights, has received a $500 fine and five-day suspension of its liquor license for selling beer to a 16-year-old youth.

The fine and suspension were ordered this week by Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who serves as the village's liquor commissioner, after Lorado T. Monaco entered a plea of guilty to the charge of selling two six-packs of beer to the minor.

Monaco's suspension will be in effect from noon Sunday to noon Sept. 30.

Monaco was fined $250 in February and was fined $300 in March 1973 for similar violations.

Commuter buses expected by Dec. 1

A target date of Dec. 1 has been set for the start of a new commuter bus service in Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights.

A revised route for the bus service between Rolling Meadows and the two Chicago and North Western Ry. stations in Arlington Heights will be presented by Regional Transportation Authority officials at 7 p.m. Monday in Room 223 of city hall, 3600 Kirchoff Rd.

The RTA met with city and village officials in August and proposed a route that extends west of Ill. Rte. 53 to Vermont Street in Rolling Meadows, as far south as Algonquin Road and White Oak Street in Arlington Heights and as far east as Arlington Height Road.

THE BUSES WILL take commuters to Chicago and North Western Railway stations in downtown Arlington Heights and at Arlington Park.

Arlington Heights officials endorsed the route, but Rolling Meadows officials said the route would interfere with morning traffic from Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road. The original route had buses running along Owl Drive, Jay Lane and Central Road.

Police Chief Lewis Case and Assistant City Mgr. Charles Green met with RTA officials last week and the RTA agreed to change the plan to bypass the high school.

The buses will meet trains leaving the Arlington Park railway station at 6:37 a.m., 7:13 a.m., 7:56 a.m., and 8:34 a.m. and the downtown Arlington Heights station at 6:42 a.m., 7:19 a.m., 8:01 a.m. and 8:38 a.m.

THE BUSES WILL meet afternoon trains arriving at the Arlington Heights station at 5:23 p.m., 5:56 p.m., 6:25 p.m. and 7:01 p.m. and at the Arlington Park station at 5:48 p.m., 6:20 p.m. and 7:11 p.m.

The two bus routes will be operated by private companies because the RTA has a shortage of buses. The RTA is making up bid packages to send to bus companies.

Demand for the service in Rolling Meadows is uncertain. Laurie Fox of the RTA's regional affairs office for northern Cook County, said the RTA did not do studies to see if residents want the service.

"We didn't do them because we find people say yes just because they want to have the choice of taking the bus," she said. "They don't really indicate if they will take it so the study would be invalid."

But the RTA did take population studies, determined the number of monthly train ticket holders and studied the routes people take to the train stations.

Administration asks changes in postal service

From Daily Herald News Services

The Carter administration wants Congress to return to the President the power to appoint a postmaster general.

The post now is filled by the Postal Service Board of Governors, which is named by presidents for staggered terms. Presidents named postmasters general before Congress passed the Postal Reform Act of 1970 with the aim of insulating the mail service from politics.

W. Bowman Cutter of the Office of Management and Budget told a joint meeting of two House subcommittees Tuesday the administration believes the president should name the official to a fixed term subject to Senate confirmation.

CUTTER ALSO proposed giving the head of the Postal Service increased "managerial autonomy" in deciding such policy matters as Saturday deliveries.

Some features of legislation before the subcommittees prompted opposition by Cutter, including provisions to do away with the board of governors, giving Congress veto power over postal rate hikes and increasing Postal Service subsidies.

"Increasing the public service subsidy and tying it to a fixed percentage not only undercuts the principle of selfsufficient," he said, "it establishes conditions under which postal management will be less inclined to seek ways for incrasing efficiency in the postal system and reducing costs."

REACTIONS TO the proposals were mixed by Northwest suburban postmasters.

Robert Magnah, postmaster for Bartlett, Hanover Park and Streamwood, said, "I think basically I'd be in favor of things staying the way they are."

Magnah said he opposed elimination of the board of governments and presidential appointments of postmasters general.

"Naturally they (the board) had their problems, but it's nothing like the way we had it with the old politics," Magnah said.

He said benefits of the present system include improved salaries, benefits, work conditions and efficiency of postal employes, and upward advancement within the postal service on the basis of merit, rather than political favors.

DON SWANSON, postmaster for Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village and Rolling Meadows, voiced different opinions.

"It's my understanding the present postal service in Washington is not adverse to returning this (appointments of postmasters general) to the Cabinet," Swanson said. "It would hold the postmaster general more accountable to the administration than is presently the case."

While Swanson said he supported presidential appointments, he opposed dissolution of the board of governors as an advisory body.

HE SAID OF the present system, in which postmasters general answer to the board, "I don't know if that worked out particularly effectively. It seems to me it would be a better system if he (the postmaster general) was appointed by the President and was accountable to him."

Swanson said under present operations, "There's no checks and balances in terms of the traditional American system."

Swanson said if the board of governors is retained in an advisory role, its members should be more representative of postal customers.

"For example, there is no one on the board of governors who reflects the thinking of direct-mail advertisers," Swanson said.

Ill. National Guardsmen to get pay hike

Illinois National Guardsmen have received a pay raise to $40 for every day of active duty, thanks to a bill pushed by the National Guard Assn. of Illinois and signed recently by Gov. James Thompson.

The pay hike, signed into law Friday, boosts pay from $25 to $40 a day for the 10,147 Army and Air Force National Guardsmen and Naval militiamen in Illinois. The pay hike is effective immediately.

Maj. Marvin E. Allesee, U.S. Army retired, said the pay raise was passed as an incentive for enlistment into the state guard.

ALLESEE, 75, of 1415 E. Central Rd., Arlington Heights, is chairman of the Illinois association of guardsmen.

"The reason being (for the pay raise) is a bagger in a supermarket gets $32 for an 8-hour day, and the side-by-side policeman, fireman or municipal laborer gets $50 a day with compensatory time or pay for more than eight hours of duty," Allesee said.

"But for the guardsman, the hours are endless, and he was getting only $25," Allesee said.

Affected by the pay hike are guardsmen holding ranks from private through lieutenant, Allesee said.

GUARDSMEN WOULD receive pay when called out by the governor as a backup to civil authorities in times of natural disasters or insurrection, Allesee said.

The pay hike was the second victory for the legislative committee of the guardsmen association, Allesee said.

The 200-member committee, which meets regularly in Chicago, Kewanee and Springfield, in 1976 succeeded in having a law passed in Illinois that provided for four-year college scholarships for persons who had served at least one year in the Illinois National Guard, Allesee said.

Administration asks changes in postal service

From Daily Herald News Services

The Carter administration wants Congress to return to the President the power to appoint a postmaster general.

The post now is filled by the Postal Service Board of Governors, which is named by presidents for staggered terms. Presidents named postmasters general before Congress passed the Postal Reform Act of 1970 with the aim of insulating the mail service from politics.

W. Bowman Cutter of the Office of Management and Budget told a joint meeting of two House subcommittees Tuesday the administration believes the president should name the official to a fixed term subject to Senate confirmation.

CUTTER ALSO proposed giving the head of the Postal Service increased "managerial autonomy" in deciding such policy matters as Saturday deliveries.

Some features of legislation before the subcommittees prompted opposition by Cutter, including provisions to do away with the board of governors, giving Congress veto power over postal rate hikes and increasing Postal Service subsidies.

"Increasing the public service subsidy and tying it to a fixed percentage not only undercuts the principle of selfsufficient," he said, "it establishes conditions under which postal management will be less inclined to seek ways for incrasing efficiency in the postal system and reducing costs."

REACTIONS TO the proposals were mixed by Northwest suburban postmasters.

Robert Magnah, postmaster for Bartlett, Hanover Park and Streamwood, said, "I think basically I'd be in favor of things staying the way they are."

Magnah said he opposed elimination of the board of governments and presidential appointments of postmasters general.

"Naturally they (the board) had their problems, but it's nothing like the way we had it with the old politics," Magnah said.

He said benefits of the present system include improved salaries, benefits, work conditions and efficiency of postal employes, and upward advancement within the postal service on the basis of merit, rather than political favors.

DON SWANSON, postmaster for Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village and Rolling Meadows, voiced different opinions.

"It's my understanding the present postal service in Washington is not adverse to returning this (appointments of postmasters general) to the Cabinet," Swanson said. "It would hold the postmaster general more accountable to the administration than is presently the case."

While Swanson said he supported presidential appointments, he opposed dissolution of the board of governors as an advisory body.

HE SAID OF the present system, in which postmasters general answer to the board, "I don't know if that worked out particularly effectively. It seems to me it would be a better system if he (the postmaster general) was appointed by the President and was accountable to him."

Swanson said under present operations, "There's no checks and balances in terms of the traditional American system."

Swanson said if the board of governors is retained in an advisory role, its members should be more representative of postal customers.

"For example, there is no one on the board of governors who reflects the thinking of direct-mail advertisers," Swanson said.

Few local attorneys advertising

by ROD COVEY

Northwest suburban lawyers have not been rushing to place ads in local newspapers and a nationwide survey shows that lawyers who have started to advertise are getting few new clients.

Most attorneys here and across the nation are playing it safe and waiting for guidelines from state bar officials before taking advantage of the Supreme Court decision in July that lifted bar association prohibitions on advertising by lawyers.

But lawyers who have advertised, according to The Research Group, an organization that researches legal problems for the profession, are meeting with limited success.

"If the phone rings in response to the ad, it's more likely to be some other periodical wanting to get paid for running the ad than a prospective client," the study report said.

"I'VE SEEN SOME results, but the results are just nominal," said Arlington Heights attorney James R. Truschke, partner in one of the handful of area law firms that are advertising.

A slight increase in the firm's real estate and estate planning cases resulted from its newspaper advertisement listing samples of base fees for routine services, Truschke said.

But Hanover Park lawyer Pete Bowyer does not advertise his services and has no plans to do so in the future. It's just not worthwhile, he said.

"I don't think it's really doing any good for the ones who are advertising. Most of them have been advertising in neswpapers, and I just don't think people look there for legal help," he said.

Another reason attorneys are not advertising is the added cost, said John Biesteck, president of the Northwest Suburban Bar Assoc. "The firms I know that have been advertising have started it and terminated it because they realized they'd have to raise their fees," he said.

"THE ONE THING we don't want to do is raise fees," he said. "They're high enough as it is."

Prior to the June 27 U.S. Supreme Court ruling supporting lawyers' right to advertise, an Illinois attorney who advertised could be disbarred by the Attorneys Registration and Disciplinary Commission, an arm of the state's high court, said John H. Dickason, executive director of the Illinois State Bar Assoc.

But all that has changed, at least for the moment.

The Chicago and state bar associations are woking on guidelines to be forwarded to the Illinois Supreme Court, which will decide what, if any, restrictions should be added to the U.S. high court's ruling.

ONE OF THE specifics the state bar's 140-member governing board will have to address when it meets Saturday is a working definition of routine legal services, which are allowed to be advertised under the U.S. Supreme Court's decision, Dickason said.

But even an Illinois Supreme Court ruling may leave some vagueness in its wake.

The Chicago bar already has come up with some proposed recommendations for the state, one of which would prohibit ads that draw clientele through "puffery, garishness, hucksterism, showmanship," said 26-year-old Chicago lawyer Lawrence I. Frankle.

These guidelines, which probably will be adopted, leave some room for interpretation, Frankle said.

NEW JERSEY and New Hampshire already have issued fairly restrictive guidelines. Members of the New York Bar Assoc. were warned they would be "advertising at their own risk" until new rules are drafted in that state.

So far, attorneys in the far West and Southwest appear most eager to advertise, the legal research group said.

Will lawyers flood periodicals with advertisements if Illinois implements liberal guidelines? Probably not, Biesteck said.

"Right now we're at the most liberal state as we will ever be in our permission to advertise," he said. "So, if anyone wanted to do any wild and woolly advertising, they'd be doing it now."

AN ART LOVER takes close look at one of many paintings on display and for sale at the O'Hare Motor Inn in Schiller Park.

Religious artwork for sale

Some of the color art work seen in prayer books and Bibles is for sale this week.

But you may find that it is less expensive and more manageable to have the illustrations in the book than to have the reproductions.

Many of the pieces are over 9 feet high and a copy of Leonardo DaVinci's Last Supper is 16 feet long.

THE COLLECTION of 200 pieces of artwork are being displayed for sale through Friday at the O'Hare Motor Inn, 3939 N. Mannheim Rd., Schiller Park.

Although the work was advertised as being from the estate of John F. Cuneo of Libertyville (who died last spring), an attorney handling Cuneo's estate said the art pieces were erroneously advertised and are not part of the late landowner's personal collection.

Myers said the 200 pieces of artwork were purchased by Metropolitan Chicago Co. from Consolidated Book Publishers, Melrose Park. Cuneo was a shareholder in the publishing business, Myers said, but the paintings were purchased and used by the business.

"The paintings were used as illustrations in the prayer books and Bibles that were published," Myers explained. "The works were not useful (to the company) anymore."

THE ENTIRE collection is being liquidated by Metropolitan Chicago Co., and Charles Mack, owner of the firm, said the 200 pieces are worth an estimated half million dollars.

The collection includes reproductions of Rembrandts, Van Dykes and DaVincis, many in gold scroll frames.

"Some of the paintings are so big it's unbelievable," Mack said. "People came in the first day (Sunday) and were awed with the magnificence."

Mack said the majority of the pieces are Biblical art and one small piece, a painting of Cain slaying Abel, was auctioned Sunday. The $420 received for the painting was donated to Little City Foundation, Chicago.

City-suburb busing plan again affirmed by Cronin

by DIANE GRANAT

State Schools Supt. Joseph M. Cronin Wednesday reaffirmed that a city-suburb busing plan may be one way to improve the racial make-up of Chicago area schools.

Cronin said a citizens panel and experts working to develop a desegregation plan for the city of Chicago may be considering the use of Metropolitan desegregation that would involve the suburbs.

"It's a possibility (the desegregation planners) may be studying, and it may come up from the citywide advisory committee (on desegregation)," Cronin said.

FOR NEARLY two years, Cronin has promoted the voluntary transportation of innercity minority children to suburban schools with empty classrooms. His idea would attempt to aid desegregation and relieve the problem of declining enrollment in suburban schools.

Although most discussion of a city-suburban desegregation program has been generated on the state level, Cronin said Wednesday, "I think that some of the intiative has to come from the Chicago baord."

Cronin also said that in other metropolitan areas, such as Boston and Hartford, Conn., the impetus for a voluntary city-suburban busing program has come from the nearby suburbs.

CRONIN SAID Wednesday the state board once again may propose that money be allotted to assist school districts interested in setting up voluntary desegregation program. He said the issue will come up later this year. The state board just has started preliminary work on its 1978-79 budget.

In last year's state board budget, $2 million was requested for metropolitan desegregation programs. The board later said the money could be diverted to help communities under pressure to desegregate within their own boundaries.

The state legislature, however, did not approve the $2 million desegregation assistance package in its 1977-78 school spending allocation.

CRONIN'S COMMENTS followed a state board committee meeting attended by about 35 residents of Chicago's Southwest Side who came to express their antibusing feelings.

THE GROUP, mostly women from the Bogan High School area, have been at the forefront of the protest against Chicago's current desegregation effort.

At the beginning of the school year, the city began a voluntary transfer plan that involves the busing of some 800 black and Latino students from overcrowded schools to predominantly white underused schools.

The plan is taking place within Chicago's city limits.

The transfer plan is the city's first step to comply with state regulations for a balanced racial composition in the schools. If the Chicago board does not submit a desegregation plan by next March, it may lose state and federal funds.

A LEADER OF THE Southwest Side protestors, Francine Fatima, said the parents came to the state board Wednesday because "the state board is where the pressure is coming from" to desegregate.

"We don't feel the people on that board have any compassion. They are not sensitive to our needs," said Mrs. Fatima, who was wearing a "Stop Forced Busing" button.

"These people are so far removed from the situation," she said. "We are the parents. We know what's best for our children; the neighborhood school for neighborhood children."

Before the Bogan area protesters entered the board meetings, Cronin commended the city on its voluntary transfer program.

School officials rap election consolidation bill

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Northwest suburban school officials complained here Wednesday that legislation to consolidate elections, now awaiting action by Gov. James R. Thompson, will cause confusion and send the cost of elections soaring.

In a hearing before the Elections Laws Study Commission, headed by State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, school officials from throughout the state argued that the legislation, which was passed this spring by the Illinois General Assembly, is nearly impossible to implement. They called for extensive revisions of the measure if Thompson approves it.

Although the legislation was billed by supporters as a reform measure to save taxpayers money, Susan Roso, a member of the Dist. 21 Board of Education, told the commission that the district would spend nine times more for elections because of the need for an increased number of polling places and election judges. An analysis of other districts shows similar increases, she said.

MRS. ROSO, A resident of Buffalo Grove, joined other school officials in calling for additional dates in the law for referendums on tax increases.

The pending bill calls for five elections in two years and prohibits taxing bodies from scheduling referendums at any other time.

Some school officials said schools should be left out of the election consolidation effort and one official argued school districts should not be required to get voter approval for tax increases.

"School districts must take the brunt of people who cannot vote for increases in income taxes and gasoline taxes and sales tax. There should be no referendums and if the people do not like the way officials are running the district, they should be voted out of office," said Harold P. Seamon, executive director of the Illinois Assn. of School Board officials.

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board member Peggy Elgin also testified against some provisions of the bill.

A HOFFMAN ESTATES resident, she said when new housing developments are started school officials must be able to move rapidly to obtain funds for new buildings and teachers. The pending bill could forgo delays of up to seven months in calling a referendum, she said.

James Taylor, Keeneyville Dist. 20 board president, told the commission the consolidation effort might discourage voter interest.

Taylor suggested that if voters are forced to go to the polls to vote on candidates for schools, parks, library, municipalities and referendums at the same time, they will not be properly informed.

Some officials also took their problems directly to the governor's office.

James Bowen, business manager for East Maine Dist. 63, submitted a resolution asking Thompson to vote the two election consolidation bills awaiting his action.

BOWEN TOLD the commission that his district, as others in the Northwest suburbs, has some consolidated elections now because district boundaries are similar.

School officials rap election consolidation bill

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Northwest suburban school officials complained here Wednesday that legislation to consolidate elections, now awaiting action by Gov. James R. Thompson, will cause confusion and send the cost of elections soaring.

In a hearing before the Elections Laws Study Commission, headed by State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, school officials from throughout the state argued that the legislation, which was passed this spring by the Illinois General Assembly, is nearly impossible to implement. They called for extensive revisions of the measure if Thompson approves it.

Although the legislation was billed by supporters as a reform measure to save taxpayers money, Susan Roso, a member of the Dist. 21 Board of Education, told the commission that the district would spend nine times more for elections because of the need for an increased number of polling places and election judges. An analysis of other districts shows similar increases, she said.

MRS. ROSO, A resident of Buffalo Grove, joined other school officials in calling for additional dates in the law for referendums on tax increases.

The pending bill calls for five elections in two years and prohibits taxing bodies from scheduling referendums at any other time.

Some school officials said schools should be left out of the election consolidation effort and one official argued school districts should not be required to get voter approval for tax increases.

"School districts must take the brunt of people who cannot vote for increases in income taxes and gasoline taxes and sales tax. There should be no referendums and if the people do not like the way officials are running the district, they should be voted out of office," said Harold P. Seamon, executive director of the Illinois Assn. of School Board officials.

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board member Peggy Elgin also testified against some provisions of the bill.

A HOFFMAN ESTATES resident, she said when new housing developments are started school officials must be able to move rapidly to obtain funds for new buildings and teachers. The pending bill could forgo delays of up to seven months in calling a referendum, she said.

James Taylor, Keeneyville Dist. 20 board president, told the commission the consolidation effort might discourage voter interest.

Taylor suggested that if voters are forced to go to the polls to vote on candidates for schools, parks, library, municipalities and referendums at the same time, they will not be properly informed.

Some officials also took their problems directly to the governor's office.

James Bowen, business manager for East Maine Dist. 63, submitted a resolution asking Thompson to vote the two election consolidation bills awaiting his action.

BOWEN TOLD the commission that his district, as others in the Northwest suburbs, has some consolidated elections now because district boundaries are similar.

State vows review of signal policy

A new state policy on the maintenance of traffic signals will be announced within the next two weeks, and local officials are hoping it will mean less money from their pockets.

Illinois Sec. of Transportation John Kramer Wednesday told Northwest suburban officials that he will review the current state policy that requires local municipalities to maintain traffic lights within their borders.

The policy has been a thorn in the side of local officials, who say the state has used the promise of road improvements as a bait to get the towns to assume operating expenses on traffic lights.

"We all knew what the bottom line was," said William Muhlenfeld, executive director of the Northwest Municipal Conference, noting that neither the state nor the towns had enough money for the maintenance.

MUHLENFELD SAID the new policy may include three different adjustments — a change in the formula for determining costs, an arrangement that would allow local towns to contract for services either separately or through the state, or a phased program where the state would gradually assume maintenance costs.

"I am pleased he is reassessing it," Muhlenfeld said, noting he had no success with Kramer's predecessor Langhorn Bond.

Virginia Hayter

Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia Hayter said she was impressed with the way Kramer handled the matter.

"He was very generous with his time. I think we had some new ideas thrown about in the meeting that need exploration," she said.

MRS. HAYTER and Muhlenfeld, however, both said they are waiting to see Kramer's recommendation before passing judgment.

The Northwest Municipal Conference has taken a strong stand against the present policy and Friday will ask the municipal problems commission to look into the matter.

In a paper prepared by Muhlenfeld, the conference maintains that the department of transportation has exceeded its authority in forcing local communities to assume maintenance costs. It backs up its position with a legal opinion from Jack Siegel, village attorney for Schaumburg.

Lambs open house set Oct. 1

The Lambs, center for the care of the mentally retarded, will sponsor an open house for the parents of mentally handicapped children from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Oct. 1.

Speakers will explain government legislation, the organization and administration of trusts and wills, the availability of residential facilities, the status and advocacy of retarded citizens and special services available through recreation districts.

Tours of The Lambs business work-training centers also will be offered.

Persons interested in attending the free conference should contact Glenn Bozon at 362-4636 for reservations.

Thompson decision on generic drug bill due today

Gov. James R. Thompson has called a 2 p.m. news conference today to announce his decision on a bill that would permit pharmacists to substitute generic drugs for higher-priced name brand prescriptions.

Backers of the bill are worried Thompson will use his amendatory veto to suggest a change in a key provision of the substitution bill.

As written, the bill allows pharmacists to substitute a generic drug unless the patient or his doctor objects. But Thompson has said he favors a change in the bill so substitution could not be made without a doctor's specific approval.

A generic drug law can result in a significant savings for consumers, proponents say.

Opponents of the bill argue generic drugs are not always the chemical equivalent of the brand name drug.

Generic drug substitution is possible now when requested by the patient, provided the prescribing doctor does not object.

IF THOMPSON does use his amendatory veto, the bill will be returned to the General Assembly which can accept the suggested change, override the veto or let the bill die.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, proponent of the bill, said Wednesday if the governor vetoes part of the bill it will effectively kill generic drug legislation in Illinois, at least for the near future.

"We have tried for years to get a generic drug law in this state. An amendatory veto will give legislators a second whack at the bill and it will be very difficult to pass.

"This is not the kind of bill that's kid's play. Pharmaceutical manufacturers have an awful lot at stake," Mrs. Chapman said.

State help asked on Met appointments

The Northwest Municipal Conference is asking the Illinois General Assembly to push for the appointment of the long-awaited Chicago contingent of the Metropolitan Advisory Transportation Council.

In a paper to be presented to the Municipal Problems Commission Friday, the conference said the advisory council, created nearly three years ago, has "ceased in purpose and function." It blamed Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic for failing to appoint the 13 Chicago members of the 26 person board.

"The council has withered to such a point that many of the members of the original list of appointments are no longer holding their elected offices," the paper states. "Obviously any new move to reorganize would require a full overhaul of the council, hopefully with the active participation of the 13 member Chicago contingent."

THE ADVISORY council originally was created to advise the Regional Transportation Authority board "on matters of transportation service, fares and policy and make other such recommendations to the board as it may deem fit."

The RTA legislation says the RTA shall meet with the advisory council at least once every six months.

The municipal conference said the advisory council might be a useful tool in looking into problem areas at the RTA.

One of these problem areas, the paper states, is the institution of sound business and audit procedures. The governor has called for an audit of the Chicago Transit Authority, which operates under RTA auspices, and wants assurances that the RTA is financially responsible.

"Obviously any new move to reorganize would require a full overhaul of the council, hopefully with the active participation of the 13 member Chicago contingent."

THE ADVISORY council originally was created to advise the Regional Transportation Authority board "on matters of transportation service, fares and policy and make other such recommendations to the board as it may deem fit."

The RTA legislation says the RTA shall meet with the advisory council at least once every six months.

The municipal conference said the advisory council might be a useful tool in looking into problem areas at the RTA.

One of these problem areas, the paper states, is the institution of sound business and audit procedures. The governor has called for an audit of the Chicago Transit Authority, which operates under RTA auspices, and wants assurances that the RTA is financially responsible.

Covert acts threatened presidents: CIA expert

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A former CIA mind control expert testified Wednesday that foreign agents may have targeted U.S. Presidents for "covert" action at least twice and actually "disoriented" members of one of Richard Nixon's overseas traveling parties.

Hidden from view on a closed Senate ante-chamber, talking by loudspeaker to the hearing room, Dr. Sidney Gottlieb cited these enemy threats as typical justification for the "extremely urgent" Cold War drug experiments his own super-secret team carried out from 1952 until the early 1970s.

Gottlieb, the mysterious and seldom-seen former boss of CIA mind control projects, testified under a grant of immunity from prosecution and under secretive conditions that had a cloak and dagger flavor.

HE CLOSETED HIMSELF with his Senate interrogators in a small room off the Senate Health subcommittee's hearing chamber and spoke through a microphone to main gallery.

Committee spokesmen said Gottlieb requested the cloistered arrangement for undisclosed "health" reasons. An intelligence official said the elderly, white-haired scientist may have feared the pressure of public testimony might have brought out his tendency to stutter.

But Gottlieb testified in a firm, clear voice throughout on the Cold War background to the mind-control project known as MKULTRA, which included the use of LSD and other drugs on unsuspecting persons and led to at least one suicide.

"I WOULD LIKE this committee to know that I considered all this work . . . to be extremely unpleasant, extremely difficult, extremely sensitive, but above all, to be extremely urgent and important," he said in a prepared statement.

Claiming Congress might have criticized the CIA had it not tried to match and counteract Communist uses of behavior control, he cited two dramatic, but vague, examples of skullduggery aimed directly at U.S. presidents.

"On at least two occasions in the past," he said, he and an assistant advised "the president of the United States of possible covert activities against him."

WITHOUT SAYING which president or presidents or elaborating further, he continued: "Not too long ago, in the course of a presidential visit to a potential hostile country, the president, when he came back, described some unusual feeling he and others had, and asked if the assistant and I were able to counsel."

Under questioning, Gottlieb said the year of this incident was "approximately 1971 — when Nixon was in office — and drugs may have been involved.

He described the symptoms as "a disorientation, unusual in terms of previous normal behavior" but added: "It did not include the President (himself). It specifically included (his) physician and associates."

Records indicate Nixon made no overseas trips in 1971, but visited China, the Soviet Union and Poland early in 1972.

GOTTLIEB ALSO said he resented being "victimized" by the CIA as the mastermind of the agency's drug project now that it has become subject to controversy and investigation. But he maintained the project was indispensable at the time.

"The context in which this investigation was started, about 1952," he said, "was that of the height of the Cold War . . . with the CIA organizing its resources to liberate Eastern Europe by paramilitary means . . .

"There was tangible evidence that both the Soviets and the Red Chinese might be using techniques of altering human behavior which were not understood by the United States and which would have implications of national survival."

Elvis backlash—woman hears from unhappy fans

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Carol McClung found a bag of garbage on her doorstep Wednesday morning. By midafternoon she had to take the phone off the hook. And she was afraid to go grocery shopping at the usual place.

All because she had tried to sell four recordings by Elvis Presley.

She became a victim of Elvis backlash — angry, usually anonymous and frequently obscene phone calls from fanatical Presley fans who complain that the death of their idol is being exploited commercially.

THE BIG RECORD companies that market Elvis anthologies have felt the backlash as well. In the first few hours after Elvis died, said a spokeswoman for RCA, the late-night television ads for RCA's album produced a barrage of complaints.

"After that, we didn't have any problems," she added, "probably because they would have difficulty getting through." RCA's collection is selling at a rate of 26,000 copies per day.

Mrs. McClung, however, was a little more vulnerable.

"I've been classified as the third worst person in the world," she sobbed. "The first two are the guys who tried to steal Elvis' body.

"I went out on the front porch this morning, and there was a bag of garbage and a note that said 'this is what you are, lady . . .' One girl said she worked at the grocery store and told me 'never get in my line again.'

"I feel like I can't even go out of the house," she added.

MRS. McCLUNG'S troubles began when she took out a classified ad offering her collection of 450 45-rpm records. Ad ad highlighted an original copy of Elvis' hit "Love Me Tender."

"I only wanted to make enough money to paint the inside of my house," said the Hanover Park resident. "If somebody had offered me $300 for the whole collection, I'd take it even though it's probably worth $3,000. I've seen other ads in the paper that said '$250 firm' for one record.

"I'm not looking for a fast buck," she added. "I was offered $1,000 for the collection eight years ago and turned it down. But I don't enjoy them anymore, and I just wanted to find somebody who would."

But some of the Elvis fans who saw Mrs. McClung's ad and a story about her record collection in Tuesday's Daily Herald did not see it her way.

EIGHTEEN OF THEM called before Mrs. McClung took her phone off the hook Wednesday afternoon.

"I wouldn't begin to repeat some of the things they called me," she said. "Most of them sounded like middle-aged women. They were the ones who were the most abusive, who used the most colorful language. They sounded absolutely heart-broken."

Later in the day, Mrs. McClung's fear "began to wear off a little bit," and at least one caller had second thoughts.

That woman had been especially angry, Mrs. McClung said, because her husband had served in the Army with Presley and had collected all of the rock-and-roll singer's records. She called back later to apologize because "I think she realized that I wasn't trying to exploit anything."

MRS. McCLUNG'S record collection is still for sale, but there will be no more ads.

"I almost feel obligated to give them away now," she said. "If I charge a dollar, I'll be called an opportunist.

"It's a shame that people have to be so cruel," she added. "I know there are more nice people in the world than cruel people, but this morning I wasn't so sure."

GOP must heed leader's warning

The Republican Party over the years has shown a singular ability to survive those who want to declare it dead.

Local GOP leaders might be forgiven, therefore, for gainsaying the pessimism of former Republican National Chairman Mary Louise Smith. Mrs. Smith said Monday the party is in "disrepair" and yet continues "in the smug knowledge that no voter can resist the allure of the Republican Party."

However extreme that position may seem to local party leaders who sit comfortably in a suburban area which turns in huge Republican pluralities, it is, for once, a clear statement of the party's dilemma nationally.

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, a national leader of the conservative wing of the GOP, has labeled Mrs. Smith's criticism of the party as "parochial," a label that could more easily be applied to the view of the party from the 12th District.

The Republican Party's problem, as Mrs. Smith so clearly stated it, is a willingness, even eagerness, to adhere to ideologies that do not appeal to voters. She said one of the party's problems is that "we are more concerned at times with a balanced budget than a balanced society . . . The Republican Party's apparent lack of concern for the needs of the people has frequently left the impression that ours is a party without a soul."

Party leaders should not take that statement as a call to reject policies of fiscal responsibility but rather as a challenge to show that the party does in fact have positive proposals to deal with human needs, not merely with impersonal budget figures.

It is important for this country to have a strong two-party system so that voters will be confronted with meaningful challenges to public policy.

The Republican Party cannot be a force in national politics if it relies only on the emergence of charismatic individual leaders, such as Dwight D. Eisenhower, or on Democratic blunders, such as those that brought Richard Nixon to power.

To recover its position as a truly national party, the GOP must heed such leaders as Mrs. Smith when they call for rethinking of party positions.

May Victor rest in peace

Victor the giraffe is dead, but somehow his story is a cause for some hope in this troubled world.

After all, this is a world where Jew and Arab, Catholic and Protestant, black and white are embroiled in conflicts with nebulous and insoluble roots.

Murders dominate the front pages of newspapers, not because editors are ghouls but because crime is a dominant force in society. A judge loses his seat on the bench for proclaiming that rape is a "normal" reaction to society's atmosphere.

In the middle of all the strife and turmoil, Victor the giraffe hoisted his 18-foot frame in pursuit of a lady giraffe, slipped and fell.

And for a few days, people all over the world worried about Victor. They bombarded the Marwell Park Zoo in Winchester, England with suggestions of how to get him back on his feet.

A faith healer tried prayer. Veterinarians gave him injections. A keeper petted him and propped his neck on hay bales. The Royal Navy built a special rig to use to lift him.

In the end, all efforts failed. Animals that are prey in the wild have sensitive nervous systems and Victor's just couldn't stand the strain.

But even in death, Victor gave us something — the knowledge that no matter how bad things are, people still can be concerned about one animals's confrontation with fate.

Victor proved the world isn't such a cruel, unfeeling place after all.

R.I.P., Victor.

Washington Post has gall, double standard on leaks

Paul Greenberg

As the year 1977 enters the stretch, the Washington Post may have taken the lead in the race for the coveted, brass-plated award for gall above and beyond the usual editorial call. The Post deserves such recognition for its indignation at the prospects of — Leaks to the Press!

As observers of the American press will know, the Post earned its own recent reputation in American journalism on the basis of leaks about Watergate. But when the leaks raise suspicions about someone close to the Post's heart — in this case, an assassinated Chilean exile by the name of Orlando Letelier — its editorial columns can sound only a little less self-righteous, and just as phony, as Richard Nixon.

Letelier was the victim of an explosion, and his post-mortem reputation as a free and independent fighter against the Chilean junta has been exploded by the contents of his briefcase found at the scene of the assassination. Those contents have been leaked and, as the Post notes, they have been used "to portray him as a leftist, a manipulator of gullible Americans and a Cuban agent."

TO THE POST, "the disturbing thing is that the leaks appear to be coming from some of the very quarters charged with investigating the crime." Funny, the Post didn't object to leaks from the grand jury investigating Watergate — those leaks made its front page day after day when Watergate was news.

"To the investigators," the Post lectures from its position as the country's most renowned purveyor of leaked material, "Mr. Letelier's politics should be irrelevant." Even clearer than the Post's wanting the investigators to find out who blew up the unfortunate Sr. Letelier is its insistence that they not find out too much. Particularly about the late Sr. Letelier's politics. And if they do, for goodness sake, don't tell the public about it.

The documents in the deceased's briefcase would seem to be anything but irrelevant to the FBI, for they indicate his ties, not only to the Chilean resistance but to Cuba's Communist government. Originally billed as a martyr for freedom, Orlando Letelier may yet be revealed as a foreign agent and conveyer of Communist funds to the campaign kitty of an American congressman or two. Yipes.

BUT THE POST, which paid great and warranted attention to Sr. Letelier's death, doesn't want too much attention paid to his life. Its position might best be described as that of the Modified, Limited Hang-Out, to borrow one of the odious phrases from the vast lexicon of them on the Nixon tapes. But that tactic may be no more successful in the Washington Post's case than it was for R. Nixon and Company.

The Post's split-level attitude toward leaks in Washington already has attracted the interest, and relish, of Accuracy-in-Media — a watchdog of the press that barks incessantly at any distortion in the press it perceives as left-wing, sort of like a German shepherd blind on one side. The Post's new opposition to leaks is just the fare Accuracy-in-Media thrives on.

While playing up any indication that the CIA or the Chilean junta may have been involved in the Letelier assassination, the Post is silent on the intriguing contents of the victim's briefcase.

THE LETELIER AFFAIR, like recent events in Angola and neighboring parts of Africa, has come at an awkward time for those advocating friendlier ties with Fidel Castro's regime in Cuba. One can understand why some would like to see Orlando Letelier, or rather the contents of his briefcase, disappear from the news. That is how cover-ups begin — and they needn't be confined to political authorities.

It is a tribute to the Post's deftness at the art that it actually uses the term Cover-up not in regard to its own handling of the Letelier Affair, but in regard to the authorities' actions. Now that's gall, with a side order of effrontery.

As a civil rights activist I've seen much in the past 10 years as I've traveled from one part of the country to the other.

I've seen military men both black and white that had fought side by side to insure "freedom" for other countries, then come home and be denied jobs and housing in areas of their choice.

I've seen individual homes set on fire because some felt their owner's color wasn't appropriate.

I've seen unprovoked police brutality against minorities who were taxpayers paying the salary of those same officers.

I've seen young black men and women that were educationally prepared for jobs denied those jobs.

But the most heartbreaking sight was to see in the North in 1977 innocent black children being bused to ensure "good quality education" because their schools were overcrowded and the politicians had no solutions. Those children whose parents could not accompany them were greeted by a group of angry bigots, who cussed and tormented the young, and crucified the innocent in the name of "racism."

The end result is that a child is dead. Whether or not the stress provoked a sickle cell crisis, I will not say.

But when fear has tormented a child so that even on her death bed her last words are the echoes of the bigots yelling "Go back, go back where you belong," something is wrong.

We the residents of Arlington Heights were not part of that horrible scene but we must as part of society take a part of the guilt that allows in the year 1977 racism to be so prevalent in our society.

GOP shows true instinct for suicide

In proposing that the age of eligibility for full Social Security benefits be raised from 65 to 68, House Republican leaders have demonstrated an unerring instinct for the jugular — their own.

You would think the Goldwater debacle of 1964 would have instilled in GOP politicians a prudent skepticism about the political wisdom of suggesting any drastic revisions of the most popular social program ever enacted in this country.

You would think that, but you would be wrong. It is never wise to underestimate the suicidal tendencies of the Republican Party.

TO BE FAIR ABOUT it, not all Republicans should be held accountable for the age advancement proposal put forward by House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes and GOP members of the Ways and Means Committee as part of an otherwise thoughtful 15-point plan for saving the Social Security system from bankruptcy.

"We had no input," a spokesman for GOP National Chairman Bill Brock said through clenched teeth. "They didn't consult us on the damned thing."

"Strictly a House initiative," choked a staff aide to Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn.

"Harebrained!" snapped Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the GOP Senatorial Campaign Committee. "More and more I turn to prayer."

RHODES AND HIS allies rather plaintively noted that they weren't the first to suggest some of the strain on the Social Security system's precarious finances could be alleviated by gradually raising the eligibility age for full benefits to 68.

Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps popped up with such a proposal in late July, and was nearly lynched for her efforts. HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., whose department presides over Social Security, hastily denounced the notion as a breach of promise to working Americans.

But it is one thing for Democrats to discuss controversial changes in the towering social monument of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal, and quite another for Republicans to do so.

Rhodes & Co. should have read and digested an extraordinarily perceptive speech which Sen. Packwood delivered in Oregon last March decrying the insensitivity of the modern Republican Party to the security-seeking impulses of a majority of Americans.

THE COUNTRY, Packwood theorized, has always been made up of a minority of risk-takers and a majority of "certainty seekers." For almost 70 years after the Civil War, Packwood noted, it was the Republican Party which managed to appeal most successfully to the needs of both.

Then along came the Depression, and "an uprooting of all that had symbolized certainty and security in our history. There was panic and fear to a degree unknown before."

FDR stepped forward, and calmed the fears. With program after program, he put people back to work and restored their sense of certainty about themselves and their country. Yet at each move, Packwood noted, "the Republicans said 'NO.' "

"We Republicans," the senator said, "lost touch with our twin goals of security and certainty for the majority, and rewards for the risk-takers. We forgot that both were essential for stable, popular government."

OF ALL FDR'S works, none has proven more durable and more popular than Social Security. It is the government's most sacred compact with those Packwood dubs the "certainty seekers," and its central element is the promise of full retirement benefits to all workers who reach 65.

That is why the House GOP proposal is, as Packwood said, "harebrained" from a political perspective. Never mind that those who were around when Roosevelt launched the Social Security system will not be affected by any change in the age for full benefits. Those of our generation — now in our 30s and 40s — are the children of the New Deal. Like our parents, we expect the original bargain to be kept.

Correction

The word not was inadvertently omitted from Mary Mozal's letter to the editor Monday, thus changing the meaning. In the letter, Ms. Mozal said the policy committee of Schaumburg Twp. Dist. 54 voted at three meetings NOT to recommend a policy prohibiting employe participation in elections. The Daily Herald regrets the error.

OF ALL FDR'S works, none has proven more durable and more popular than Social Security. It is the government's most sacred compact with those Packwood dubs the "certainty seekers," and its central element is the promise of full retirement benefits to all workers who reach 65.

That is why the House GOP proposal is, as Packwood said, "harebrained" from a political perspective. Never mind that those who were around when Roosevelt launched the Social Security system will not be affected by any change in the age for full benefits. Those of our generation — now in our 30s and 40s — are the children of the New Deal. Like our parents, we expect the original bargain to be kept.

Correction

The word not was inadvertently omitted from Mary Mozal's letter to the editor Monday, thus changing the meaning. In the letter, Ms. Mozal said the policy committee of Schaumburg Twp. Dist. 54 voted at three meetings NOT to recommend a policy prohibiting employe participation in elections. The Daily Herald regrets the error.

Christian attitudes toward communists—a revolution

by TRACY EARLY

Billy Graham's recent preaching mission to Hungary represented virtual completion of a revolution in attitudes of Christians and communists toward each other.

That does not mean either side has converted the other, or ceased to hope for the other's future decline. But each side has concluded that the other is going to be around for a while, and some means of practical accommodation has to be found.

The Russian Orthodox Church, which fought the new Soviet government for a while after the 1917 Revolution, made its peace under Stalin. In the dark days of World War II, the two sides came to a pragmatic understanding that the church would support the government and the government would stop trying to exterminate the church.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC Church has taken a new approach toward communist governments since John XXII modified the hard-line policies of Pius XII, and refused to let Vatican II become an occasion for condemning communism.

A lack of sympathy for polemics against communist governments also has characterized the World Council of Churches, particularly since the Russian Orthodox and other Eastern European churches became members in 1961.

The only major sector of world Christianity continuing to maintain a posture of fervent anticommunism has been the conservative evangelical wing represented by Billy Graham. So it is especially significant that he now has conducted what his news release calls his first "official" mission to a communist country of Eastern Europe. (Graham's publicity uses the term "socialist," not "communist.")

HIS FORMAL INVITATION came from the Hungarian Council of Free Churches, which includes Graham's fellow Baptists and other smaller groups in a country whose largest churches are Catholic and Reformed. But Graham went with open approval of the Hungarian government, and in a spirit of building friendship between peoples.

Graham's advance man, Walter Smyth, who reported "no restriction" on his activity, met with the government minister for church affairs and came to a position that many other churchmen and communists had reached earlier:

"We had an open and frank discussion about the ideological differences that exist between us, but we also recognize that in spite of these differences there may be cooperation between us to promote common goals."

Graham, in accepting the invitation, said he looked forward to "learning more about not only the churches of Hungary but the social structure of Hungary and the people of Hungary." This implied that he did not consider the "social structure" something that necessarily had to be attacked.

IT IS LIKEWISE significant that Graham's visit was to the country where the late Cardinal Josef Mindszenty so long personified the older pattern of hard-nosed, intransigent opposition to communist rule. While praising Mindszenty's courage, the Vatican found his approach led only to a dead end, so in 1971 it finally persuaded him to leave his refuge in the United States embassy in Budapest, and go into exile.

Meanwhile, other Hungarian religious leaders already were working along other lines. In church circles a story is told that Hungarian communist chief Janos Kadar once found a group of churchmen present at a reception to declare their support.

For any political leader, support obviously is something that it is impossible to get too much of. So Kadar, confronted with the ambiguity of support from his presumed antagonists, reportedly approached the group and said, "I don't know what to do about you. I know what to do about Mindszenty, but I don't know what to do about you."

Throughout the Soviet bloc, communist leaders have been forced to recognize that the churches are not disappearing. So if church leaders will accept the government, the government will tolerate them.

And though a few dissidents remain, the principal churches have learned to live with the apparently long-term reality of communist control by distinguishing "ideological differences" from "cooperation ... to promote common goals." They have sometimes suffered attacks from critics in the West accusing them of compromise and sellout. But the validity of their approach apparently has been recognized by most Christian leaders, including now an important spokesman for conservative evangelicals.

Sox find they can't beat numbers game

by BOB GALLAS

The pennant race officially closed for the White Sox Wednesday as they were eliminated from the American League West title chase in the same manner that had kept them in contention most of the season.

Shaky pitching and equally shaky defense on the part of the Sox couldn't be offset by the South Side power display, which featured two home runs, a triple and a double that produced six runs. The Oakland A's, behind Manny Sanguillen's tie-breaking homer in the top of the ninth, won it, 8-6.

Taking advantage of the Sox loss, the Royals clinched the division crown with a 10-5 win over Minnesota and the talk in the Sox lockerroom turned to next year.

"THE EXPERIENCE of being in a pennant race is going to help us in years to come," said Lamar Johnson, who did his part Wednesday with a triple, home run and single in four trips to the plate. "A lot of the guys here haven't played together much and the year together will help."

Left fielder Bob Coluccio who spent most of the year in the minors, and center fielder Chet Lemon haven't played together much and the confusion that resulted Wednesday may have cost the Sox the game.

The Sox had taken a 4-0 lead by coming up with four runs in the bottom of the second inning but Oakland tied it in the third. With a run in on Wayne Gross' home run and two men on, Mitchell Page lined a potential inning-ending fly to left center but Coluccio and Lemon stood by and watched the ball drop between them as two runs scored and Page went to second. A base hit later, the score was tied and starter Chris Knapp was in the showers.

Coluccio, who had called for the ball, accepted the blame but Lemon fought for his share, too.

"WE HADN'T played together and he thought I had it," said Lemon. "It's not his fault. But it's probably the most helpless feeling an outfielder can have when he watches the ball drop between him and someone else when he could have caught it."

It is ironic that the A's were part of eliminating the White Sox. Four of the five Oakland division titles were clinched against the White Sox.

The A's took a 6-4 lead in the top of the fifth when rookie reliever John Verhoeven yielded four straight singles but the Sox tied the score in the bottom of the frame on solo homers by Johnson and Eric Soderholm.

Three pitchers later, Clay Carroll, the fifth Sox hurler of the evening, faced Sanguillen with one out and a man on in the ninth. Sanguillen kissed one into the left field upper deck, just five feet foul.

"I dedicate this home run to that guy in the radio booth, Jim Piersall, and what's-his-name, Harry Caray, for the way they've been popping off about how bad we are," said Sanguillen. "We're professionals and don't like to hear that kind of stuff."

Not only were the Sox eliminated from the race Wednesday, they also were losing second place. Their half-game lead over Texas dwindled to nothing with the loss, pending the outcome of the Texas-California game on the West Coast late Wednesday.

Testing...testing...Hawks out of air

by JEFF NORDLUND

The Black Hawks have had their share of troubles on the ice lately, and now they've got some away from it too.

Only two days from the opening of the exhibition season, the Hawks still haven't any commitment from a television or radio station to broadcast their games this year.

WMAQ radio, which aired all Hawks games last season, hasn't announced its intention to do so again, while TV outlets WGN, WFLD and WSNS are also planning to exclude the Hawks from their programming schedules.

THE HAWKS have suffered the last couple years through a decline in attendance and a growing inability to have their games broadcasted. Last year, for instance, none of their games were televised.

The Hawks may be balking at renewing any contract with WMAQ radio after losing $114,000 last year. They had to pay for the radio air time and pay the salary of announcer Jim West during the 82-game schedule.

The Hawks front office, though, is still confident it will find a radio utlet.

"WE'RE TALKING to several stations right now to see what the possibilities are," Don Murphy, Hawks press relations man, said this week.

"The deadline for all this was really yesterday in that we would have liked to have had all this done by now."

The television situation is bleaker. The last station to carry the Hawks was WFLD (Channel 32) which carried all road games in 1975-76. A station spokesman said simply the Hawks, who have had poor seasons lately, were not as attractive for advertisers as they once were.

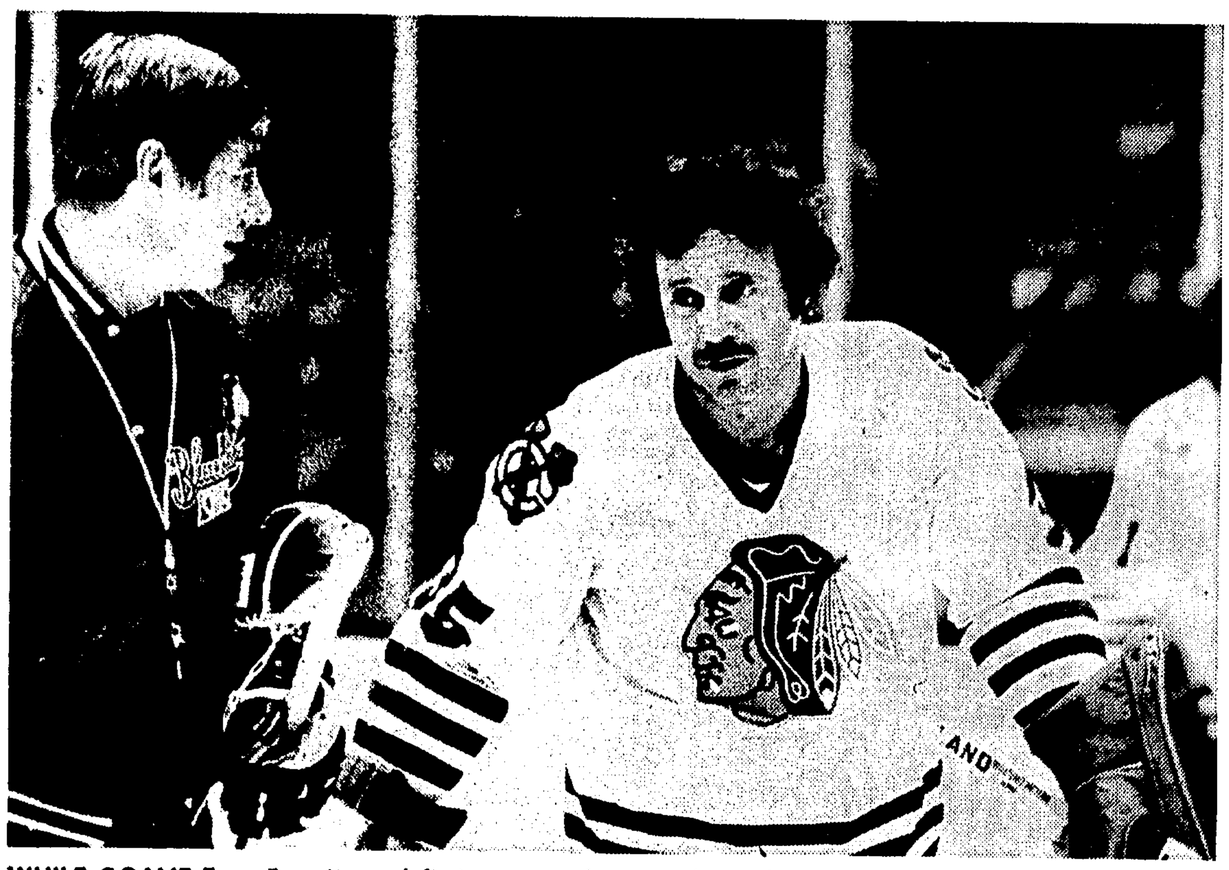
WSNS (Channel 44), which has made a big commitment to sports broadcasting by airing all White Sox games this season, also has no plans for the Hawks.

"THAT IS SOMETHING we were once involved in," Mal Wyman, station assistant manager, said Wednesday referring to negotiations with the Hawks.

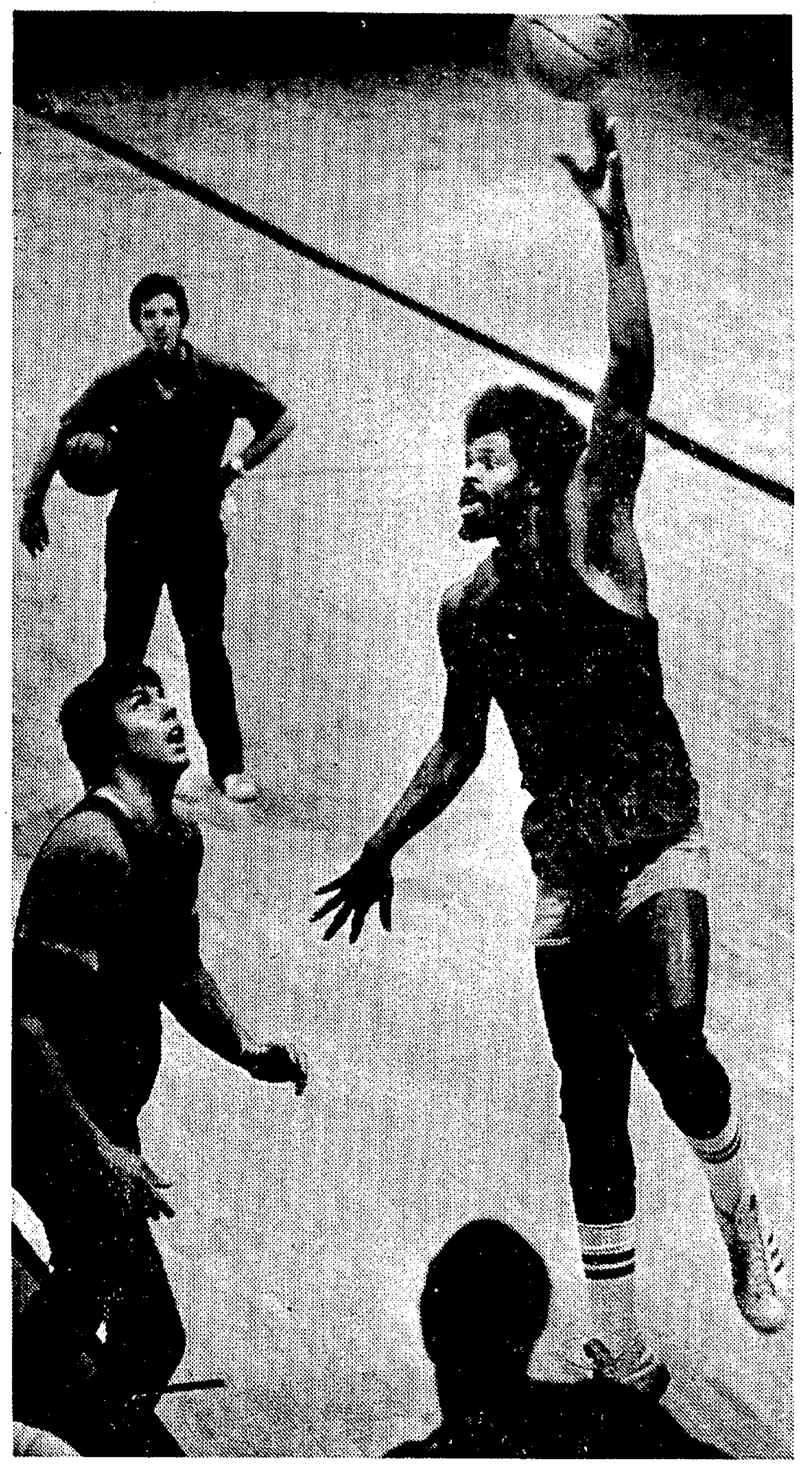
"But nothing came of it. There's no chance we'll be carrying the Hawks."

WSNS talked last year with the Hawks before deciding to broadcast the NHL's "Monday Night Game of the Week" instead. Wyman said there weren't any plans this season to carry that weekly program either.

WGN, which once broadcasted Hawks games, has decided to stay with airing the Bulls exclusively. Thus, with network hockey also having failed, Chicago viewers may have to do without hockey this winter.



WHILE GOALIE Tony Esposito and first-year coach Bob Pulford confer on the ice during a workout, Black Hawks' brass are still looking for a television or radio outlet to carry the games this season. The Hawks' exhibition season begins Saturday and the first regular schedule game is Oct. 15.



SKY HIGH. Bulls' center Artis Gilmore makes 6-11 Tom Boerwinkle look like a tiny guard as he hooks one over his teammate's head during practice Wednesday at Angel Guardian. Coach Ed Badger and his team began two-a-day workouts Wednesday to prepare for the season opener at Cleveland Oct. 18.

Cubs keep Phil bubbly on ice, 2-0

PHILADELPHIA — Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter suggested what the Philadelphia Phillies could do with their magic number Wednesday night by combining for a seven-hit, 2-0 shutout of the National League East leaders.

Burris extended his own magic number to 14 victories (against a not-so-magic 15 losses) with seventh-inning relief help from Sutter, who retired Ted Sizemore with the tying runs on base and later fanned sluggers Greg Luzinski, Mike Schmidt and Dave Johnson the way to his 29th save of the year.

THE PHILLIES are already measuring the LA Dodgers for a black-crepe burial but the Cubs forced them to think about the East Division for at least a little while longer. The Phils' magic number remained at four because Pittsburgh beat New York Wednesday. Any combo of Phillies' wins and Pirate losses totaling four will clinch the title for Philadelphia.

Meanwhile, the Cubs are clinging to their own numbers, now lodged at 79-73 after Wednesday's win. The victory was achieved on RBI singles by Ivan DeJesus and Steve Ontiveros and hoisted the Cubs into a tie for third with St. Louis in the East.

Burris was sharp against the hard-hitting Phillies who love to play on Astroturf, especially if it's their own. But Wednesday night they managed just five singles off the Cubs' big righthander, the fifth coming off the bat of Garry Maddox with two away in the seventh. Burris was yanked when he walked the next batter and Sutter promptly got out of that jam.

The Cubs scored once in the second when Mick Kelleher walked, moved up on a bunt by Burris and came home on DeJesus' hit to left. Only one run came out of a potentially big Cub third inning when Bill Buckner led off with a double, went to third on a single by Gene Clines and scored on Ontiveros hit. But Greg Gross bounced into a doubleplay a batter later.

Randy Lerch, 9-6, took the loss for Philadelphia.

St. Louis offensive line has the Bears' attention

by BOB GALLAS

While opposing defenses usually serve as the inspiration for offensive linemen, the tables will be turned this week when the Bears meet the Cardinals in St. Louis.

Because while the Bears' offensive line is spending their week studying the St. Louis defense, they're thinking about the Cardinals' offense.

"They know the reputation of the Cardinal line and don't want them to get all the glory," said Bears' coach Jack Pardee.

THE BEARS lost 23-14 to the Cardinals in St. Louis in a preseason game three weeks ago as the Cards dominated the ball. They took the opening kickoff and marched 63 yards in 16 plays for a touchdown drive that consumed the first 9.38 of the game. And the play of the offensive line was instrumental in that drive as the Cards netted five first downs.

Pardee, as a former linebacker who learned to hate offensive linemen, is impressed by the Cards' experience up front, which averages eight years per man.

"It has to rate up there with the great lines of all time," he said, comparing them with the great lines of the Packers and the Dolphins in their prime.

With Roger Finnie and Dan Dierdorf at the tackles, Bob Young and Conrad Dobler at the guards and Tom Banks at center, the St. Louis line has a total of 40 years of NFL experience. Young has the most with 12 years, followed by Finnie with nine, Dierdorf with seven and Banks and Dobler with six.

CARD QUARTERBACK Jim Hart had plenty of time to pass when the two teams met earlier, connecting on nine of 13 for 184 yards, 95 of which came on a touchdown bomb to Ike Harris. Pardee sees the passing game as a key to a Bears' win.

"In the preseason game, we stopped their running game better than anyone else," Pardee said. "They beat us passing."

Pardee is most concerned with running back Terry Metcalfe, who played last week in the Cards' 7-0 loss to Denver with a cast on his injured hand.

Metcalfe gained only nine yards in three carries but caught six passes.

"METCALFE WAS turning those snort five-yard passes into 20-yard gains," lamented Pardee. "We have to get somebody close to him and stop him."

The Bears will have something more to throw at the St. Louis offense this week than they had earlier in the month. Neither defensive tackle Wally Chambers nor defensive end Billy Newsome saw action in that game, but should be in there Sunday, though Chambers is still bothered by knee problems.

Chambers sat out of practice Wednesday and Pardee said that though Chambers would probably play Sunday, his condition was a "day to day thing" that could change at any time.

"His knee was hurting him some so we held him out today (Wednesday)," said Pardee. "We don't want to do what we did last week and get fluid on his knee before a game. Though not practicing doesn't leave him in great shape. He needs the work."

THE BEARS also will have a little more offensively in wide receiver John Gilliam, recently acquired from Atlanta. Gilliam saw limited action against the Lions last week but Pardee says Gilliam will be used more this week.

"He'll know everything he has to by

Dave Kingman tossed upon the seas of free agentry

Milton Richman

BOSTON (UPI) — Dave Kingman has never read The Man Without a Country, but he doesn't have to. He gets the general idea from the title.

The central figure in Edward Everett Hale's classic novel is Philip Nolan, a U.S. naval officer, who, in a moment of bursting point anger, says he never wants to hear the name of his country again.

His wish is granted and for 55 years he is transferred from vessel to veesel without being allowed to land or hear anything about his country from other people, books or newspapers.

KINGMAN, PLAYING with his fourth club this season, is still a free agent, drifting aimlessly like Philip Nolan, so to speak.

He started the year with the Mets, was traded to the Padres in mid-June, then dealt to the Angels a few weeks ago and now is with the Yankees.

When Tuesday night's Yankees-Red Sox game was washed out by rain, I asked Kingman whether he feels like a man without a country and he said, "Very much so."

"It's been very unsettling," he offered. "That all comes with playing out your option. It's tough to do the job that way."

TOUGH AS IT is, Kingman (Prospect High School product) has been doing it so spectacularly for the Yankees since they claimed him on waivers a week ago, he may be earning a berth with them for next year. Then again, he may not be, depending upon whether the Yanks have any more luck signing him than the Mets, Padres and Angels did.

Kingman hasn't played a single inning in the field for the Yankees yet. As a designated hitter and pinch-hitter, he has come to bat 10 times, producing three homers and a double. Two of his homers came against the Tigers and the other one against the Red Sox. He also has struck out five times, which means he hasn't changed his style of hitting much since the last time you saw him.

Some Fenway Park fans, seldom inhibited with their opinions, gave Kingman a pretty good going-over before Monday night's game.

"Hey, Kingman, they didn't want you with the Mets, the Padres or the Angels and they're not gonna want you here either," one box seat patron bellowed at the big right-handed slugger as he waited to take his turn in the cage for batting practice.

YOU'RE STILL A free agent, Kingman, and you'll always be one," the fan kept it up.

Kingman heard him but pretended he didn't.

"I don't pay any attention to that," he said later. "I ignore everybody in the stands."

Instead of talking about the Red Sox' 6-3 victory the night before on Tuesday, everyone buzzed about how easy Kingman had made it look with his pinch home run off the light tower beyond the left field wall.

"He'd hit 60 homers in one season if he were playing for us," said one localite having breakfast in a downtown coffee shop.

"He might do a little damage in this ballpark," commented Carl Yastrzemski, wryly.

COUNTING ALL four clubs he has been with this summer, Kingman has 25 home runs. He declines to speculate how many homers he'd hit playing regularly in Fenway Park with its short left field wall.

"I never make any predictions," he said.

Nor can he say for sure whom he'll be with next season.

"I do not know," he said. "I'm taking the same attitude with the Yankees as I did with San Diego, the Angels and the Mets."

Kingman started the season asking for more than $2 million over five years from the Mets. They offered him $200,000 a year for anywhere from two years to six years and he turned it down.

Before leaving the Padres, they offered him $90,000 a year and naturally, he rejected that. So now he is playing for $76,000 a year. If he stops and figures it out, he'll see where he has lost $124,000 this season by not accepting the Mets' final offer, which is the best one he has received.

One thing, though. Kingman has been getting a lot of moving expenses. A lot of traveling time, too, just like Philip Nolan.

"WE HADN'T played together and he thought I had it," said Lemon. "It's not his fault. But it's probably the most helpless feeling an outfielder can have when he watches the ball drop between him and someone else when he could have caught it."

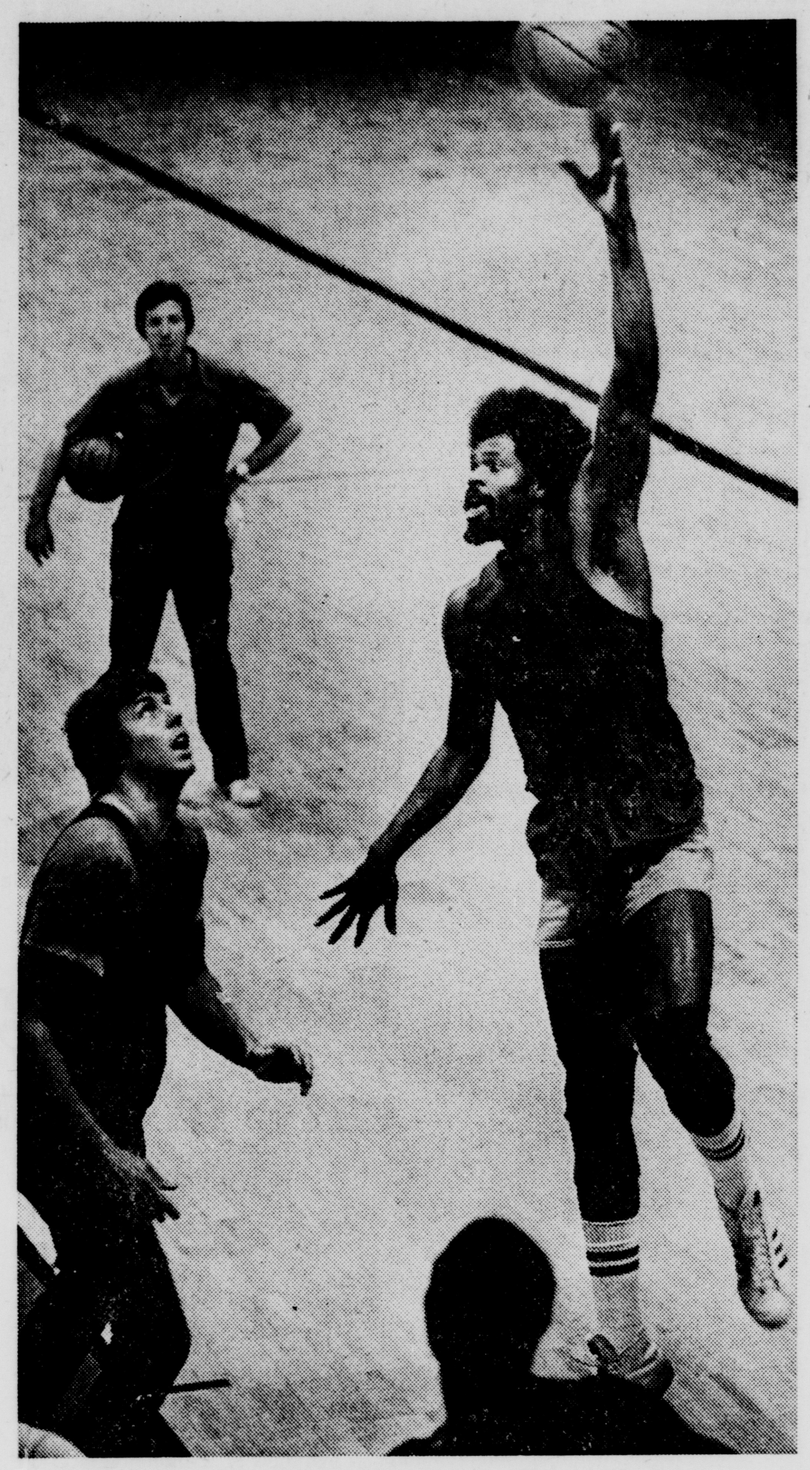
It is ironic that the A's were part of eliminating the White Sox. Four of the five Oakland division titles were clinched against the White Sox.

The A's took a 6-4 lead in the top of the fifth when rookie reliever John Verhoeven yielded four straight singles but the Sox tied the score in the bottom of the frame on solo homers by Johnson and Eric Soderholm.

Three pitchers later, Clay Carroll, the fifth Sox hurler of the evening, faced Sanguillen with one out and a man on in the ninth. Sanguillen kissed one into the left field upper deck, just five feet foul.

"I dedicate this home run to that guy in the radio booth, Jim Piersall, and what's-his-name, Harry Caray, for the way they've been popping off about how bad we are," said Sanguillen. "We're professionals and don't like to hear that kind of stuff."

Not only were the Sox eliminated from the race Wednesday, they also were losing second place. Their half-game lead over Texas dwindled to nothing with the loss, pending the outcome of the Texas-California game on the West Coast late Wednesday.



SKY HIGH. Bulls' center Artis Gilmore makes 6-11 Tom Boerwinkle look like a tiny guard as he hooks one over his teammate's head during practice Wednesday at Angel Guardian. Coach Ed Badger and his team began two-a-day workouts Wednesday to prepare for the season opener at Cleveland Oct. 18.

PHILADELPHIA — Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter suggested what the Philadelphia Phillies could do with their magic number Wednesday night by combining for a seven-hit, 2-0 shutout of the National League East leaders.

Burris extended his own magic number to 14 victories (against a not-so-magic 15 losses) with seventh-inning relief help from Sutter, who retired Ted Sizemore with the tying runs on base and later fanned sluggers Greg Luzinski, Mike Schmidt and Dave Johnson the way to his 29th save of the year.

THE PHILLIES are already measuring the LA Dodgers for a black-crepe burial but the Cubs forced them to think about the East Division for at least a little while longer. The Phils' magic number remained at four because Pittsburgh beat New York Wednesday. Any combo of Phillies' wins and Pirate losses totaling four will clinch the title for Philadelphia.

Meanwhile, the Cubs are clinging to their own numbers, now lodged at 79-73 after Wednesday's win. The victory was achieved on RBI singles by Ivan DeJesus and Steve Ontiveros and hoisted the Cubs into a tie for third with St. Louis in the East.

Burris was sharp against the hard-hitting Phillies who love to play on Astroturf, especially if it's their own. But Wednesday night they managed just five singles off the Cubs' big righthander, the fifth coming off the bat of Garry Maddox with two away in the seventh. Burris was yanked when he walked the next batter and Sutter promptly got out of that jam.

The Cubs scored once in the second when Mick Kelleher walked, moved up on a bunt by Burris and came home on DeJesus' hit to left. Only one run came out of a potentially big Cub third inning when Bill Buckner led off with a double, went to third on a single by Gene Clines and scored on Ontiveros hit. But Greg Gross bounced into a doubleplay a batter later.

Randy Lerch, 9-6, took the loss for Philadelphia.

Testing...testing...Hawks out of air

by JEFF NORDLUND

The Black Hawks have had their share of troubles on the ice lately, and now they've got some away from it too.

Only two days from the opening of the exhibition season, the Hawks still haven't any commitment from a television or radio station to broadcast their games this year.

WMAQ radio, which aired all Hawks games last season, hasn't announced its intention to do so again, while TV outlets WGN, WFLD and WSNS are also planning to exclude the Hawks from their programming schedules.

THE HAWKS have suffered the last couple years through a decline in attendance and a growing inability to have their games broadcasted. Last year, for instance, none of their games were televised.

The Hawks may be balking at renewing any contract with WMAQ radio after losing $114,000 last year. They had to pay for the radio air time and pay the salary of announcer Jim West during the 82-game schedule.

The Hawks front office, though, is still confident it will find a radio utlet.

"WE'RE TALKING to several stations right now to see what the possibilities are," Don Murphy, Hawks press relations man, said this week.

"The deadline for all this was really yesterday in that we would have liked to have had all this done by now."

The television situation is bleaker. The last station to carry the Hawks was WFLD (Channel 32) which carried all road games in 1975-76. A station spokesman said simply the Hawks, who have had poor seasons lately, were not as attractive for advertisers as they once were.

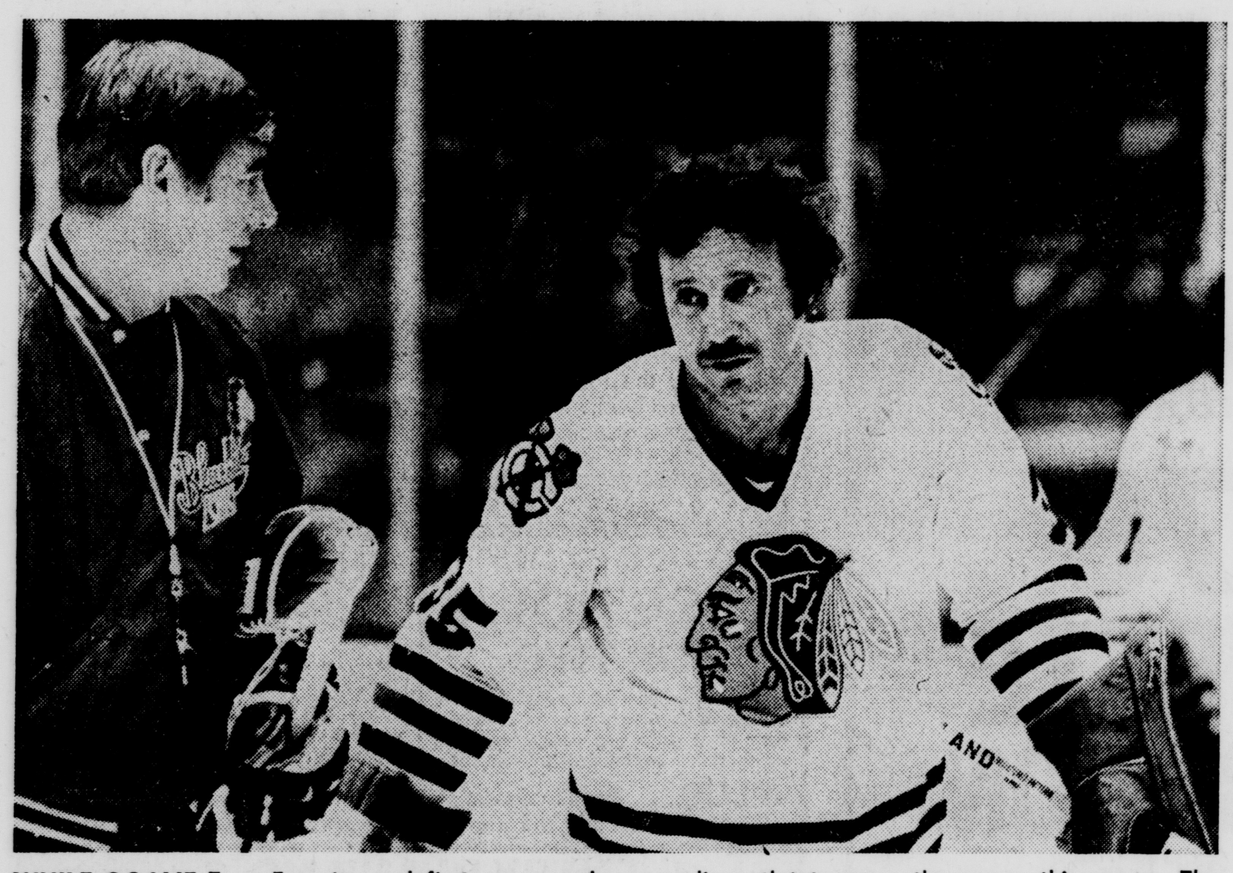
WSNS (Channel 44), which has made a big commitment to sports broadcasting by airing all White Sox games this season, also has no plans for the Hawks.

"THAT IS SOMETHING we were once involved in," Mal Wyman, station assistant manager, said Wednesday referring to negotiations with the Hawks.

"But nothing came of it. There's no chance we'll be carrying the Hawks."

WSNS talked last year with the Hawks before deciding to broadcast the NHL's "Monday Night Game of the Week" instead. Wyman said there weren't any plans this season to carry that weekly program either.

WGN, which once broadcasted Hawks games, has decided to stay with airing the Bulls exclusively. Thus, with network hockey also having failed, Chicago viewers may have to do without hockey this winter.



WHILE GOALIE Tony Esposito and first-year coach Bob Pulford confer on the ice during a workout, Black Hawks' brass are still looking for a television or radio outlet to carry the games this season. The Hawks' exhibition season begins Saturday and the first regular schedule game is Oct. 15.

St. Louis offensive line has the Bears' attention

by BOB GALLAS

While opposing defenses usually serve as the inspiration for offensive linemen, the tables will be turned this week when the Bears meet the Cardinals in St. Louis.

Because while the Bears' offensive line is spending their week studying the St. Louis defense, they're thinking about the Cardinals' offense.

"They know the reputation of the Cardinal line and don't want them to get all the glory," said Bears' coach Jack Pardee.

THE BEARS lost 23-14 to the Cardinals in St. Louis in a preseason game three weeks ago as the Cards dominated the ball. They took the opening kickoff and marched 63 yards in 16 plays for a touchdown drive that consumed the first 9.38 of the game. And the play of the offensive line was instrumental in that drive as the Cards netted five first downs.

Pardee, as a former linebacker who learned to hate offensive linemen, is impressed by the Cards' experience up front, which averages eight years per man.

"It has to rate up there with the great lines of all time," he said, comparing them with the great lines of the Packers and the Dolphins in their prime.

With Roger Finnie and Dan Dierdorf at the tackles, Bob Young and Conrad Dobler at the guards and Tom Banks at center, the St. Louis line has a total of 40 years of NFL experience. Young has the most with 12 years, followed by Finnie with nine, Dierdorf with seven and Banks and Dobler with six.

CARD QUARTERBACK Jim Hart had plenty of time to pass when the two teams met earlier, connecting on nine of 13 for 184 yards, 95 of which came on a touchdown bomb to Ike Harris. Pardee sees the passing game as a key to a Bears' win.

"In the preseason game, we stopped their running game better than anyone else," Pardee said. "They beat us passing."

Pardee is most concerned with running back Terry Metcalfe, who played last week in the Cards' 7-0 loss to Denver with a cast on his injured hand.

Metcalfe gained only nine yards in three carries but caught six passes.

"METCALFE WAS turning those snort five-yard passes into 20-yard gains," lamented Pardee. "We have to get somebody close to him and stop him."

The Bears will have something more to throw at the St. Louis offense this week than they had earlier in the month. Neither defensive tackle Wally Chambers nor defensive end Billy Newsome saw action in that game, but should be in there Sunday, though Chambers is still bothered by knee problems.

Chambers sat out of practice Wednesday and Pardee said that though Chambers would probably play Sunday, his condition was a "day to day thing" that could change at any time.

"His knee was hurting him some so we held him out today (Wednesday)," said Pardee. "We don't want to do what we did last week and get fluid on his knee before a game. Though not practicing doesn't leave him in great shape. He needs the work."

THE BEARS also will have a little more offensively in wide receiver John Gilliam, recently acquired from Atlanta. Gilliam saw limited action against the Lions last week but Pardee says Gilliam will be used more this week.

"He'll know everything he has to by

Dave Kingman tossed upon the seas of free agentry

Milton Richman

BOSTON (UPI) — Dave Kingman has never read The Man Without a Country, but he doesn't have to. He gets the general idea from the title.

The central figure in Edward Everett Hale's classic novel is Philip Nolan, a U.S. naval officer, who, in a moment of bursting point anger, says he never wants to hear the name of his country again.

His wish is granted and for 55 years he is transferred from vessel to veesel without being allowed to land or hear anything about his country from other people, books or newspapers.

KINGMAN, PLAYING with his fourth club this season, is still a free agent, drifting aimlessly like Philip Nolan, so to speak.

He started the year with the Mets, was traded to the Padres in mid-June, then dealt to the Angels a few weeks ago and now is with the Yankees.

When Tuesday night's Yankees-Red Sox game was washed out by rain, I asked Kingman whether he feels like a man without a country and he said, "Very much so."

"It's been very unsettling," he offered. "That all comes with playing out your option. It's tough to do the job that way."

TOUGH AS IT is, Kingman (Prospect High School product) has been doing it so spectacularly for the Yankees since they claimed him on waivers a week ago, he may be earning a berth with them for next year. Then again, he may not be, depending upon whether the Yanks have any more luck signing him than the Mets, Padres and Angels did.

Kingman hasn't played a single inning in the field for the Yankees yet. As a designated hitter and pinch-hitter, he has come to bat 10 times, producing three homers and a double. Two of his homers came against the Tigers and the other one against the Red Sox. He also has struck out five times, which means he hasn't changed his style of hitting much since the last time you saw him.

Some Fenway Park fans, seldom inhibited with their opinions, gave Kingman a pretty good going-over before Monday night's game.

"Hey, Kingman, they didn't want you with the Mets, the Padres or the Angels and they're not gonna want you here either," one box seat patron bellowed at the big right-handed slugger as he waited to take his turn in the cage for batting practice.

YOU'RE STILL A free agent, Kingman, and you'll always be one," the fan kept it up.

Kingman heard him but pretended he didn't.

"I don't pay any attention to that," he said later. "I ignore everybody in the stands."

Instead of talking about the Red Sox' 6-3 victory the night before on Tuesday, everyone buzzed about how easy Kingman had made it look with his pinch home run off the light tower beyond the left field wall.

"He'd hit 60 homers in one season if he were playing for us," said one locality having breakfast in a downtown coffee shop.

"He might do a little damage in this ballpark," commented Carl Yastrzemski, wryly.

COUNTING ALL four clubs he has been with this summer, Kingman has 25 home runs. He declines to speculate how many homers he'd hit playing regularly in Fenway Park with its short left field wall.

"I never make any predictions," he said.

Nor can he say for sure whom he'll be with next season.

"I do not know," he said. "I'm taking the same attitude with the Yankees as I did with San Diego, the Angels and the Mets."

Kingman started the season asking for more than $2 million over five years from the Mets. They offered him $200,000 a year for anywhere from two years to six years and he turned it down.

Before leaving the Padres, they offered him $90,000 a year and naturally, he rejected that. So now he is playing for $76,000 a year. If he stops and figures it out, he'll see where he has lost $124,000 this season by not accepting the Mets' final offer, which is the best one he has received.

One thing, though. Kingman has been getting a lot of moving expenses. A lot of traveling time, too, just like Philip Nolan.

Skiers slalom into spotlight

Sherri Hansen, 17, of Palatine has competed in five American Water Ski tournaments this summer, placing either second or third in the Girls' Slalom event.

Sherri was second in the Badger Open in Minocqua, Wis. while capturing third in the Wisconsin state championship among a field of 16 competitors.

Finding Wisconsin waters to her liking, steady Sherri cruised to a third in the Beloit Open Labor Day weekend before notching a pair of thirds in Lansing, Mich., events.

The Fremd High School senior began skiing when she was eight and recently served as assistant instructor and boat operator for her brother Larry's ski school in Michigan. Also a Fremd grad, Larry took top honors in the Badger Open in the Men's Slalom competition. He was third at Beloit among 64 skiers, many of them from around the nation and Canada.

Sherri and Larry were involved in planning and participating in a Water Ski Show for the benefit of muscular dystrophy.

the end of the week," Pardee said. "He'll be ready to play."

The Bears hold a huge advantage over St. Louis in regular season play, and have won 50 while losing only 22, but have lost three out of four of their last meetings, although two of those were preseason contests.

BEAR FACTS: Free safety Doug Plank will miss Sunday's game but has the cast off his injured knee and is to be running by the end of the week . . . Pardee said he didn't know if tackle Dan Jiggetts would again join Plank on the two-man taxi squad Sunday . . . Jeff Sevy has sore ribs and center Dan Neal is working at tackle and may fill in should Sevy be unable to play . . . Ed Garvey, head of the NFL Players' Assn., is making the rounds of every league team and was in Chicago Wednesday . . . He met with the Bears after practice.

Prospect's golfers take care of Fremd linkmen

by DON FRISKE

There is no longer an undefeated golf team in the Mid-Suburban League.

Prospect, the defending Illinois state champions, took care of that by giving Frmnd its first loss, 161-162, Wednesday at Palatine Hills Golf Course, the Vikings' home site.

The closeness of the meet gives a good example of the race that is developing in the conference standings. Fremd still holds a slim advantage with a league mark of 6-1, closely followed by Buffalo Grove at 5-1.

THE BISON OF Buffalo Grove and newcomer Barrington (3-1) are the only MSL teams to have slipped by ethe Prospect Knights, who are 5-2 in league play. Hersey is 6-2, Palatine is 5-2 and Hoffman Estates is 3-2.

"It's been a really balanced year," said George Bork, the Knight coach. "With us beating Fremd, it throws things up for grabs again."

Steve Kurka, Andy Bennett and Dave Verseman each shot a 40 to lead the Knights past Fremd, which was led by Don Sullivan's 39. Jim Bruning, Win Bruning and Ron Stanford turned in 41s.

The Bison had edged Prospect Tuesday, 152-154, after losing to Hersey a day earlier, 153-155.

"WE'RE ALWAYS under 160, and we always will be," said Fred Van Iten, the Buffalo Grove coach. "It's hard to say right now what will happen because there are a lot of meets left, but Fremd looks real tough."

Hersey coach Al Kintzle said consistency has been his teams' strength so far this fall. The Huskies had one bad day last week when they shot a 165 as a team in a losing effort against Fremd and Schaumburg.

"We've been real consistent," Kintzle said. "There were no excuses for us on that one day. We just didn't shoot well. But we knocked off Buffalo Grove, the favorites, and it looks like Fremd will be tough."

As an example of Hersey's consistency, Kintzle mentioned Brad Hall, who has turned in five 37s among his seven scores this year.

"WHEN YOU HAVE a guy who can do that, it really helps," the Huskie coach said.

Even though many meets have had to be rescheduled because of all the rain, Van Iten said he was surprised that the scores haven't been helped by the wet grounds.

"The greens will hold better than they normally would this late in the season with all the rain," he said.

The MSL teams are proving that they belong to one of the toughest golf conferences in the state. They will all get together for the league meet set for Oct. 10 at Chevy Chase, which is Wheeling's home course.

Skiers slalom into spotlight

Sherri Hansen, 17, of Palatine has competed in five American Water Ski tournaments this summer, placing either second or third in the Girls' Slalom event.

Sherri was second in the Badger Open in Minocqua, Wis. while capturing third in the Wisconsin state championship among a field of 16 competitors.

Finding Wisconsin waters to her liking, steady Sherri cruised to a third in the Beloit Open Labor Day weekend before notching a pair of thirds in Lansing, Mich., events.

The Fremd High School senior began skiing when she was eight and recently served as assistant instructor and boat operator for her brother Larry's ski school in Michigan. Also a Fremd grad, Larry took top honors in the Badger Open in the Men's Slalom competition. He was third at Beloit among 64 skiers, many of them from around the nation and Canada.

Sherri and Larry were involved in planning and participating in a Water Ski Show for the benefit of muscular dystrophy.

the end of the week," Pardee said. "He'll be ready to play."

The Bears hold a huge advantage over St. Louis in regular season play, and have won 50 while losing only 22, but have lost three out of four of their last meetings, although two of those were preseason contests.

BEAR FACTS: Free safety Doug Plank will miss Sunday's game but has the cast off his injured knee and is to be running by the end of the week . . . Pardee said he didn't know if tackle Dan Jiggetts would again join Plank on the two-man taxi squad Sunday . . . Jeff Sevy has sore ribs and center Dan Neal is working at tackle and may fill in should Sevy be unable to play . . . Ed Garvey, head of the NFL Players' Assn., is making the rounds of every league team and was in Chicago Wednesday . . . He met with the Bears after practice.

Prospect's golfers take care of Fremd linkmen

by DON FRISKE

There is no longer an undefeated golf team in the Mid-Suburban League.

Prospect, the defending Illinois state champions, took care of that by giving Frmnd its first loss, 161-162, Wednesday at Palatine Hills Golf Course, the Vikings' home site.

The closeness of the meet gives a good example of the race that is developing in the conference standings. Fremd still holds a slim advantage with a league mark of 6-1, closely followed by Buffalo Grove at 5-1.

THE BISON OF Buffalo Grove and newcomer Barrington (3-1) are the only MSL teams to have slipped by ethe Prospect Knights, who are 5-2 in league play. Hersey is 6-2, Palatine is 5-2 and Hoffman Estates is 3-2.

"It's been a really balanced year," said George Bork, the Knight coach. "With us beating Fremd, it throws things up for grabs again."

Steve Kurka, Andy Bennett and Dave Verseman each shot a 40 to lead the Knights past Fremd, which was led by Don Sullivan's 39. Jim Bruning, Win Bruning and Ron Stanford turned in 41s.

The Bison had edged Prospect Tuesday, 152-154, after losing to Hersey a day earlier, 153-155.

"WE'RE ALWAYS under 160, and we always will be," said Fred Van Iten, the Buffalo Grove coach. "It's hard to say right now what will happen because there are a lot of meets left, but Fremd looks real tough."

Hersey coach Al Kintzle said consistency has been his teams' strength so far this fall. The Huskies had one bad day last week when they shot a 165 as a team in a losing effort against Fremd and Schaumburg.

"We've been real consistent," Kintzle said. "There were no excuses for us on that one day. We just didn't shoot well. But we knocked off Buffalo Grove, the favorites, and it looks like Fremd will be tough."

As an example of Hersey's consistency, Kintzle mentioned Brad Hall, who has turned in five 37s among his seven scores this year.

"WHEN YOU HAVE a guy who can do that, it really helps," the Huskie coach said.

Even though many meets have had to be rescheduled because of all the rain, Van Iten said he was surprised that the scores haven't been helped by the wet grounds.

"The greens will hold better than they normally would this late in the season with all the rain," he said.

The MSL teams are proving that they belong to one of the toughest golf conferences in the state. They will all get together for the league meet set for Oct. 10 at Chevy Chase, which is Wheeling's home course.

Ali floored twice working with Ellis

DEER LAKE, Pa. — Muhammad Ali was knocked down twice and injured his neck while sparring with Jimmy Ellis Wednesday, eight days before his championship bout with Earnie Shavers, and afterwards the groggy Ali said he didn't remember either knockdown.

"I went down, twice, really?" Ali said in dead seriousness to his trainer Angelo Dundee and the concerned seconds in his corner. "I can't believe it. I don't remember anything."

Ali, who said he wanted a doctor to examine his sore neck, stepped up his training to compensate for all the time he's missed while making promotional and political appearances. He seemed in good condition as he worked two rounds on the heavy bag, speed bag and jump rope before climbing into the ring with Ellis, his long-time sparring partner.

Howe prepares for 30th season

HARTFORD, Conn. — Forty-nine-year-old Gordie Howe Wednesday skated through workouts with "the youngsters" of the New England Whalers as the World Hockey Association team prepared for its Sunday exhibition match with the Chicago Black Hawks. Howe and his sons, Mark and Marty, came to the Whalers from the Houston Aeros in May and began workouts in the Whalers' first training session Tuesday at the Glastonbury arena.

"My back always gets a little stiff, but that's common," said Gordie. "I'm not ready yet. I won't be ready for about a month, barring injury." Howe, the most prolific scorer in pro hockey history with 907 goals, spent 25 seasons with the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League and four seasons with the Aeros of the WHA.

The Buffalo Bills listed premier running back O. J. Simpson as questionable for next Sunday's NFL game against the Denver Broncos.

Nicklaus needs win to take money lead

MASON, Ohio — Jack Nicklaus heads a classy field of 156 golfers teeing off Thursday at this week's PGA stop — the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open. Nicklaus, shooting for his 80th world-wide win and 64th on the PGA tour, can take the lead in this year's money-winning list if he captures the $30,000 first prize. He comes into the event with $284,428 won so far this year, second only to Tom Watson's $305,428. Watson is one of the few big name players not entered.

The tournament boasts 17 of this year's tour winners, including No. 3 money winner Lanny Wadkins and Bruce Lietzke, No. 5 on the list. Other top entrants include Jerry Pate, Andy North, Tommy Aaron, Gay Brewer, Bobby Nichols, Bruce Devlin, Miller Barber, the 1974 winner here, and Ben Crenshaw, last year's champ.

Green Bay waives Brockington

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Green Bay Packers said Wednesday fullback John Brockington, the first man to gain 1,000 yards or more in each of his first three National Football League seasons, has cleared waivers and will become a free agent Thursday afternoon. Brockington, who Sunday became the 25th man in NFL history to top 5,000 yards rushing in a career, dipped to 883 yards in his fourth season and the last two seasons he has been below 500 yards. He lost his starting job a year ago to Barty Smith and had struggled to regain it this year.

The former Ohio State All-America was the Packers' first-round draft choice in 1971. While playing with the Buckeyes, he set a school rushing record, which has since been broken, of 1,041 yards in 240 attempts.

Scott's bat, glove carry Red Sox closer to first

From Daily Herald wire services

George Scott won the game with a home run in the sixth inning, then saved it with diving catch of a vicious line drive by Mickey Rivers in the seventh Wednesday night, enabling the Boston Red Sox to close within 2½ games of first place in the American League East with a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

Scott's homer off starter and loser Mike Torrez, 16-13, went deep into the right field stands to snap a 2-2 tie. In the next inning, pinch-hitter Dave Kingman reached on an error by third baseman Butch Hobson, but Scott drove to his right to rob Rivers of a potential extra base hit before Roy White ended the inning by grounding into a double play.

ELSEWHERE in the American League Wednesday, Kansas City clinched the West Division title with a 10-5 win over Minnesota, Baltimore blanked Toronto 4-0 and Seattle blasted Milwaukee 11-4. Texas was scheduled at California later in the evening.

In the National League, St. Louis split a doubleheader with Montreal dropping the opener 4-2 and winning the night-cap 8-2. In other games Atlanta defeated Houston 5-3 and Pittsburgh shut out New York 4-0. Cincinnati at San Diego and Los Angeles at San Francisco were to begin later.

Darrell Porter's two run homer and George Brett's two-run double highlighted a six-run seventh inning which enabled the Kansas City Royals to clinch at least a tie for their second straight American League West Division title witha 10-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Major league baseball

The triumph, the Royals' 20th in their last 21 games, came on the 61st birthday of club owner Ewing Kauffman and ensured Kansas City a berth in the AL championship series if the Royals can win just one of their remaining 12 games.

LEE MAY CRASHED his 25th home run and southpaw Ross Grimsley authored his 12th career shutout on a four-hitter to keep the Baltimore Orioles in the heat of the American League pennant race with a 4-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Dan Meyer drilled a two-out run-scoring double in the eighth inning to snap a 4-4 tie and Ray Fosse drove home four other runs with a 4-for-5 performance in an 11-4 victory by the Seattle Mariners over the Milwaukee Brewers.

LOU BROCK AND Ted Simmons each slammed two-run homers to back the eight-hit pitching of Eric Rasmussen and help the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-2 triumph over the Montreal Expos and a split of their twi-night doubleheader.

In the opener won by the Expos 4-2, Wayne Twitchell, who was 0-5 when Montreal obtained him from the Philadelphia Phillies June 15, upped his record to 6-10 by stopping the Cardinals on four hits.

Twitchell walked four and struck out eight as Dave Rader drove in both St. Louis runs with a second-inning sacrifice fly and a fifth-inning solo home run, his first of the season.

Willie Montanez stroked two singles and drove in a run while knuckleballer Phil Niekro blanked Houston over the last seven innings to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 5-3 victory over the Astros.

BRUCE KISON and Rich Gossage combined on a five-hitter and Fernando Gonzalez singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-0 victory over the New York Mets which haded Jerry Koosman his 20th loss of the season.

Ali floored twice working with Ellis

DEER LAKE, Pa. — Muhammad Ali was knocked down twice and injured his neck while sparring with Jimmy Ellis Wednesday, eight days before his championship bout with Earnie Shavers, and afterwards the groggy Ali said he didn't remember either knockdown.

"I went down, twice, really?" Ali said in dead seriousness to his trainer Angelo Dundee and the concerned seconds in his corner. "I can't believe it. I don't remember anything."

Ali, who said he wanted a doctor to examine his sore neck, stepped up his training to compensate for all the time he's missed while making promotional and political appearances. He seemed in good condition as he worked two rounds on the heavy bag, speed bag and jump rope before climbing into the ring with Ellis, his long-time sparring partner.

Howe prepares for 30th season

HARTFORD, Conn. — Forty-nine-year-old Gordie Howe Wednesday skated through workouts with "the youngsters" of the New England Whalers as the World Hockey Association team prepared for its Sunday exhibition match with the Chicago Black Hawks. Howe and his sons, Mark and Marty, came to the Whalers from the Houston Aeros in May and began workouts in the Whalers' first training session Tuesday at the Glastonbury arena.

"My back always gets a little stiff, but that's common," said Gordie. "I'm not ready yet. I won't be ready for about a month, barring injury." Howe, the most prolific scorer in pro hockey history with 907 goals, spent 25 seasons with the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League and four seasons with the Aeros of the WHA.

ALTHOUGH HE MAY be more accustomed to running for political office, Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic (right) ran Wednesday to promote the Mayor Daley Marathon race to be held Sunday along Chicago's lakefront.

Former Texas Rangers manager Frank Lucchesi said Wednesday he filed his personal injury suit against New York Mets infielder Lenny Randle not for the money "but to preserve the integrity of baseball" . . . The Buffalo Bills listed premier running back O. J. Simpson as questionable for next Sunday's NFL game against the Denver Broncos.

Nicklaus needs win to take money lead

MASON, Ohio — Jack Nicklaus heads a classy field of 156 golfers teeing off Thursday at this week's PGA stop — the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open. Nicklaus, shooting for his 80th world-wide win and 64th on the PGA tour, can take the lead in this year's money-winning list if he captures the $30,000 first prize. He comes into the event with $284,428 won so far this year, second only to Tom Watson's $305,428. Watson is one of the few big name players not entered.

The tournament boasts 17 of this year's tour winners, including No. 3 money winner Lanny Wadkins and Bruce Lietzke, No. 5 on the list. Other top entrants include Jerry Pate, Andy North, Tommy Aaron, Gay Brewer, Bobby Nichols, Bruce Devlin, Miller Barber, the 1974 winner here, and Ben Crenshaw, last year's champ.

Green Bay waives Brockington

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Green Bay Packers said Wednesday fullback John Brockington, the first man to gain 1,000 yards or more in each of his first three National Football League seasons, has cleared waivers and will become a free agent Thursday afternoon. Brockington, who Sunday became the 25th man in NFL history to top 5,000 yards rushing in a career, dipped to 883 yards in his fourth season and the last two seasons he has been below 500 yards. He lost his starting job a year ago to Barty Smith and had struggled to regain it this year.

The former Ohio State All-America was the Packers' first-round draft choice in 1971. While playing with the Buckeyes, he set a school rushing record, which has since been broken, of 1,041 yards in 240 attempts.

Scott's bat, glove carry Red Sox closer to first

From Daily Herald wire services

George Scott won the game with a home run in the sixth inning, then saved it with diving catch of a vicious line drive by Mickey Rivers in the seventh Wednesday night, enabling the Boston Red Sox to close within 2½ games of first place in the American League East with a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

Scott's homer off starter and loser Mike Torrez, 16-13, went deep into the right field stands to snap a 2-2 tie. In the next inning, pinch-hitter Dave Kingman reached on an error by third baseman Butch Hobson, but Scott drove to his right to rob Rivers of a potential extra base hit before Roy White ended the inning by grounding into a double play.

ELSEWHERE in the American League Wednesday, Kansas City clinched the West Division title with a 10-5 win over Minnesota, Baltimore blanked Toronto 4-0 and Seattle blasted Milwaukee 11-4. Texas was scheduled at California later in the evening.

In the Natiional League, St. Louis split a doubleheader with Montreal dropping the opener 4-2 and winning the night-cap 8-2. In other games Atlanta defeated Houston 5-3 and Pittsburgh shut out New York 4-0. Cincinnati at San Diego and Los Angeles at San Francisco were to begin later.

Darrell Porter's two run homer and George Brett's two-run double highlighted a six-run seventh inning which enabled the Kansas City Royals to clinch at least a tie for their second straight American League West Division title witha 10-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Major league baseball

The triumph, the Royals' 20th in their last 21 games, came on the 61st birthday of club owner Ewing Kauffman and ensured Kansas City a berth in the AL championship series if the Royals can win just one of their remaining 12 games.

LEE MAY CRASHED his 25th home run and southpaw Ross Grimsley authored his 12th career shutout on a four-hitter to keep the Baltimore Orioles in the heat of the American League pennant race with a 4-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Dan Meyer drilled a two-out run-scoring double in the eighth inning to snap a 4-4 tie and Ray Fosse drove home four other runs with a 4-for-5 performance in an 11-4 victory by the Seattle Mariners over the Milwaukee Brewers.

LOU BROCK AND Ted Simmons each slammed two-run homers to back the eight-hit pitching of Eric Rasmussen and help the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-2 triumph over the Montreal Expos and a split of their twi-night doubleheader.

In the opener won by the Expos 4-2, Wayne Twitchell, who was 0-5 when Montreal obtained him from the Philadelphia Phillies June 15, upped his record to 6-10 by stopping the Cardinals on four hits.

Twitchell walked four and struck out eight as Dave Rader drove in both St. Louis runs with a second-inning sacrifice fly and a fifth-inning solo home run, his first of the season.

Willie Montanez stroked two singles and drove in a run while knuckleballer Phil Niekro blanked Houston over the last seven innings to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 5-3 victory over the Astros.

BRUCE KISON and Rich Gossage combined on a five-hitter and Fernando Gonzalez singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-0 victory over the New York Mets which haded Jerry Koosman his 20th loss of the season.

Football

Palatine 18, Highland Park 0

In the Palatine Amateur Football Association, the Palatine North Lightweights Traveling Team posted their second straight shutout, beating Highland Park, 18-0. Control was the name of the game, with sustained Palatine drives eating up the clock.

Inside play dominated with Dave Andriano and Jim Kelly scoring off tackle. Mike Foote completed the scoring with a 35-yard interception run.

The defense kept Highland Park outside the Palatine 25-yard line until the last two minutes. Palatine's defense was led by Duane Carlile, Marty Geller, Bret Grapenthin, and Ed Cheatha.

Palatine South 40, Glenview 7

Other strong offensive efforts came from Bryon Leftwich, Bill Finger, David Ball, Jerry Studley, David Chase, and Henry Spoo.

Highland Park 21, Palatine North 0

The Palatine North Heavyweight Traveling team did not fair as well, losing to Highland Park, 21-0.

North showed strong tackling with Ken Anderson making 12 tackles, Bob Bocanegro and Scott Stetson nine apiece, and John Miguel six.

On offense, Jim Johnson completed three passes to Cole, three to Scott Stetson, and one to Al Houk out of 19 attempts.

Fumble recoveries were credited to Bocanegro, Rick Kapsch, and Cole.

Glenview 19, Palatine South 12

The Palatine South Lightweight Longhorn Traveling team improved from their opener but still lost to Glenview, 19-12. John Gellinger scored the Longhorns' two touchdowns on 35 and 50-yard runs. Matt Glassgow helped the effort with an interception and Dave Keown recovered two fumbles.

House League

House League play saw the Hunting Ridge Rams beat the Lake Louise Cardinals, 27-13. The Rams used a well-balanced offense to register the win in their season opener.

Scott Bossong was a big factor, taking two Mitch Kuhn passes for touchdowns. Two more Kuhn to Bosson passes went for extra points as did Mike Farmer's run.

John Volk, Paul Blanda, and Dave Schreiner were the defensive standouts. Bossong, Farmer, Kuhn, and Doug Fraley played well on offense. Dean McKinney's tackle play was another highlight.

In another House League game the Pleasant Hill Browns blanked Virginia Lake, 34-0. The game was the Browns' first this season.

All of Pleasant Hills' touchdowns came on the ground. They were scored by Doug Gavigan, Jim DiDomenico, Bill Steinmetz, Paul Jackson, and Vince Sweeney. Gavigan notched three, including an 82-yard scamper. Steinmetz's score was a 35-yard jaunt.

All of the extra points came on the ground too. Jackson ran for three and Sweeney one.

Defensive standouts included Mike Wallace (10 tackles), Brian Jackson (nine), Peter Looher and Mike Lutz shined on defense too.

Midget Division

In the Midget Division of the House League, the Steelers won over the Packers, 27-12. Tim Michael and Rob Sullivan netted two touchdowns each.

Offensive leaders for the Steelers were lineman Matt Morse, Mike Hollmer, and Dave Bean, plus quarterback Brett Fichte.

Steeler defensive standouts were Mack Galassow, Whim Libby, Blake Hill, and Dan Bonskowski.

In another Midget Division game, the Paddock Cowboys crushed Community Park, 33-7. Paddock scored all their touchdowns on end sweeps. John Galkowski produced 11, 20, 28, and eight-yard touchdown runs while teammate Doug Ortyn crossed the goal line on a 32-yard tally.

The Paddock defense was led by Tim Faul, Brad Stahnke, Mike Virgil, and Dave Jeffries. The team's offense was sparked by Galkowski, Jeffries, Ortyn, and Tom Milrov in the backfield and Virgil, Dave Burgett, plus Stahnke in the line.

Mount Prospect

Colts 26, Giants 0

The Colts scored the first time they had the ball with great passing of Dave Koziol to Jim Limperis. The second score came on Kevin Enright's end run from 10 yds. out. Dan Zender added the extra point. The second half started with a great run from Jim Mueller racing 85 yards for the 3rd T.D. Jim also added the extra point. Enright then scored the last T.D. by going through the middle from 50 yards out. Good tackles by Ruben Michlgar, Mark Barelli, R. Reed, P. Watkins and K. Eldrurp and G. Fuchs. Offense was sparked by the blocking of R. Renaud, T. Denaxas, J. Pappas, B. Krause, J. Nnovak and B. Cavanagh.

Super effort by Larson and Trandel of the 49ers and excellent play by linebackers Doyle, Barker, Kenney and Rufer plus a good running game by Fedro, Jennings, Rufer, Francis and Kenney. A safety by Barker and Rufer and a key T.D. pass from Doyle to McNeeley highlighted game. Excellent defensive play by the Raiders led by Terry Van Rooyan who had 17 tackles, Vic Cesario who played solid defense all day. Good defensive play turned in by Al Preslinger, Roger Nelson, John Caldarella and M. Osborn. Dave Zipparro averaged 25 yards for 3 points.. Good 49er offense played by Pat Ryan, Dough Close and Roger Nelson. Preslinger, Van Rooyan Caldarella, Close, Ryan John Baffa, and Zipparro were the defense. Pass completions Ryan to Halama and good running by Gelfand led the offense.

Wolves 13, Falcons 0

Outstanding defense by Martinelli, Nickle Markowski, J. Quarino. Interception by A. Gradei after strong rush by D. Quarino and H. Nickle. Strong line play by Cripps, Mead and Walsh. Strong pass coverage by Corso and Hubert. Running by Quarino, Suec, Kellihar and Limperis. Sustained offense drives by Steigerwald, Bartnick, Kreeger, Bleze, Antonucci, Delinqua, Desmond, Santi, Lewandowski, Kund and Muno. Scott Sundeen scored T.D. 28 yd. pass. Weidner the extra point pass and D. Quarino scored T.D. on a 6 yd. run. The punting of R. Teufel — 30 yds. of the Falcons with the closing of the holes in the middle by B. Russell, D. Richardson, F. Johnson, R. Girard, and the pass defense by T. Carlson, K. Paisley, S. Manglameie and J. Huny

Football

Palatine 18, Highland Park 0

In the Palatine Amateur Football Association, the Palatine North Lightweights Traveling Team posted their second straight shutout, beating Highland Park, 18-0. Control was the name of the game, with sustained Palatine drives eating up the clock.

Inside play dominated with Dave Andriano and Jim Kelly scoring off tackle. Mike Foote completed the scoring with a 35-yard interception run.

The defense kept Highland Park outside the Palatine 25-yard line until the last two minutes. Palatine's defense was led by Duane Carille, Marty Geller, Bret Grapenthin, and Ed Cheatha.

Palatine South 40, Glenview 7

Other strong offensive efforts came from Bryon Leftwich, Bill Finger, David Ball, Jerry Studley, David Chase, and Henry Spoo.

Highalnd Park 21, Palatine North 0

The Palatine North Heavyweight Traveling team did not fair as well, losing to Highland Park, 21-0.

North showed strong tackling with Ken Anderson making 12 tackles, Bob Bocanegro and Scott Stetson nine apiece, and John Miguel six.

On offense, Jim Johnson completed three passes to Cole, three to Scott Stetson, and one to Al Houk out of 19 attempts.

Fumble recoveries were credited to Bocanegro, Rick Kapsch, and Cole.

Glenview 19, Palatine South 12

The Palatine South Lightweight Longhorn Traveling team improved from their opener but still lost to Glenview, 19-12. John Gellinger scored the Longhorns' two touchdowns on 35 and 50-yard runs. Matt Glassgow helped the effort with an interception and Dave Keown recovered two fumbles.

House League

House League play saw the Hunting Ridge Rams beat the Lake Louise Cardinals, 27-13. The Rams used a well-balanced offense to register the win in their season opener.

Scott Bossong was a big factor, taking two Mitch Kuhn passes for touchdowns. Two more Kuhn to Bosson passes went for extra points as did Mike Farmer's run.

John Volk, Paul Blanda, and Dave Schreiner were the defensive standouts. Bossong, Farmer, Kuhn, and Doug Fraley played well on offense. Dean McKinney's tackle play was another highlight.

In another House League game the Pleasant Hill Browns blanked Virginia Lake, 34-0. The game was the Browns' first this season.

All of Pleasant Hills' touchdowns came on the ground. They were scored by Doug Gavigan, Jim DiDomenico, Bill Steinmetz, Paul Jackson, and Vince Sweeney. Gavigan notched three, including an 82-yard scamper. Steinmetz's score was a 35-yard jaunt.

All of the extra points came on the ground too. Jackson ran for three and Sweeney one.

Defensive standouts included Mike Wallace (10 tackles), Brian Jackson (nine), Peter Loeber and Mike Lutz shined on defense too.

Midget Division

In the Midget Division of the House League, the Steelers won over the Packers, 27-12. Tim Michael and Rob Sullivan netted two touchdowns each.

Offensive leaders for the Steelers were lineman Matt Morse, Mike Hellmer, and Dave Bean, plus quarterback Brett Fichte.

Steeler defensive standouts were Mack Galvsgow, Whim Libby, Blake Hill, and Dan Bonskowski.

In another Midget Division game, the Paddock Cowboys crushed Community Park, 33-7. Paddock scored all their touchdowns on end sweeps. John Galkowski produced 11, 20, 28, and eight-yard touchdown runs while teammate Doug Ortyn crossed the goal line on a 32-yard tally.

The Paddock defense was led by Tim Paul, Brad Stahnke, Mike Virgil, and Dave Jeffries. The team's offense was sparked by Galkowski, Jeffries, Ortyn, and Tom Milroy in the backfield and Virgil, Dave Burgett, plus Stahnke in the line.

Mount Prospect

Colts 26, Giants 0

The Colts scored the first time they had the ball with great passing of Dave Koziol to Jim Limperis. The second score came on Kevin Enright's end run from 10 yds. out. Dan Zender added the extra point. The second half started with a great run from Jim Mueller racing 85 yards for the 3rd T.D. Jim also added the extra point. Enright then scored the last T.D. by going through the middle from 50 yards out. Good tackles by Ruben Michigar, Mark Barelli, R. Reed, P. Watkins and K. Eldrurp and G. Fuchs. Offense was sparked by the blocking of R. Renaud, T. Denaxas, J. Pappas, B. Krause, J. Nnovak and B. Cavanagh.

Super effort by Larson and Trandel of the 49ers and excellent play by linebackers Doyle, Barker, Kenney and Rufer plus a good running game by Fedro, Jennings, Rufer, Francis and Kenney. A safety by Barker and Rufer and a key T.D. pass from Doyle to McNeeley highlighted game. Excellent defensive play by the Raiders led by Terry Van Rooyan who had 17 tackles, Vic Cesario who played solid defense all day. Good defensive play turned in by Al Preslinger, Roger Nelson, John Caldarella and M. Osborn. Dave Zipparro averaged 25 yards for 3 points.. Good 49er offense played by Pat Ryan, Dough Close and Roger Nelson. Preslinger, Van Rooyan Caldarella, Close, Ryan John Baffa, and Zipparro were the defense. Pass completions Ryan to Halama and good running by Gelfand led the offense.

Bears 13, Falcons 0

Outstanding defense by Martinelli, Nickle Markowski, J. Quarino. Interception by A. Gradei after strong rush by D. Quarino and H. Nickle. Strong line play by Cripps, Mead and Walsh. Strong pass coverage by Corso and Hubert. Running by Quarino, Suec, Kellihar and Limperis. Sustained offense drives by Steigerwald, Bartnick, Kreeger, Bieze, Antonucci, Dellacqua, Desmond, Santi, Lewandowski, Kand and Muno. Scott Sundeen scored T.D. 28 yd. pass. Weidner the extra point pass and D. Quarino scored T.D. on a 6 yd. run. The punting of R. Tevfel — 30 yds. of the Falcons with the closing of the holes in the middle by B. Russell, D. Richardson, F. Johnson, R. Girard, and the pass defense by T. Carlson, K. Paisley, S. Mangiamele and J. Hunyady and R. Tuefel led the defense.

'Youthful' Hanover Park is still growing

by DAVE IBATA

Like Topsy, Hanover Park "just growed and growed."

Incorporated in 1958, the village grew from a hamlet of 451 persons in 1960 to its present 24,500 population — an astounding 2,542 per cent boom, which produced a suburb overwhelmingly residential in character.

But as Hanover Park approaches its 20th year, so also it approaches a level of maturity comparable with the older Northwest suburbs, characterized by carefully controlled planning for future expansion and an eye for developing a stable industrial population to broaden its tax base.

The 1960s brought explosive growth, and single-family detached houses, rental apartments and condominium-townhouse developments sprouted as the young village government scrambled to extend municipal services to the newcomers.

Hanover Park is still growing — primarily, in a narrow finger that juts south deep into DuPage County, where single-family detached houses and townhomes are being developed along Army Trail Road.

The new residential subdivisions also brought a flood of commercial, service-oriented properties along Irving Park Road, Barrington Road and Lake Street. Continued commercial development is forecast along Lake Street and Army Trail Road.

BUT HANOVER PARK has a "critical need" to broaden its tax base with industrial growth, said R. D. Heninger, village manager.

"With industry, we are facing extremely organized and competent industrial parks located in Schaumburg and Carol Stream," Heninger said. "We also lack direct rail transportation or spurs to any presently zoned industrial areas."

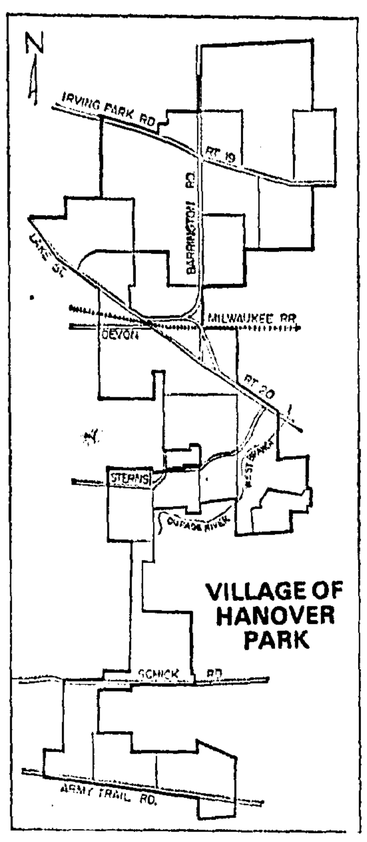
Heninger said, "If and when the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway is completed, I believe that would enhance our efforts to be extended toward industrial growth, especially of light industries — in this instance, the Milwaukee and service-industry oriented properties."

Land presently zoned industrial totals less than 40 acres, Heninger said, and consists of tracts south of Devon Avenue and east of Church Road, and north of Lake Street, west of Chestnut and south of Sycamore extended.

THE VILLAGE ALSO is considering development of office and professional properties in its central core area near the intersection of Barrington Road and Lake Street, and along Army Trail Road, Heniger said.

As for residential development, the village has encouraged single-family detached housing and multiple-family condominium apartments, townhomes and duplexes, Heninger said.

However, he added, "We are not encouraging any further multiple-family (rental) apartment complexes."



He explained, "We have experienced serious control problems (with rental apartments) as far as safety and health are concerned due to absentee ownership. These buildings are, in my opinion, deteriorating and not being kept up in a manner we'd like to see them maintained."

Hanover Park has 170 undeveloped acres zoned residential in DuPage County, and a total of 30 open acres in scattered parcels remaining under residential zoning in the Cook County protion of the village, Heninger said.

HENINGER ESTIMATES the total number of residential units in Hanover Park to be 7,000, including approximately 5,900 single-family houses.

Barring further annexations, the village could grow to between 35,000 and 40,000 in population by the year 2000, he said. Annexed land may push the total to between 50,000 and 65,000, he said.

"We've established a community that developers and other people are seeking to annex to," Heninger said. "We're now in the area they are seeking us, rather than we seeking them, which of course is much healthier."

A strong drawing point for residential development in Hanover Park is that the suburb offers all the amenities of an established community — municipal services, utilities, schools and retail shopping centers — at lower housing prices than neighboring suburbs.

JOHN J. HAYES JR., president of the 1st State Bank and Trust Co. of Hanover Park, 1400 Irving Park Rd., said prices for residential dwellings — houses, condominiums, townhomes and duplexes — range from $30,000 to $65,000.

Hayes, who is working with other Hanover Park businessmen to establish the village's first Chamber of Commerce, said monthly rents range between $180 and $250.

The reasons for lower costs?

David W. Geddes, vice president and assistant trust officer at the bank, said building costs were lower than other communities when many of the existing residential dwellings were constructed.

"Construction costs were less at the time, probably for market purposes," he said.

TO ILLISTRATE the point, Hayes said, in 1971 more than 1,000 single-family dwelling units were built, with a total value of $21.3 million, while in 1976, 446 single-family units were built with a total value of $28.3 million.

"So you've got less than half the number of units, but you've got $7 million more," Hayes said.

Geddes said, "Demand tends to increase the price."

Another reason for lower costs of existing homes is geography.

Jim Abbate, sales manager for the Kemmerly realty office at 7205 Orchard, Hanover Park, said, "As I tell every prospective purchaser, the further you get away from metropolitan Chicago, the more reasonable housing seems to be."

PEGGY GURBAL, assistant vice president at the First Financial Savings & Loan Assn., 7450 Barrington Rd., Hanover Park, attributed the village's attractiveness to "average-quality homes for a better price."

Hanover Park realty and financing agents agree their village has a thriving real estate market.

Hayes said, "This is a relatively transient community, and it's the kind of community in which the realty market is strong most of the time. Resale values are steady to rising.

"This is one of the strong features of our community, and it's an active real estate market and will continue to be so because of the transfers in and out of personnel from national corporations," Hayes said.

MS. GURBAL SAID her savings and loan association has issued a steadily rising number of mortgages over the past year.

"Since last season it has never stopped," she said. "August was better than July, and July was better than June. It keeps moving up with every month. It's stayed pretty steady — there hasn't been any drop-off since last summer."

Ms. Gurbal said the average first home buyers are married persons between the ages of 28 and 35; both husband and wife work, and have one or two children, she said.

"We also see a lot of second buyers — people buying up to their second home," she said.

MORTGAGES TYPICALLY are taken out for homes in the $45,000 to $55,000 price ranges, "three-bedrooms, mostly ranches or split levels," she said.

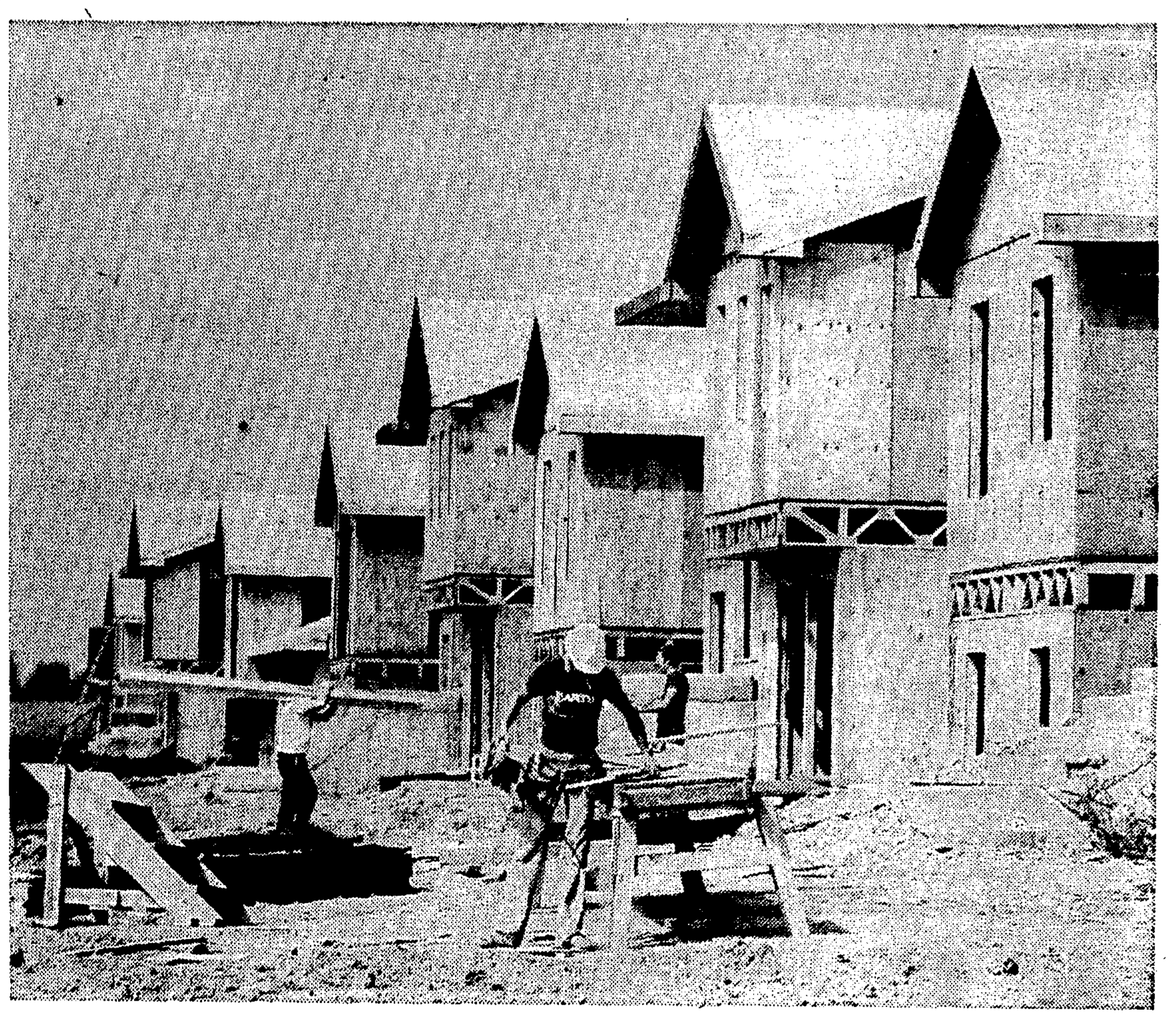
Ms. Gurbal said her firm handles an average of 40 applications for home mortgages a month, most of which are 90 per cent loans involving a 10 per cent down payment, though 95 per cent loans with 5 per cent down payments are available.

As required by law, all loans of more than 80 per cent carry insurance coverage by the Mortgage Guarantee Insurance Corp., the Private Mortgage Insurance Co. or other private mortgage insurers, she said.

Another incentive for home buyers in Hanover Park is the Flexible Loan Insurance Program being introduced at area savings and loan associations, including Ms. Gurbal's.

FLIP is a graduated-income mortgage payment plan, in which initial payments start out lower than non-FLIP mortgages and increase with corresponding increases in a home buyer's income.

As for a brief, over-all description of Hanover Park, Hayes said, "This is a very family-oriented community . . . I think it's a typical modern American community, though a little on the young side."



CONSTRUCTION THRIVES in the southern portion of Hanover Park, particularly at Woodlake Trails, a community of single-family houses and townhomes. Commercial development of the area, north of Army Trail Road, is projected by the village.

Townhouses hottest item on real estate market

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Townhouses are the hottest item in real estate and sales projections show more than 1 million will be purchased nationwide in 1977.

The houses, built in rows with common walls in both expensive suburbs and decaying inner cities, have become such good sellers they are expected to make up almost one fourth of the 4.3 million single-family homes that will be sold this year.

They also are expected to make up about one-third of all new homes built in 1977.

The townhouse or "single-family attached" residence with its small yard-space is "by far the most dynamic segment of today's housing market," said Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Boston's Investors Mortgage Insurance Co.

"BUYERS ARE TELLING us that the value for the dollar, convenience and a leisure-oriented life style are the factors they associate with the attached home," Goss said, citing a nationwide survey conducted by his firm. "Buyers say they want — home owning without all those chores — and they get it with the minimal-maintenance townhouse."

Goss said the survey showed more than 1 million townhouses will be bought in 1977 — almost one-fourth of the 4.3 million single-family home sales projected for this year.

Townhouses are believed to have had their origin in the Middle Ages when they were built wall-to-wall to improve the defenses of city-states. Later, townhouses became popular in Europe and the United States as the city homes of country gentry.

Modern townhouses now boast three or more bedrooms, two full baths, two or more half bathrooms, a kitchen with built-in appliances, a dining room, a living room and a finished basement or den.

ONE OF THE SURPRISES in the IMIC survey was that "convenience," particularly the lack of yard work, apparently means more to townhouse buyers than price. Price is of course a factor with townhouses able to sell for less than detached homes because they take up less land space.

The survey found townhouse prices averaged nationally $32,000 to $50,000 with wide local variations.

A spokesman said "super luxury developments" beginning at $100,000 a unit and ranging up to $175,000 are "now common" in some areas of Idaho, Utah, Montana and Wyoming. He said "really nice townhouses with a courtyard" in the Georgetown area of Washington sell for $450,000.

The majority of townhouse purchasers the survey found are in the young married category, usually between the ages of 26 and 35. But the number of older buyers are increasing with an influx of "empty nesters" — couples looking for more efficient homes as their children move away.

'Youthful' Hanover Park is still growing

by DAVE IBATA

Like Topsy, Hanover Park "just growed and growed."

Incorporated in 1958, the village grew from a hamlet of 451 persons in 1960 to its present 24,500 population — an astounding 2,542 per cent boom, which produced a suburb overwhelmingly residential in character.

But as Hanover Park approaches its 20th year, so also it approaches a level of maturity comparable with the older Northwest suburbs, characterized by carefully controlled planning for future expansion and an eye for developing a stable industrial population to broaden its tax base.

The 1960s brought explosive growth, and single-family detached houses, rental apartments and condominium-townhouse developments sprouted as the young village government scrambled to extend municipal services to the newcomers.

Hanover Park is still growing — primarily, in a narrow finger that juts south deep into DuPage County, where single-family detached houses and townhomes are being developed along Army Trail Road.

The new residential subdivisions also brought a flood of commercial, service-oriented properties along Irving Park Road, Barrington Road and Lake Street. Continued commercial development is forecast along Lake Street and Army Trail Road.

BUT HANOVER PARK has a "critical need" to broaden its tax base with industrial growth, said R. D. Heninger, village manager.

"With industry, we are facing extremely organized and competent industrial parks located in Schaumburg and Carol Stream," Heninger said. "We also lack direct rail transportation or spurs to any presently zoned industrial areas."

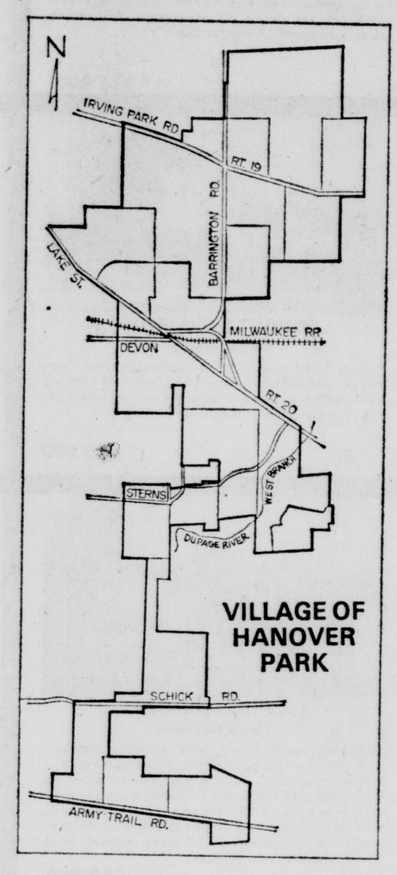
Heninger said, "If and when the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway is completed, I believe that would enhance our efforts to be extended toward industrial growth, especially of light industries — in this instance, the Milwaukee and service-industry oriented properties."

Land presently zoned industrial totals less than 40 acres, Heninger said, and consists of tracts south of Devon Avenue and east of Church Road, and north of Lake Street, west of Chestnut and south of Sycamore extended.

THE VILLAGE ALSO is considering development of office and professional properties in its central core area near the intersection of Barrington Road and Lake Street, and along Army Trail Road, Heniger said.

As for residential development, the village has encouraged single-family detached housing and multiple-family condominium apartments, townhomes and duplexes, Heninger said.

However, he added, "We are not encouraging any further multiple-family (rental) apartment complexes."



He explained, "We have experienced serious control problems (with rental apartments) as far as safety and health are concerned due to absentee ownership. These buildings are, in my opinion, deteriorating and not being kept up in a manner we'd like to see them maintained."

Hanover Park has 170 undeveloped acres zoned residential in DuPage County, and a total of 30 open acres in scattered parcels remaining under residential zoning in the Cook County protion of the village, Heninger said.

HENINGER ESTIMATES the total number of residential units in Hanover Park to be 7,000, including approximately 5,900 single-family houses.

Barring further annexations, the village could grow to between 35,000 and 40,000 in population by the year 2000, he said. Annexed land may push the total to between 50,000 and 65,000, he said.

Barrington Lakes gears for another bitter winter

The Barrington Lakes apartment complex in Hoffman Estates is preparing for the worst this winter by spending $750,000 on new siding and insulation for its 27 buildings.

However, Kaufman & Broad, owners of the 790-unit complex, expect to recover $45,000 a year on reduced natural gas bills, said a spokesman for Dow Chemical Co., manufacturer of insulation used at the complex.

Buildings originally had been built with two inches of glass fiber insulation, which was found inadequate to withstand last winter's severe cold, the spokesman said.

BITTER COLD produced between 30 and 40 complaints of frozen pipes daily, and as much as $15,000 in overtime pay to maintenance workers, said Joe Schnezler, property manager.

"If we had to face another winter in the same condition, we would have had to pass on our increased fuel and maintenance costs in the form of higher rents," Schnezler said.

Instead, Kaufman & Broad decided to reinsulate the 240,000 square feet of sidewall area on its buildings.

The owners used Styrofoam-brand insulation, produced by Dow Chemical, a board-form sheathing product which was tacked over the original exterior of the building and covered with new cedar siding.

The owners chose 1½-inches of insulating board, with an R value of 8.12, an increase of 105 per cent over existing insulation. Fuel savings are expected to total at least 25 per cent.

The re-siding project began July 5. Completion date is expected by the end of October.

Barrington Lakes gears for another bitter winter

The Barrington Lakes apartment complex in Hoffman Estates is preparing for the worst this winter by spending $750,000 on new siding and insulation for its 27 buildings.

However, Kaufman & Broad, owners of the 790-unit complex, expect to recover $45,000 a year on reduced natural gas bills, said a spokesman for Dow Chemical Co., manufacturer of insulation used at the complex.

Buildings originally had been built with two inches of glass fiber insulation, which was found inadequate to withstand last winter's severe cold, the spokesman said.

BITTER COLD produced between 30 and 40 complaints of frozen pipes daily, and as much as $15,000 in overtime pay to maintenance workers, said Joe Schnezler, property manager.

"If we had to face another winter in the same condition, we would have had to pass on our increased fuel and maintenance costs in the form of higher rents," Schnezler said.

Instead, Kaufman & Broad decided to reinsulate the 240,000 square feet of sidewall area on its buildings.

The owners used Styrofoam-brand insulation, produced by Dow Chemical, a board-form sheathing product which was tacked over the original exterior of the building and covered with new cedar siding.

The owners chose 1½-inches of insulating board, with an R value of 8.12, an increase of 105 per cent over existing insulation. Fuel savings are expected to total at least 25 per cent.

The re-siding project began July 5. Completion date is expected by the end of October.

Motorola acquires land for expansion

Motorola Inc. has acquired the south 87 acres of the former International Minerals property at U.S. Rte. 45 and Winchester Road in Libertyville.

Projected is a facility for the Communications Division of Motorola, to house administration, engineering and manufacturing departments in at least 500,000 square feet of plant area.

The Communications Division manufactures car, telephone and electronic components, and quartz crystal products for communications systems.

Seller was the 1st National Bank of Chicago. Van Vlissingen and Co. represented all parties in the transaction.

Make sure those hand tools are in tip-top condition

Many people unknowingly make themselves susceptible to personal injury and property damage when they use worn or damaged hand tools.

A tool in good condition will give best results and prevent mishaps that even the skilled professional cannot avoid, says the Hand Tool Institute, a trade association of American hand tool manufacturers. The institute promotes the safe use of striking tools (hammers, sledges, mauls, axes and hatchets) and struck tools (chisels, punches, splitting wedges, star drills and nail sets).

All tools must be checked regularly for hazardous conditions created by wear or misuse. The striking face of the tool should be smooth, free of cracks, dents, chips and any other deformities. Faces that have become mushroomed also are considered hazardous.

TOOLS THAT show such signs of damage are beyond repair, and should be immediately discarded.

If only the handle has been damaged, it can be replaced. But make sure the new handle is equivalent to the old one. At the first sign of a loose handle, replace it.

The institute also notes that tools are less likely to become battered if stored safely. Hanging them on a wall is preferable to box storage, in which they will knock against each other.

Cutting edges and points of hand tools shtuld be resharpened if dull. You can do this yourself if you have the facilities, a steady hand akd patience. Here are three rules for redressing:

- Rigidly support the tool being redressed.
- File or stone away from the cutting edge.
- Restore the cutting edge to original contour.

AN EFFECTIVE way of ensuring long life for your hand tools is to use the proper tool for the job. Know exactly which tool suits the job, and the correct way to use it.

Your hand tools will last longer if you know the proper way to strike. When using any striking tool, deliver square blows. If your aim is off center, it may help in between blows to rest the tool on the object about to be struck.

Always protect your eyes with safety goggles.

The next time you pick up a hand tool, examine it for hazardous damage. A defective tool is a danger, no matter how skilled the individual. But a well-maintained tool, when properly used, will be an asset in the hands of both amateur and professional users.

Hardened nails dangerous to eyes

Facing increasing costs for ready-made homes, many people are building their own or refurbishing older dwellings. Do-it-your-selfers who save money by virtue of their own labor should be concerned even more about saving their eyesight when working with hardened nails.

Because they are heat-treated for driving into masonry and to resist bending, hardened nails should be used with greater care because of danger of breakage. When being driven into any resistant material, the nails may chip or shatter, spearing particles into the worker's vulnerable eyes. A glancing blow may also cause the edge of the nammer face to chip with similar result.

For this reason, the Hand Tools Institute, whose membership includes striking and struck tool manufacturers as well as the manufacturers of hardened nails, urges everyone to wear goggles when working with, or in the area of someone using, hardened nails.

TYPICALLY USED to secure hard wood flooring and trim, hardened nails required even greater care when driven into concrete, brick or other masonry. The worker must employ every safety technique to minimize fracturing of masonry materials in addition to possible breakage of the nail or chipping of the hammer face.

Safety goggles are a must, and HTI recommends heavy clothing to protect other parts of the body.

Use of the proper hammer for the job: a blacksmiths' hammer; a handdrilling or mash hammer; or a double-face engineers' hammer (light sledge). Strike the nail with the center portion of the hammer face. If used correctly, these hammers provide the necessary weight to make a powerful blow easily without damaging the tool striking face.

Never use a claw hammer on hardened nails.

HTI suggests you start holes in masonry with a small star drill or masonry bit. Hit with the center of the striking face of the hammer only, delivering solid, well-directed blows. To set nails, it is best to use a one-two tapping stroke, resting the hammer on the nail head after each blow.

Make sure that hardened nails are driven at right angles to the masonry, placing them at least three inches from any edge of the work. Also use as short a nail as possible to prevent dangerous breakage. Nail manufacturers point out that three-quarters of an inch penetration will give adequate holding power.

Tenants safety landlord's responsibility

Bernard Meltzer

On real estate

With the crime rate rising as it is, we receive many letters from people who are concerned about their safety in the very buildings in which they reside. Many of them are not sure whose responsibility it is to maintain proper security in apartment houses.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We live in a very nice building in an excellent section of the city. Lately we have had several unpleasant and unfortunate incidents occur right in our apartment house.

Last week an elderly neighbor of ours was mugged in the hallway right outside his door while he was looking for his key. Several weeks ago a girl was grabbed in the garage when she went down to get her car. Luckily, another tenant came along and scared the attacker off.

My husband and I are really nervous. We're middle-aged and don't want any trouble. We've noticed that the doorman isn't always on duty when he's supposed to be. And the garage attendant is usually asleep in his little cubicle whenever we go down for our automobile.

Who can we complain to? We've never set eyes on our landlord. We just pay our rent to the manager. —Two "Chickens."

The person ultimately responsible for the security in your building is the landlord. There are states and cities which have specific laws requiring the landlord to install anticrime devices.

The landlord cannot overlook conditions which will increase the danger of a tenant being robbed, attacked or otherwise injured. If he does, he can expect to be faced with the consequences of an expensive lawsuit.

When something occurs in your building that threatens the security of the tenants, the landlord or manager should be contacted at once.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We're buying our first house, and are we nervous! All of our friends keep warning us about this and that until we're completely confused.

One of the things troubling us is the question of settlement costs. Is there any reason why there should be such a disparity among them? What should we look out for?—Starting Out.

When your lender prepares your written application for a loan, he is legally required to give you a copy of an information booklet. He must supply it to you within three business days after the application has been filed.

He must also provide you with estimates of settlement charges you are likely to incur. The final costs may not be exactly the same, due to changing market conditions, and so forth. Don't be hasty, and be careful in your choice of a settlement firm.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My husband is thinking about buying land in another state. I don't like the idea, but he says we'll get rich. I feel he's worked too hard all his life to throw his money away unless he's reasonably sure he's doing the right thing.

He really doesn't know much about this land, except that a "friend" told him it was a great deal. What would you advise?—Wary.

Buying out-of-state land is a big risk. Though there are people who have made money on this type of investment, many have had very disappointing results.

You should never buy land you haven't seen. You should be careful to consult your lawyer before signing a land contract. Even if you venture to see the land, you should be certain that it is in one of the fast-growing localities.

There is so much involved and it is such a gamble that I would advise you to discuss it with your attorney before making an investment of any kind.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: It may sound foolish to ask about weather stripping while it is still so summery. But it won't be long now before the wintry winds will blow, and so I'd better get started.

Is it possible for me to install weather stripping myself, or must I hire someone to do it? I am anxious to conserve energy, both out of a feeling of love for my country and love for my pocketbook.—Ready To Go.

Metal weather stripping is the best you can get, but it must be installed by a professional. Window sashes must be removed, special grooves cut, and the sash must be carefully refitted before replacing.

If you are set on doing the job yourself, there are other kinds of weather stripping which you could install yourself. There are kits available at hardware stores which have enough weather stripping for one door or window. Weather stripping can also be bought by the foot.

If you have never done this before, self-adhesive weather stripping is available in a wide variety of materials.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: All the closets in our apartment have sliding doors. They're fine, except that every now and then one of them jumps a track or sticks at the bottom.

I'm married to one of those guys who can't insert an electric light bulb. Can you tell me if it's a difficult job to get the door back on the track, and how to unstick it at the bottom? I'm a pretty handy gal.—Slip and Slide.

The solution is very simple. If the door has jumped the groove, most likely it is too high, and needs to be lowered. Loosen the small screws which hold the fitting to the door. Give each screw a full turn to the left -- don't remove it. When you turn the vertical adjusting screw counterclockwise, the weight of the door will cause it to drop. The more the screw is turned, the lower the door will drop.

When the door sticks at the bottom, you must turn the vertical screw clockwise to raise the door.

Million families get new homes

LAKE OF THE OZARKS, MO. (UPI) — Over one million U.S. families will move into new homes this year among the record 4.5 million families expected to buy houses, according to the president of the United States League of Savings Associations.

John A. Hardin, head of the largest trade group serving the $430 billion savings and loan business, said the anticipated boom in home buying is "good news for the economy."

Hardin, who addressed the annual meeting of the Arkansas Savings and Loan League said, "Most people pay more attention to new housing starts than to the number of new homes actually sold. But it's the number of homes sold that matters to home buyers, mortgage lenders and the thousands upon thousands of people who benefit from home sales."

HE SAID REALTORS expect to sell 3.4 million existing homes and predicted the sale of new homes should reach "well beyond" 1.2 million.

In the first half of 1977, more than 698,000 new homes had been purchased and sales should continue strong through the second half, Hardin said.

"New home sales may run contrary to new home starts as starts show a seasonal showdown later in the year," he said.

"All of these housing purchases spread throughout the local and national economy like ripples in a pond," Hardin said. "The manufacturers who make the goods that home-buying families purchase and the retailers who sell them — and all of their employes — benefit when families buy homes."

Expo '77 tickets are now on sale

Tickets are available for Expo '77, a show for the Midwest construction industry sponsored by the Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago.

Expo '77 will feature 150 booth displays from firms in seven states, and representatives of government and the industry.

The show will be held Oct. 19 and 20 at the O'Hare Exposition Center, Rosemont. It will be open only to representatives of the residential construction industry.

Advance tickets are available from the homebuilders association, Suite 203, 930 N. York Rd., Hinsdale, 60521, for $1.50 per person. Interested parties are requested to send a check to cover cost of the tickets, and indicate whether they are builders, suppliers or professionals in an industry-related field.

Even contracts aren't foolproof

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

"Oh, I thought you said don't fire when you see the whites of their eyes!"

Misunderstandings are as old as the art of communication, and while putting it in writing solves part of the problem, it's still a long way from being foolproof.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I would like to tell you about the dirty deal my husband and I are getting from real estate.

We bought a $50,000 house from a real estate salesperson and put $4,000 down payment on it. She put this in the contract as a cash deal, but she had to sell our house by a certain date. She did not sell our house by the date she was supposed to and the contract on the $50,000 house was broken and it was sold to someone else.

The problem is that her agency isn't returning our $4,000 because she did not put in a contingency in the deal — in other words, she told lies in the contract and we are blamed because she didn't sell our house by a certain date. How can real estate people tell lies in contracts like ours? We have really been taken for a ride.— Mrs. T.R.

Whether the contract was a "lie" or simply a gross oversight is a legal problem. I would retain a good lawyer and have him or her bring the matter up with the principals in the brokerage. Failing there, he or she should visit your local board of Realtors.

A lot of it, I'm afraid, depends on how much substantiation you can bring to the oral understanding that the contingency clause was supposed to be included.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I was divorced about a year ago and was awarded custody of my two children, ages 7 and 10. Naturally, I have had to go back to work.

What really riles me is the trouble I am having trying to find a decent apartment I can afford. Is it legal to turn somebody like me away simply because I have children? Three-fourths of the places I've looked are for "adults only." Isn't there a law against this? — Mrs. W.G.

In some states it is against the law — and, in most cases, is pretty generally ignored. I suggest you check with your state's attorney general's office. If it is against the law to discriminate against children, you can probably bring enough pressure against the landlord to force him to rent to you.

Yours is a sticky situation. Even you can appreciate the feelings of a lot of people — particularly the older ones — who find games of Cowboys and Indians in the hallways less than restful.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have been transferred back east by my company, with the understanding that it is temporary and that I will be returned here in two or three years.

My wife wants to sell our house and have a nice profit (we have a big equity in it and the payments are low), but I want to rent it until we return. She says that absentee home ownership is more trouble than it's worth. What do you think? — Mr. G.G.J.

Usually, I'd be inclined to agree with your wife. But, in your case (since you know you are returning and since I assume the house "fits" you) I would be inclined to suffer along with absentee landlordism for a couple of years.

To defer the tax on your house profit, you would have to buy a house of equal value in the east and sell it when you return to California.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have found an apartment I like, but it is on a 2-year lease. Can I get out of it if I get transferred before then? — Mr. T.Y.

You can't automatically assume that you can, nor can you rest easy with oral assurances by the landlord that you can. Unless there is an "escape" clause in the written lease covering transfers beyond your control, you should make sure the lease permits you to sublet the apartment for the duration.

Geyer named to international building group

A Mount Prospect man has been named secretary general of the International Union of Building Societies and Savings Associations.

Don F. Geyer, 511 S. See-Gwun Ave., was appointed chief staff executive of the union, an international organization of the thrift and home ownership business, at the group's 14th World Congress held recently in San Francisco.

"Basically, our chief function is to assist countries — particularly developing countries — that want to organize thrift and home finance organizations to enable citizens to purchase their own homes," Geyer said.

Don F. Geyer

The union, which has members in 29 nations, is moving its headquarters from London to the offices of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, 111 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago.

GEYER HAS SERVED 25 years with the league, including a term as staff vice president. He also served as president of the Chicago Rotary Club in 1966 and 1967. He and his wife, Vona, are 17-year residents of Mount Prospect.

Geyer said his responsibilities as secretary general of the union will include "coordinating activities and providing statistical data regarding the organization and supervising the organization of technical studies that will be of assistance to the business in member countries."

Combined assets of the 7,000 savings and loan associations in the world total $650 billion, Geyer said.

"THE UNITED STATES holds about 80 to 90 pere cent of all the savings and loan assets in the world, and the U.S. League (of Savings Associations) is willing to sponsor the (international) organization, to take it under its wing, to help other countries get started," Geyer said.

"We look at it as a real interesting challenge, and certainly anything we can do to help the people of the world who need homes to get them certainly is worthwhile," Geyer said.

The world headquarters will complete its move to Chicago by Jan. 1, Geyer said.

Real estate class offered at Harper

The Center for Real Estate Education at Harper College will offer a real estate refresher course in October.

"The course is designed for individuals who were licensed real estate professionals but have been inactive for a certain time period," explained Center Coordinator Wallace Dean Davis. "The State of Illinois provides that anyone whose real estate license has been inactive for at least three years, but no more than seven years, can take a 15-hour refresher course and apply for relicensure."

The course wil be offered on three consecutive Saturdays beginning Oct. 15, at Harper College, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine. The class will run from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Tuition for the course is $35.00.

For information and registration call Harper College CED Admissions at 397-3000, extension 410, 412 or 301.

Even contracts aren't foolproof

"Oh, I thought you said don't fire when you see the whites of their eyes!"

Misunderstandings are as old as the art of communication, and while putting it in writing solves part of the problem, it's still a long way from being foolproof.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I would like to tell you about the dirty deal my husband and I are getting from real estate.

We bought a $50,000 house from a real estate salesperson and put $4,000 down payment on it. She put this in the contract as a cash deal, but she had to sell our house by a certain date. She did not sell our house by the date she was supposed to and the contract on the $50,000 house was broken and it was sold to someone else.

The problem is that her agency isn't returning our $4,000 because she did not put in a contingency in the deal — in other words, she told lies in the contract and we are blamed because she didn't sell our house by a certain date. How can real estate people tell lies in contracts like ours? We have really been taken for a ride.— Mrs. T.R.

Whether the contract was a "lie" or simply a gross oversight is a legal problem. I would retain a good lawyer and have him or her bring the matter up with the principals in the brokerage. Failing there, he or she should visit your local board of Realtors.

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

A lot of it, I'm afraid, depends on how much substantiation you can bring to the oral understanding that the contingency clause was supposed to be included.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I was divorced about a year ago and was awarded custody of my two children, ages 7 and 10. Naturally, I have had to go back to work.

What really riles me is the trouble I am having trying to find a decent apartment I can afford. Is it legal to turn somebody like me away simply because I have children? Three-fourths of the places I've looked are for "adults only." Isn't there a law against this? — Mrs. W.G.

In some states it is against the law — and, in most cases, is pretty generally ignored. I suggest you check with your state's attorney general's office. If it is against the law to discriminate against children, you can probably bring enough pressure against the landlord to force him to rent to you.

Yours is a sticky situation. Even you can appreciate the feelings of a lot of people — particularly the older ones — who find games of Cowboys and Indians in the hallways less than restful.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have been transferred back east by my company, with the understanding that it is temporary and that I will be returned here in two or three years.

My wife wants to sell our house and have a nice profit (we have a big equity in it and the payments are low), but I want to rent it until we return. She says that absentee home ownership is more trouble than it's worth. What do you think? — Mr. G.G.J.

Usually, I'd be inclined to agree with your wife. But, in your case (since you know you are returning and since I assume the house "fits" you) I would be inclined to suffer along with absentee landlordism for a couple of years.

To defer the tax on your house profit, you would have to buy a house of equal value in the east and sell it when you return to California.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have found an apartment I like, but it is on a 2-year lease. Can I get out of it if I get transferred before then? — Mr. T.Y.

You can't automatically assume that you can, nor can you rest easy with oral assurances by the landlord that you can. Unless there is an "escape" clause in the written lease covering transfers beyond your control, you should make sure the lease permits you to sublet the apartment for the duration.

Geyer named to international building group

A Mount Prospect man has been named secretary general of the International Union of Building Societies and Savings Associations.

Don F. Geyer, 511 S. See-Gwun Ave., was appointed chief staff executive of the union, an international organization of the thrift and home ownership business, at the group's 14th World Congress held recently in San Francisco.

"Basically, our chief function is to assist countries — particularly developing countries — that want to organize thrift and home finance organizations to enable citizens to purchase their own homes," Geyer said.

Don F. Geyer

The union, which has members in 29 nations, is moving its headquarters from London to the offices of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, 111 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago.

GEYER HAS SERVED 25 years with the league, including a term as staff vice president. He also served as president of the Chicago Rotary Club in 1966 and 1967. He and his wife, Vona, are 17-year residents of Mount Prospect.

Geyer said his responsibilities as secretary general of the union will include "coordinating activities and providing statistical data regarding the organization and supervising the organization of technical studies that will be of assistance to the business in member countries."

Combined assets of the 7,000 savings and loan associations in the world total $650 billion, Geyer said.

"THE UNITED STATES holds about 80 to 90 pere cent of all the savings and loan assets in the world, and the U.S. League (of Savings Associations) is willing to sponsor the (international) organization, to take it under its wing, to help other countries get started," Geyer said.

"We look at it as a real interesting challenge, and certainly anything we can do to help the people of the world who need homes to get them certainly is worthwhile," Geyer said.

The world headquarters will complete its move to Chicago by Jan. 1, Geyer said.

Real estate class offered at Harper

The Center for Real Estate Education at Harper College will offer a real estate refresher course in October.

"The course is designed for individuals who were licensed real estate professionals but have been inactive for a certain time period," explained Center Coordinator Wallace Dean Davis. "The State of Illinois provides that anyone whose real estate license has been inactive for at least three years, but no more than seven years, can take a 15-hour refresher course and apply for relicensure."

The course wll be offered on three consecutive Saturdays beginning Oct. 15, at Harper College, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine. The class will run from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Tuition for the course is $35.00.

For information and registration call Harper College CED Admissions at 397-3000, extension 410, 412 or 301.

Martha's Vineyard offers land deals

by LYNDE McCORMICK

Ann Milstein and husband Frank Piccione are new landowners on Martha's Vineyard, but unlike most recent property buyers here they are not rich. They got "a deal."

In fact, the land was practically a "steal" in the light of current market prices, and island planning officials hope to open the way for more young couples to get the same kind of deal.

The difference between the Milstein-Piccione acquisition and other land purchases on the Vineyard is that the couple lives on the island all year, scratching a living from the low wages generally paid here. Island officials want such couples to settle permanently here because without them there would be no services to support the tourist economy.

A PROGRAM STARTED recently by the Martha's Vineyard Open Land Foundation (OLF) offers young couples who meet certain qualifications the opportunity to buy home sites far below market value. Lots that would normally sell at from $20,000 to $50,000 have come out of the "youth lot" program for around $3,000.

The basic conditions are that they live and work on the island at least 10 months of the year and plan to stay on the land for 10 years.

The program is limited. Only 10 lots — all of no less than an acre, but not much more — have been offered so far. But planning officials hope to expand it.

"We're in a situation where off-island developers are coming onto the island and pushing the full-time residents off by driving up prices," says Thomas Counter, OFL executive director. "Without the summer people we'd be nowhere. That's a basic fact that everyone here accepts. But the year-round residents provide the services, and unless we make it possible for them to stick around there won't be any summer people."

OLF is a private, nonprofit organization that protects open space on the island. It tries to juxtapose economic needs with traditional land uses, such as hiking, bicycling, farming, and particularly visual aesthetics — "trying to provide positive alternatives to the ceasing of traditions," in Counter's words.

OLF BEGAN ITS youth lot project by purchasing a parcel of "land threatened by over-development," says Counter. The organization sold a few lots of the parcel at full price to finance its own purchase and then put five smaller lots into the youth lot program. OLF followed similar steps in purchasing a second land parcel slated for development.

The Milstein-Picciones purchased their property last February. They were selected in a lottery that included those who had applied. They plan to start building next spring, doing most of the labor themselves, and hope to install a solar heating system.

The Milstein-Picciones will trade "labor hours" with a friend whose house they now are helping build.

Ann owns half of Rainy Day, a gift shop in Vineyard Haven, and Frank drives a tour bus in summers. During the off-season "I drive some nails and do anything else that comes along," he explained.

They sought refuge on the Vineyard from Brooklyn, N.Y., five years ago, leaving behind "a good income but not a good life."

WITHOUT THE youth lot program, buying land here "wouldn't even be a dream," says Ann Milstein.

Although the OLF program has been limited to 10 lots so far, Counter says there are signs that more such property will come on the market in the near future.

In a similar effort, the town of Chilmark, Mass., passed a bylaw in 1974 allowing developers to set aside youth lots smaller then the required three acres. Because the youth lots are smaller, they are cheaper. "It's a perennial problem everywhere on the island," says Drew Marvel, Chilmark planning board chairman. "Getting land for younger people so they can afford to stay here."

Martha's Vineyard offers land deals

by LYNDE McCORMICK

Ann Milstein and husband Frank Piccione are new landowners on Martha's Vineyard, but unlike most recent property buyers here they are not rich. They got "a deal."

In fact, the land was practically a "steal" in the light of current market prices, and island planning officials hope to open the way for more young couples to get the same kind of deal.

The difference between the Milstein-Piccione acquisition and other land purchases on the Vineyard is that the couple lives on the island all year, scratching a living from the low wages generally paid here. Island officials want such couples to settle permanently here because without them there would be no services to support the tourist economy.

A PROGRAM STARTED recently by the Martha's Vineyard Open Land Foundation (OLF) offers young couples who meet certain qualifications the opportunity to buy home sites far below market value. Lots that would normally sell at from $20,000 to $50,000 have come out of the "youth lot" program for around $3,000.

The basic conditions are that they live and work on the island at least 10 months of the year and plan to stay on the land for 10 years.

The program is limited. Only 10 lots — all of no less than an acre, but not much more — have been offered so far. But planning officials hope to expand it.

"We're in a situation where off-island developers are coming onto the island and pushing the full-time residents off by driving up prices," says Thomas Counter, OFL executive director. "Without the summer people we'd be nowhere. That's a basic fact that everyone here accepts. But the year-round residents provide the services, and unless we make it possible for them to stick around there won't be any summer people."

OLF is a private, nonprofit organization that protects open space on the island. It tries to juxtapose economic needs with traditional land uses, such as hiking, bicycling, farming, and particularly visual aesthetics — "trying to provide positive alternatives to the ceasing of traditions," in Counter's words.

OLF BEGAN ITS youth lot project by purchasing a parcel of "land threatened by over-development," says Counter. The organization sold a few lots of the parcel at full price to finance its own purchase and then put five smaller lots into the youth lot program. OLF followed similar steps in purchasing a second land parcel slated for development.

The Milstein-Picciones purchased their property last February. They were selected in a lottery that included those who had applied. They plan to start building next spring, doing most of the labor themselves, and hope to install a solar heating system.

The Milstein-Picciones will trade "labor hours" with a friend whose house they now are helping build.

Ann owns half of Rainy Day, a gift shop in Vineyard Haven, and Frank drives a tour bus in summers. During the off-season "I drive some nails and do anything else that comes along," he explained.

They sought refuge on the Vineyard from Brooklyn, N.Y., five years ago, leaving behind "a good income but not a good life."

WITHOUT THE youth lot program, buying land here "wouldn't even be a dream," says Ann Milstein.

Although the OLF program has been limited to 10 lots so far, Counter says there are signs that more such property will come on the market in the near future.

In a similar effort, the town of Chilmark, Mass., passed a bylaw in 1974 allowing developers to set aside youth lots smaller then the required three acres. Because the youth lots are smaller, they are cheaper. "It's a perennial problem everywhere on the island," says Drew Marvel, Chilmark planning board chairman. "Getting land for younger people so they can afford to stay here."

On the move

Billie Carlson

Billie Carlson, a lifetime member of the Million Dollar Club, has recently been appointed sales manager of the Arlington Heights office of Robert W. Starck & Co. Mrs. Carlson has exceeded the million dollar volume in sales and listings for the five years since she began her real estate career in the Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect area.

Milton John Booth (Jack), recently was named sales associate at the Elk Grove Village office of Gladstone Realtors.

Booth, a resident of Hoffman Estates, graduated from Thornton College in Harvey, Ill., with a major in Chemistry. He also is the Quality Control Director for Shumacher Electric Corporation. Raising tropical plants and woodworking are among his interests. He and wife Galina have two grown sons.

Harry Blume

Harry F. Blume joined the staff of Baird & Warner's Des Plaines office.

Blume holds a real estate broker's license and has been active in residential sales in the Northwest suburbs for four years. Previously he was a partner in Blume Construction Company, Des Plaines, for 10 years.

A graduate of Northwestern University with a bachelor of science degree, Blume also holds a Graduate of Realtors Institute designation. Blume is affiliated with the Town & Country chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, and was previously a vice-president of this group.

Judi Schenke

Judi Schenke joined the staff of Baird & Warner's Arlington Heights office.

Mrs. Schenke has been active in residential sales in the Northwest suburbs for 2½ years and has been cited for her outstanding sales achievement. She has attended the Real Estate Education Co. in Chicago.

She is a member of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors and a 10-year resident of the area, where she makes her home with her husband, Joseph, a United Airlines pilot.

Test reviewed on real estate

The Real Estate Education Co. will conduct an all-day review session Oct. 15 in Chicago for persons taking the Illinois real estate salesman's or broker's exam Oct. 18 and 19.

The review will be at the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge-O'Hare Airport, 8201 W. Higgins Rd., Chicago. The review begins at 9:30 a.m. Tuition for the salesman's review is $35, and for the broker's review, $40.

Tuition includes materials. Graduates of the Real Estate Eduation Company's prelicensing courses are eligible for a $10 discount.

Preregistration is required, by calling the company at 836-4444, or writing the firm at 500 N. Dearborn St., Chicago 60610.

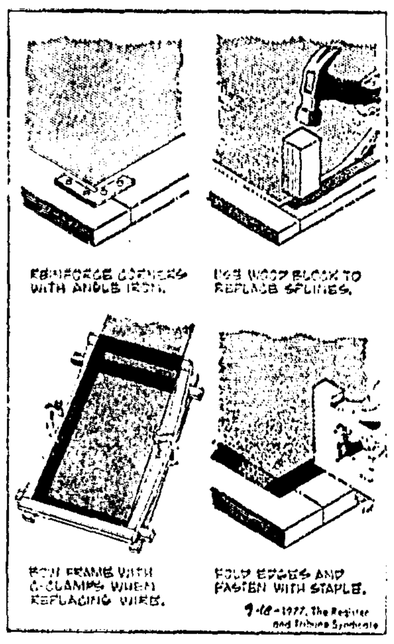
Now's time to get screens in shape

About the time tulips bloom, flies and mosquitos return to spend the summer. If your screens aren't in repair, you will have them for house guests.

Unless your home has combination windows, you will soon be removing your screens for winter storage. Hence, you'll have all winter to get them into good shape.

Examine the corners of wood-framed screens. Rain usually enters the connections and the joints eventually become loose. Use angle irons and wood screws to reinforce these corners and seal any cracks with putty, which should be painted later.



PATCHES ARE AVAILABLE for sealing small holes in metal screens, but be sure the patch is the same metal as the screen. Patches aren't things of beauty, but they will keep out insects.

If you must replace the screening, you should follow a few simple rules.

Some frames have the screening held in place by metal or plastic splines. Pry these out, being careful not to bend metal splines. Lay the new screening (the glass fiber type is recommended for homes) over the frame so it extends about one inch beyond the edge of the spline groove.

Replace the spline on one short side, tapping it into place with a wood block and hammer. Stretch the screening by hand and replace the spline on the opposite short side. Follow the same procedure on the long sides, being careful to keep the wires parallel to the frame. Cut off excess material with a knife.

ON WOOD FRAME screens, pry off the screen molding, starting at the center of each piece. Remove the old screening. Place wood blocks beneath the ends and bow the center with C-clamps. Except where there is a selvage edge, cut the screening to extend ½ inch beyond the point where it will be attached.

A staple gun is better than tacks for attaching the screening, so place three staples in one short side. Fold the screening along this edge and place staples one inch apart through the two thicknesses. Stretch the screening by hand and fasten the opposite end with three staples, fold and add the additional staples. The long sides are treated in the same manner after removing the clamps. Remove any excess with scissors and replace the screen molding.

Outpatients clinic

C.O.R. — I have spent many sleepless nights trying to figure a way to remove the pine needles from the wire screening above my son's swimming pool. If I ever find a solution, I shall let your know.

J.M.S. — Painters remove old caulking from around windows and doors by cutting and prying it out with a wood chisel. I also use this method. It is so easy that I doubt anyone has tried to find a better way.

A.D. — There are chemicals to be mixed with paint that will prevent spiders and other insects building nests on the outside of a house. I have never tried it for mud daubers, but it may possibly work there, too.

Dear House Doctor: I have just moved into a new home and every time it rains, the walls inside the house get wet. What can I do about this? — L. G.

Almost all homes in your area are constructed of concrete block and I assume this is the type you have. Rain will penetrate the masonry unless it is properly waterproofed. Have the walls sprayed with a transparent silicone waterproofing. This has no effect on the color of the house.

Dear House Doctor: When I moved into my house, the weight of the moving van cracked a large, triangular piece of concrete in the driveway. A neighbor said that if I patch it, the new concrete will not bond to the old. What is your opinion? — C.K.P.

Your neighbor was probably expressing his experience, which is not necessarily the case. New concrete can be made to bond to old, and building supply stores sell several products that can produce a firm bond. Good results can also be obtained by applying a soupy mix of cement and water just before the new concrete is placed.

I have an illustrated bulletin that describes methods for repairing both broken and cracked concrete. A copy is available by sending 20 cents in coin (no stamps or checks, please) and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to The House Doctor, in care of Real Estate, Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Il. 60006. Ask for Bulletin No. J-85. I must have the stamped, return envelope to fill your order.

The house doctor

Dear House Doctor: I recently purchased a home which has an outside wood hatch for access to the basement. The wood is in bad condition and does not provide security. What do you suggest? — T.Y.

Replace the wood hatch with a steel model, similar to ones made by the Bilco Company. These can be locked on the inside to prevent intrusion.

OWNER WANTS OFFER

Deluxe 3 bedroom, 2-story Colonial. Large wood paneled living room with brick fireplace, and separate dining room. Modern kitchen with wood cabinets, double oven and dishwasher. First floor laundry room. Basement includes finished family room area and loads of utility and storage space. Oak hardwood floors, carpeting and drapes included. Central air conditioning. This house is a prize set high on a thickly wooded ½ acre in prestigious Crystal Lake area. Fenced in play area and large play house-storage shed. Priced for quick sale – see it today.

Seniors are good house hunters

If you are in the market for a home, take a tip from some very knowledgeable people — senior citizens.

"The years have added wisdom and common sense to the over-65ers — and it becomes very apparent when it comes to their selection of a retirement home," said Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston.

IMIC works with lenders, such as savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks and commercial banks, by insuring the top 20 to 25 per cent of high-ratio conventional mortage loans.

"THEY GO HOUSE hunting with a practiced eye, know what they want and search until they find it," Goss says.

Goss listed basic "musts" for seniors:

• The fewer staircases, the better. A home all on one level means wear and tear — most certainly on the older individual.

• Bathrooms with good safety measures. Railings for easier maneuverability are a definite plus.

• More horizontal shelves, rather than vertical. Reaching high for household objects is not only tiring but has caused many a sprain and dislocation.

• More lighting fixtures on the walls rather than the ceilings. Changing light bulbs is a tedious task at best — always a major undertaking for seniors.

• Electrical outlets strategically placed, allowing simple accessibility — at hip or waist-levels to prevent stooping.

• Year-around, individual temperature controls — a health and energy saver.

• Safety treads on any steps or inclines.

• Large and easy-to-get-to walk-in closets.

• An intercom system is a deterrent to unwelcome intruders — a help in emergency situations.

• A nearby shopping area with a grocery store and pharmacy, a good restaurant, medical facilities — plus a theater and community center.

• Last, but not least, good neighborhood safety — patrolled and well-lit.

Advo-System in area

Advo-System Inc. has leased a 70,625-square-foot industrial building at 965 Chase Ave., Elk Grove Village, the real estate department of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States recently announced. THIS ARCHICENTER, an architecture museum and information center, was among the winners of the 1977 Distinguished Building Awards sponsored by the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Architecture. The plans were submitted by Hendrickson and Pran.

15 designs take honors in architectural contest

The Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Architects has named 15 designs as winners of its 1977 Distinguished Building Awards.

Winning designs were submitted by 11 architectural firms headquartered in Chicago. Of the winners, nine represent completed buildings, and six, not yet completed.

Included in the projects were four single-family residences; one summer retreat consisting of a modified corn crib; four office buildings; a gymnasium; a consumer loan facility; a museum; a library; a federal detention center; and a hanging arc bridge.

TWO JURIES made selections from 155 entries in the categories of completed or uncompleted projects.

Winning architects included Booth, Nagle & Hartray, Ltd.; Holabird & Root; Norman A. Koglin Associates; C. F. Murphy Associates; Harry Weese & Associates; Weese Seegers-Hickey Weese; T.Y. Lin International, with Hanson Engineers and Skidmore, Owings & Merrill; Hammond Beeby and Babka; Warren Hendrickson and Peter C. Pran, of the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle Campus; and Stanley Tigerman and Associates, Ltd.

Unusual designs included that of The Money Stores, by Koglin Associates for Harriscorp Finance Inc. The design is used for Harriscorp's retail consumer finance facilities in the Chicago area.

The William J. Campbell United States Courthouse Annex, by Weese & Associates for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons and General Services Administration, is the 27-story triangular detention center in Chicago's south Loop.

WEESE SEEGERS-HICKEY Weese took an existing structure — a corn crib in Central Illinois — and redid its interior as a weekend retreat. The exterior, surrounded by cornfields, was left untouched.

The Archicenter, an architecture museum and information center to be built in Chicago, and architects Hendrickson and Pran also were cited by the Chicago chapter of AIA.

The Ruck-a-Chucky Bridge to be built at Auburn Dam, Calif., received the AIA's honor award for 1977. The bridge is a hanging arc that will span 1,300 feet across a reservoir, and will be supported by suspended cables attached to the steep adjoining slopes of a canyon.

Do's and don'ts for home sellers

Although there are many things the seller of a home can do to make it more attractive to prospective buyers, there also are a few things he shouldn't do if his aim is to sell the home quickly and at a reasonable profit.

This advice was given in an article in the September issue of Realtors Review, a publication for the 500,000 members of the National Assn. of Realtors.

Harry G. Elmstrom, president of the National Assn. of Realtors, said, "The catch is in knowing what should and should not be done before putting your home on the market and the article makes many valid points in that regard."

HOMEOWNERS SHOULD spend time cleaning up their property, the article suggests. "First impressions count — in fact if the first impression isn't good, there probably won't be an opportunity for a second," Elmstrom said.

Following are a few things noted in the article that should be considered before offering the home for sale:

• Lawns, shrubs, and trees should be neat and trimmed. Overgrown plantings not only look untidy, they also can keep out necessary light and even cause some rooms to be damp.

• A good paint job can enhance attractive architectural features and minimize bad ones. Also, a top quality paint job which lasts six to eight years under normal conditions can be a "selling plus," Elmstrom said.

• Defective furnaces, leaky basements, damaged roofs should be corrected before putting the home on the market. Although corrective costs might be expensive, the resale value of the home could be lowered if the problem is left unattended.

• Broken windowpanes, torn screens, burnedout lightbulbs and missing tiles should be replaced; cracked walls replastered and repained; leaky faucets and faulty plumbing repaird. Unsightly stains in toilet bowls, bathtubs and sinks should be removed.

• Repair cracked basement floors with ready-mixed concrete.

• Inspect basement stairs for visibility — they may need to be painted a lighter color.

• Remove water marks from ceiling or walls. "Even though the leak may have been a one-time occurrence, a prospective house hunter mistakenly might assume that a problem exists," Elmstrom said.

• Clean out closets, kitchen cupboards, attics and basements, and get rid of broken, obsolete or unwanted items.

Following are a few points the seller should be aware of before considering major repair or renovation.

• Since most people buy on the basis of neighborhood rather than specific home, they usually look for the least expensive property in the best neighborhood they can afford, the article notes. A home that has been improved extensively until it's the most expensive on the block usually will take longer to sell, and probably will not bring enough money to repay the owner's total investment. "Most major renovations are unnecessary because most buyers will want to make their own," said Elmstrom.

• Ego improvements, such as a greenhouse or an over-elaborate kitchen, do not add value. "In fact, the prospective buyer may even ask for a reduction in price to cover the cost of removing or redoing them," Elmstrom said.

• Buyers are more realistic than sellers think. "If they have been looking around, they know what to expect in their price range, and they're not willing to pay more for extras they don't particularly want," Elmstrom said.

Cal's building design to save on energy costs

Cal's Inc., a West Dundee-based chain of restaurants, is incorporating energy-saving designs in new eateries in its attempt to cut utility costs by 50 per cent.

Cal's plans to build between 6 and 10 new restaurants by next summer, and will try to limit heat loss to less than 13 BTUs per square foot of exposed surfaces, said Carl Dietz, head of Cal's building division.

The aim of the corporation is a heat loss of 63,000 BTUs, compared to a loss of 150,000 BTUs for buildings of comparative size, Dietz said.

To accomplish this, Cal's plans to use brick and block construction, with 2-inch styrofoam and 2-inch coverings, such as glazed tile block, Dietz said. Urethane insulation will be used in roofs, while window heights have been cut from 8 feet to 2 feet 3 inches, Dietz said.

To further reduce heat loss, Cal's will place a berm up to 3½-feet wide on all sides of their new restaurants, Dietz said.

Cal's operates 31 restaurants in the Chicago area, northern Indiana and southern Wisconsin.

Do's and don'ts for home sellers

Although there are many things the seller of a home can do to make it more attractive to prospective buyers, there also are a few things he shouldn't do if his aim is to sell the home quickly and at a reasonable profit.

This advice was given in an article in the September issue of Realtors Review, a publication for the 500,000 members of the National Assn. of Realtors.

Harry G. Elmstrom, president of the National Assn. of Realtors, said, "The catch is in knowing what should and should not be done before putting your home on the market and the article makes many valid points in that regard."

HOMEOWNERS SHOULD spend time cleaning up their property, the article suggests. "First impressions count — in fact if the first impression isn't good, there probably won't be an opportunity for a second," Elmstrom said.

Following are a few things noted in the article that should be considered before offering the home for sale:

• Lawns, shrubs, and trees should be neat and trimmed. Overgrown plantings not only look untidy, they also can keep out necessary light and even cause some rooms to be damp.

• A good paint job can enhance attractive architectural features and minimize bad ones. Also, a top quality paint job which lasts six to eight years under normal conditions can be a "selling plus," Elmstrom said.

• Defective furnaces, leaky basements, damaged roofs should be corrected before putting the home on the market. Although corrective costs might be expensive, the resale value of the home could be lowered if the problem is left unattended.

• Broken windowpanes, torn screens, burnedout lightbulbs and missing tiles should be replaced; cracked walls replastered and repained; leaky faucets and faulty plumbing repaird. Unsightly stains in toilet bowls, bathtubs and sinks should be removed.

• Repair cracked basement floors with ready-mixed concrete.

• Inspect basement stairs for visibility — they may need to be painted a lighter color.

• Remove water marks from ceiling or walls. "Even though the leak may have been a one-time occurrence, a prospective house hunter mistakenly might assume that a problem exists," Elmstrom said.

• Clean out closets, kitchen cupboards, attics and basements, and get rid of broken, obsolete or unwanted items.

Following are a few points the seller should be aware of before considering major repair or renovation.

• Since most people buy on the basis of neighborhood rather than specific home, they usually look for the least expensive property in the best neighborhood they can afford, the article notes. A home that has been improved extensively until it's the most expensive on the block usually will take longer to sell, and probably will not bring enough money to repay the owner's total investment. "Most major renovations are unnecessary because most buyers will want to make their own," said Elmstrom.

• Ego improvements, such as a greenhouse or an over-elaborate kitchen, do not add value. "In fact, the prospective buyer may even ask for a reduction in price to cover the cost of removing or redoing them," Elmstrom said.

• Buyers are more realistic than sellers think. "If they have been looking around, they know what to expect in their price range, and they're not willing to pay more for extras they don't particularly want," Elmstrom said.

Cal's building design to save on energy costs

Cal's Inc., a West Dundee-based chain of restaurants, is incorporating energy-saving designs in new eateries in its attempt to cut utility costs by 50 per cent.

Cal's plans to build between 6 and 10 new restaurants by next summer, and will try to limit heat loss to less than 13 BTUs per square foot of exposed surfaces, said Carl Dietz, head of Cal's building division.

The aim of the corporation is a heat loss of 63,000 BTUs, compared to a loss of 150,000 BTUs for buildings of comparative size, Dietz said.

To accomplish this, Cal's plans to use brick and block construction, with 2-inch styrofoam and 2-inch coverings, such as glazed tile block, Dietz said. Urethane insulation will be used in roofs, while window heights have been cut from 8 feet to 2 feet 3 inches, Dietz said.

To further reduce heat loss, Cal's will place a berm up to 3½-feet wide on all sides of their new restaurants, Dietz said.

Cal's operates 31 restaurants in the Chicago area, northern Indiana and southern Wisconsin.

Consumer prices up .3% in nation; housing, food push Chicago up .5%

Consumer prices rose 0.3 per cent in August across the nation, the smallest increase in nine months, while Chicago area prices rose 0.5 per cent because of increases in housing and food costs.

The National Consumer Price Index stood at 183.3 in August, meaning goods and services costing $100 a decade ago now cost $183.30. This reflected an increase of 6.6 per cent more than last year.

The August increase, combined with a decline in average weekly earnings, nonetheless managed to further erode the buying power of the average American worker. Real spendable earnings declined 0.6 per cent in August.

THE MONTHLY increase, which translates into a 3.4 per cent annual rate, compared with increases averaging an annual rate of 9.4 per cent during the first half of 1977.

FOLLOWING A 0.4 per cent increase in July, August brought the smallest monthly rise in consumer prices since November, 1976. This cooling trend was good news for President Carter, who has promised inflation will not exceed 6.5 per cent in 1977.

The recent moderation of inflation has produced an annual inflation rate of slightly more than 5 per cent during the past three months — about half the rate set in the first quarter of the year.

Prices of food sold on grocery shelves rose 0.2 per cent in August, reversing a decline registered in the previous month. Although there was a decline for pork, poultry, eggs, sugar and coffee, prices turned up suddenly for fresh fruits and vegetables.

Chicago area food prices were up 0.9 per cent during August.

The current trend could produce a lower inflation rate than Carter has predicted, but economists generally agree that the key reason for this cooling trend — a moderation of food prices — is "unsustainable" in the months ahead.

Lance resigning forces Dow down

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks plunged to a 21-month low Wednesday as Bert Lance, President Carter's budget director, capped weeks of turmoil over his banking practices by resigning. Trading was the heaviest in almost eight weeks.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up about two points at the outset, fell 10.82 points to 840.96, the lowest level since it closed at 838.63 on Dec. 22, 1975. It was the worst loss since the Dow fell 11.09 on Sept. 9. The average, which gained 0.26 Tuesday, has dropped 163.69 points so far in 1977.

The selling stampede began at midafternoon when Carter announced he was delaying his scheduled news conference two hours until 5 p.m. EDT. The delay virtually confirmed speculation Lance would resign in light of the controversy over his banking practices.

LANCE, THE Georgia banker and close Carter friend, was viewed by most Wall Streeters as the conservative business force in the Carter administration. Investor uncertainty will remain until Carter selects a new budget director.

Many traders also sold because rumors circulated Wall Street that the Federal Reserve Board Thursday would report a surge in the nation's money supply. Banks recently raised their prime lending rate a quarter point to 7¼ per cent because of Fed credit tightening to hold down money supply growth.

Selling also was sparked by reports that Israeli tanks and troops pushed deep into Lebanon, pounding Palestinian positions with artillery barrages. Palestinian gunners retaliated by shelling an Israeli border town. Investors feared a war could stop the flow of Middle East oil.

Two to head Herald retail ad sales units

James M. Salvetti and Gary Colabuono have been appointed division sales managers of The Daily Herald's retail advertising department.

Colabuono will be responsible for the western division and Salvetti will handle the eastern division.

The two sales units were created by Robert Miller, vice president/advertising, in a reorganization of the sales staff.

Salvetti joined The Daily Herald sales staff in 1969 as a sales representative. In 1973 he was promoted to retail sales manager and earlier this year to national advertising manager.

A resident of Bloomingdale, he attended DePaul University and the University of Illinois.

Colabuono joined the newspaper in 1974 and was named special projects manager earlier this year. He is a graduate of Northern Illinois University and lives in Streamwood.

'Cheaper flights not advertised'

New, cheaper airline flights could save consumers hundreds of dollars per trip but they either are not being advertised in newspapers at all or the advertisements are too sketchy to be helpful, a study showed Wednesday. Unless things change, the sponsors of the survey said, the liberalized charter fares, which consumer groups and others have been trying to get for years, may disappear because they aren't being used. The survey, paid for by the American Express Co. in cooperation with the Consumer Federation of America and the Federal Office of Consumer Affairs, covered advertisements appearing in travel sections of 11 big-city newspapers over an eight-week period.

Alaska pipe said to be sabotaged

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. said Tuesday a discovered leak in the Alaska pipeline, which spilled 3,500 gallons of diesel fuel, was caused by sabotage. The spill occurred from a valve that had been deliverately left open, according to Beverly Ward, a public affairs employe of the company. The spill was "malicious and intentional," Mrs. Ward said. It occured Sept. 12. Mrs. Ward said she learned of it Sept. 19. "I'm sure the government agencies all knew on the 13th," she said. "The first I heard of it was when one of the local radio stations called me. He had probably gotten it from one of the weekly reports from government agencies. "I hadn't and I was pretty darn unhappy."

Ford to replace tank filler caps

The Ford Motor Co. Wednesday said it will replace the fuel tank filler caps on 322,000 of its 1977 Granadas because of possible gasoline leakage if the cars are involved in rear-end collisions. Ford said it was not recalling the affected cars, but will mail new gas tank caps to owners beginning next month. Supply plans call for owners to receive replacement caps by the end of the year.

U.S. Steel petition upsets Japan

Japan Wednesday said it was "regrettable' that U.S. Steel Corp. filed a petition with the U.S. Treasury Dept. seeking relief from dumping Japanese carbon steel products in Amrica. Officials of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said since the petition did not include the European steel manufacturing industry, U.S. Steel has some "intention" against Japan.

New wage sure path to joblessness

NEW YORK — Wonderful news, gang: The unemployment problem in America must be a heck of a lot less serious than we all had thought. How else can you explain the alacrity of our noble congressmen in passing so-called minimum wage legislation whose chief effect will be to throw more people out of work?

Much has been made of the fact that the AFL-CIO did not get everything it demanded from the House of

Louis Rukeyser

Representatives, which is like saying that a cannibal was denied the last three toes on the left foot.

Quite a meal already had been delivered: a rise in the minimum wage rate from $2.30 per hour now to $2.65 next year, $2.85 in 1979 and $3.05 in 1980, coupled with rejection of a proposal that teen-agers be allowed to work for six months for 15 per cent less.

By now, no one who is not actually on George Meany's staff can seriously believe that such increases in the minimum wage rate truly help poorer Americans to live better. What they are concerned with is their wage, not some theoretical wage rate that serves in practice to make their genuine wage zero. And by now the evidence is overwhelming that kicking up the minimum wage rate every time Meany waves his cigar operates in the real world only to eliminate hundreds of thousands of jobs.

UP TO TWO decades ago, the differences between adults and teenaged unemployment — and, for that matter, between black and white teenaged unemployment — were not nearly so large. They have escalated in direct proportion to the successive massive increases in the national minimum wage.

Consider:

- Separate studies by economists at Kansas State University and the University of Michigan detailed the substantial teen job losses that occurred after the minimum wage increases in 1966 and 1974.
- Jack W. Carlson, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, estimated that the new bill would cause 364,000 more teenaged jobs to be eliminated. "Every labor market group would be affected and minority youths would be hurt more than others," he said.
- U.S. blacks, most of whose spokesmen previously had been conned into thinking the minimum wage increases were helping them, are beginning to realize that such legislative maneuvers actually harm those whom they purport to assist.

For example, Walter Williams, a black economics professor from Temple University, points out that the minimum wage allows bigoted employers to discriminate without cost.

And I chatted the other day with Andrew F. Brimmer, the former member of the Federal Reserve Board, who also happens to be black and angry.

"A growing body of statistical and other evidence accumulated by economists, particularly by those outside the government and not connected with the trade union movement, shows that increases in the statutory minimum wage dampen the expansion of employment and lengthen the lineup of those seeking jobs," Brimmer said. "Advances in the minimum wage have a noticeably adverse impact on young people — with the effects on black teen-agers being considerably more severe."

SO WHOM ARE we trying to kid? The AFL-CIO isn't trying to boost the minimum wage again and again and again so its members will have larger paychecks. They already earn far more than the minimum. The average wage for all adults is nearly twice the $2.50 average per teenager.

Raising the minimum wage simply makes it less and less economical for employers to hire the worst educated, least trained of Americans, the ones whose disastrously high unemployment rates already are flashing scarlet emergency signals.

'Cheaper flights not advertised'

New, cheaper airline flights could save consumers hundreds of dollars per trip but they either are not being advertised in newspapers at all or the advertisements are too sketchy to be helpful, a study showed Wednesday. Unless things change, the sponsors of the survey said, the liberalized charter fares, which consumer groups and others have been trying to get for years, may disappear because they aren't being used. The survey, paid for by the American Express Co. in cooperation with the Consumer Federation of America and the Federal Office of Consumer Affairs, covered advertisements appearing in travel sections of 11 big-city newspapers over an eight-week period.

Alaska pipe said to be sabotaged

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. said Tuesday a discovered leak in the Alaska pipeline, which spilled 3,500 gallons of diesel fuel, was caused by sabotage. The spill occurred from a valve that had been deliverately left open, according to Beverly Ward, a public affairs employe of the company. The spill was "malicious and intentional," Mrs. Ward said. It occured Sept. 12. Mrs. Ward said she learned of it Sept. 19. "I'm sure the government agencies all knew on the 13th," she said. "The first I heard of it was when one of the local radio stations called me. He had probably gotten it from one of the weekly reports from government agencies. "I hadn't and I was pretty darn unhappy."

Ford to replace tank filler caps

The Ford Motor Co. Wednesday said it will replace the fuel tank filler caps on 322,000 of its 1977 Granadas because of possible gasoline leakage if the cars are involved in rear-end collisions. Ford said it was not recalling the affected cars, but will mail new gas tank caps to owners beginning next month. Supply plans call for owners to receive replacement caps by the end of the year.

U.S. Steel petition upsets Japan

Japan Wednesday said it was "regrettable' that U.S. Steel Corp. filed a petition with the U.S. Treasury Dept. seeking relief from dumping Japanese carbon steel products in Amrica. Officials of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said since the petition did not include the European steel manufacturing industry, U.S. Steel has some "intention" against Japan.

New wage sure path to joblessness

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Wonderful news, gang: The unemployment problem in America must be a heck of a lot less serious than we all had thought. How else can you explain the alacrity of our noble congressmen in passing so-called minimum wage legislation whose chief effect will be to throw more people out of work?

Much has been made of the fact that the AFL-CIO did not get everything it demanded from the House of Representatives, which is like saying that a cannibal was denied the last three toes on the left foot.

Quite a meal already had been delivered: a rise in the minimum wage rate from $2.30 per hour now to $2.65 next year, $2.85 in 1979 and $3.05 in 1980, coupled with rejection of a proposal that teen-agers be allowed to work for six months for 15 per cent less.

By now, no one who is not actually on George Meany's staff can seriously believe that such increases in the minimum wage rate truly help poorer Americans to live better. What they are concerned with is their wage, not some theoretical wage rate that serves in practice to make their genuine wage zero. And by now the evidence is overwhelming that kicking up the minimum wage rate every time Meany waves his cigar operates in the real world only to eliminate hundreds of thousands of jobs.

UP TO TWO decades ago, the differences between adults and teenaged unemployment — and, for that matter, between black and white teenaged unemployment — were not nearly so large. They have escalated in direct proportion to the successive massive increases in the national minimum wage.

Consider:

• Separate studies by economists at Kansas State University and the University of Michigan detailed the substantial teen job losses that occurred after the minimum wage increases in 1966 and 1974.

• Jack W. Carlson, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, estimated that the new bill would cause 364,000 more teenaged jobs to be eliminated. "Every labor market group would be affected and minority youths would be hurt more than others," he said.

• U.S. blacks, most of whose spokesmen previously had been conned into thinking the minimum wage increases were helping them, are beginning to realize that such legislative maneuvers actually harm those whom they purport to assist.

For example, Walter Williams, a black economics professor from Temple University, points out that the minimum wage allows bigoted employers to discriminate without cost.

And I chatted the other day with Andrew F. Brimmer, the former member of the Federal Reserve Board, who also happens to be black and angry.

"A growing body of statistical and other evidence accumulated by economists, particularly by those outside the government and not connected with the trade union movement, shows that increases in the statutory minimum wage dampen the expansion of employment and lengthen the lineup of those seeking jobs," Brimmer said. "Advances in the minimum wage have a noticeably adverse impact on young people — with the effects on black teen-agers being considerably more severe."

SO WHOM ARE we trying to kid? The AFL-CIO isn't trying to boost the minimum wage again and again and again so its members will have larger paychecks. They already earn far more than the minimum. The average wage for all adults is nearly twice the $2.50 average per teenager.

Raising the minimum wage simply makes it less and less economical for employers to hire the worst educated, least trained of Americans, the ones whose disastrously high unemployment rates already are flashing scarlet emergency signals.

Economic 'pause' could get worse

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — It's usually a sign of trouble ahead when an administration in power admits there is a "pause" in economic activity.

Such was the case in early 1976 when former Economic Council Chairman Alan Greenspan startled the politicians in the Ford administration with his admission that the economy had hit a flat spot. It continued to slide, in fact, until turning up again early this year.

Now, calling it a "lull," Economic Council Chairman Charles L. Schultze and White House Press Secretary Jody Powell have made the same admission. The economy has slid off from a growth of 7.5 per cent in the first quarter to 6.1 per cent in the second quarter, and to something decidedly less in the current quarter.

SCHULTZE IS hoping that the growth rate will be within sight of 5 per cent in the third quarter and a little better than that in the fourth quarter. But Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressinal Budget Office, thinks the economy will grow by only 4 per cent in the second half of the year.

It becomes painfully clear that we needed the $50 tax rebaate, which was killed through the joint efforts of Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns and Budget Director Bert Lance.

The rebate was not intended to be a long-term fix. But an extra $10 billion thrust would have propped up retail sales until some of the direct job-creating expenditures in the stimulus program had become effective.

The fact is that a second-half slowdown in the U.S. economy would be bad news, not only here, but in the rest of the world, which looks to the United States, West Germany and Japan as the economic spark plugs for the Western democracies.

The touchiest problem of all — here and abroad — is unemployment, especially among minority groups and young persons. It sounds somewhat naive for Carter, this late in the game, to be directing his Secretary of Labor and Economic Council Chairman to make a hurried report about the reasons for rising unemployment among black persons.

The fact is unemployment has been edging down all year for whites, and creeping up all year for blacks.

Thus the overall unemployment rate has improved from 7.4 per cent in the first quarter to the 7.1 per cent level just reported for August. But the improvement was all white — from 6.7 to 6.1 per cent, while the black jobless rate jumped from 12.8 to 14.5 per cent.

CARTER HAS had plenty of warning. A month ago, 38 concerned senators and congressmen warned Carter that the seeming recovery shielded weak spots and, in effect, was a "two-tier" affair benefitting mostly white adult males.

They noted as well that in contrast to the national 7 per cent rate, the jobless level was substantially more than that in many cities.

It's not surprising that Carter's sudden concern over black unemployment is greeted with skepticism by black leaders. Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, observed that the new numbers show "the futility of the Carter administration's social and economic policies."

Economic 'pause' could get worse

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — It's usually a sign of trouble ahead when an administration in power admits there is a "pause" in economic activity.

Such was the case in early 1976 when former Economic Council Chairman Alan Greenspan startled the politicians in the Ford administration with his admission that the economy had hit a flat spot. It continued to slide, in fact, until turning up again early this year.

Now, calling it a "lull," Economic Council Chairman Charles L. Schultze and White House Press Secretary Jody Powell have made the same admission. The economy has slid off from a growth of 7.5 per cent in the first quarter to 6.1 per cent in the second quarter, and to something decidedly less in the current quarter.

SCHULTZE IS hoping that the growth rate will be within sight of 5 per cent in the third quarter and a little better than that in the fourth quarter. But Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressinal Budget Office, thinks the economy will grow by only 4 per cent in the second half of the year.

It becomes painfully clear that we needed the $50 tax rebaate, which was killed through the joint efforts of Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns and Budget Director Bert Lance.

The rebate was not intended to be a long-term fix. But an extra $10 billion thrust would have propped up retail sales until some of the direct job-creating expenditures in the stimulus program had become effective.

The fact is that a second-half slowdown in the U.S. economy would be bad news, not only here, but in the rest of the world, which looks to the United States, West Germany and Japan as the economic spark plugs for the Western democracies.

The touchiest problem of all — here and abroad — is unemployment, especially among minority groups and young persons. It sounds somewhat naive for Carter, this late in the game, to be directing his Secretary of Labor and Economic Council Chairman to make a hurried report about the reasons for rising unemployment among black persons.

The fact is unemployment has been edging down all year for whites, and creeping up all year for blacks.

Thus the overall unemployment rate has improved from 7.4 per cent in the first quarter to the 7.1 per cent level just reported for August. But the improvement was all white — from 6.7 to 6.1 per cent, while the black jobless rate jumped from 12.8 to 14.5 per cent.

CARTER HAS had plenty of warning. A month ago, 38 concerned senators and congressmen warned Carter that the seeming recovery shielded weak spots and, in effect, was a "two-tier" affair benefitting mostly white adult males.

They noted as well that in contrast to the national 7 per cent rate, the jobless level was substantially more than that in many cities.

It's not surprising that Carter's sudden concern over black unemployment is greeted with skepticism by black leaders. Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, observed that the new numbers show "the futility of the Carter administration's social and economic policies."

Try shrimp for a quick dinner

Cooking is like writing a letter — you have to be in the mood. For days you want a simple supper, try a shrimp salad or casserole.

Shrimp appears among the more expensive seafood choices but the salad and casserole recipes contain economical extenders such as a frozen or canned vegetables, rice or noodles. Top with the appropriate dressing or sauce for a dinner pleasing to the eye and the palate.

The recipes use one pound of fresh or frozen shrimp which has been peeled and deveined. If you buy shrimp in the shell, 2 to 2½ pounds gives about 1 pound of cooked, shelled shrimp. One pound of shrimp in the shell or ½ pound of cooked shrimp without the shell or ½ pound of cooked shrimp without the shell makes 3 servings. Five large boiled shrimp contain 70 calories and 15 grams of protein, about one third of the daily protein needs for adults.

Garden Medley Salad

- 1 pound fresh or frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp
- 1 can (17 ounces) young tender sweet peas, drained
- 1 can (8½ ounces) diagonal-cut green beans, drained
- 1 jar (2½ ounces) whole mushrooms, drained
- 1 jar (2 ounces) sliced pimiento, drained
- 1 cup chopped celery
- ⅓ cup chopped onion
- ⅓ cup chopped green pepper

Dressing

- ¼ cup salad oil
- ½ cup cider vinegar
- ½ cup sugar
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1½ teaspoons celery seed

Prepare shrimp according to package directions; drain and cool under cold running water. Drain thoroughly. Gently combine peas, beans, mushrooms, pimiento, celery, onion, and green pepper in a medium-sized bowl. Carefully stir in shrimp. Combine all DRESSING ingredients and gently toss with vegetable/shrimp mixture to coat evenly. Cover and chill 4 to 6 hours. Drain and serve in a lettuce-lined bowl. Serves 6 to 8.

Shrimp 'N Shells

- 1 pound fresh or frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp
- 1 package (7 ounces) shell macaroni
- 1 can (17 ounces) small early peas, drained
- 1 jar (2½ ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1 cup finely chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons diced pimiento

Dressing

- 1⅓ cups salad dressing or mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons milk
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Prepare shrimp according to package directions; drain and cool under cold running water. Drain thoroughly. Cook shells according to package directions; drain and cool under cold running water. Drain thoroughly. Combine shrimp and shells with peas, mushrooms, celery and pimiento. MAKE DRESSING: combine salad dressing and milk until smooth. Add remaining ingredients. Gently stir dressing into shrimp/macaroni mixture. Cover and chill 3 to 6 hours before serving. Serves 6 to 8.

Shrimp Spectacular

- 1 package (11 ounces) frozen rice with bell peppers and parsley
- 1 pound fresh or frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons sliced green onions
- 1 jar (2½ ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained

Dressing

- ½ cup dairy sour cream
- 2 tablespoons salad dressing or mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 7 large or 8 medium ripe tomatoes

Cook rice according to package directions. Prepare shrimp according to package directions; drain and cool under cold running water. Drain thoroughly. (If desired, reserve a few shrimp for garnish.) In medium bowl, combine rice, shrimp, celery, onions and mushrooms. Cover and refrigerate. At serving time combine all DRESSING ingredients and stir into shrimp/rice mixture. With stem end down, cut tomatoes into six sections leaving base intact. Spread wedges slightly and carefully scoop out pulp. Spoon salad into shells. If desired, garnish with reserved shrimp. Makes filling for 7 large or 8 medium-sized tomatoes.

Saucy Shrimp Squares

- 1 pound fresh or frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp
- 2 packages (11 ounces each) frozen rice with peas and mushrooms
- 1½ cups milk
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
- 1 jar (2 ounches) sliced pimiento, drained and chopped
- ¼ cup diced onion
- ¼ cup chopped parsley

Shrimp Sauce

- 1 can (10¾ ounce) condensed cream of shrimp soup
- ½ cup dairy sour cream
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- ¼ teaspoon salt

Prepare shrimp according to package directions; drain and set aside. Cook rice according to package directions. In a large bowl, combine milk, eggs, Worcestershire sauce and salt. Stir in rice, shrimp and remaining ingredients. Pour into a greased 7 x 11-inch baking dish. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven for 55 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes before cutting. MAKE SAUCE: Combine all ingredients and heat; do not boil. Serve over shrimp squares. Serves 6 to 8.

Shrimp Superb

- 2 packages (11 ounches each) frozen long grain white and wild rice
- 1 pound fresh or frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp (reserve 4 to 6 for garnish)
- 1 cup bias-cut celery
- 1 jar (4½ ounces) or 2 jars (2½ ounces each) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ½ cup sliced green onions
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 1/8 to ¼ teaspoon pepper

Topping

- 1 can (10¾ ounce) condensed cream of mushroom soup
- 1⅓ cups dairy sour cream
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- ⅔ cup dry bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Cook rice according to package directions. Prepare shrimp according to package directions; drain and set aside. In a large skillet, saute celery and mushrooms in butter until celery is crisp and tender. Stir in onions, pimiento, pepper, rice and shrimp. Spoon shrimp/rice mixture into a lightly greased 2-quart shallow baking dish. Combine soup and sour cream; spoon over shrimp/rice mixture. Mix butter with bread crumbs and parsley; sprinkle on top of casserole. Bake in preheated 325-degree oven for 30 minutes. Garnish with reserved shrimp and bake an additional 5 minutes. Serves 6 to 8.

Creamy Shrimp Paprikash

- 1 pound fresh or frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp
- 2 cups medium egg noodles, uncooked
- 1 package (10 ounces) little baby early peas frozen in butter sauce
- 1 jar (2½ ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon paprika
- Dash pepper
- Grated Parmesan cheese, optional

Prepare shrimp and noodles according to package directions; drain and set aside. Cook peas according to package directions. Meanwhile, in a large skillet, saute mushrooms and onion in butter until onion is translucent. Stir in sour cream, cream cheese, salt, paprika and pepper. Gently fold in shrimp, peas and noodles; heat to serving temperature but do not boil. Turn into serving dish and sprinkle generously with Parmesan cheese, if desired. Serves 6 to 8.

The munchies

Eatbook offers sweets, sandwiches and snacks to ease those pangs

Not everyone likes to munch. There are those who eat three meals a day with a glass or two of water in between.

But for people who have an affair going with their refrigerator, a delectable snack often poses a problem. Whether it's sweets or salads, the problem is what to eat and how to fix it.

For example, a sweet snack includes an endless list of cakes, pies, cookies and doughnuts. Sandwich nibbles mean choosing both the bread and filling. And once you pick a snack, it doesn't take long for between-meal favorites to become passe, unappealing and just boring.

, If you stand at the refrigerator with the door open wondering what to eat next, "The Munchies Eatbook" by Alice and Eliot Hess, is for you. The book is published by Vintage Books. The book is not new, first published in 1973, but offers a wealth of ideas for the addicted snacker.

NOT ONLY CAN the muncher increase his or her recipe file but also learn intriguing ways to eat. Enjoy the taste of fresh strawberries or try the chocolate chip and coconut exercise, a feat of coordination reserved for the more daring set.

Even the calorie-conscious snacker can indulge in yummy ideas for fruits and beverages. So as you wait for that super sandwich under the broiler, read ahead to plan for the next attack.

O. J. BANANA

Cut banana in half lengthwise. Dip in orange juice so the banana is covered. Roll in shredded coconut and place in a greased baking pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes. Baste with juice drippings and sprinkle with cinnamon or nutmeg.

Pick your favorite dipper - be it fruit or vegetables - and dunk in a creamy dip.

OLIVE CHEESE WITH NUTS

Mix ½ pint of creamed cottage cheese with 2 o4 3 tablespoons of grated Cheddar cheese, sliced ripe olives, chopped walnuts and salt, to taste.

Melt 4 tablespoons butter (or margerine) in pan. Add 6 tablespoons

If you have left over noodles, prepare a noodle pancake.

NOODLE PANCAKES

2 cups cooked noodles

2 eggs
¼ cup softened raisins
1 teaspoon salt

Mix ingredients together in a bowl, then pour into a buttered frying pan and brown on both sides. Sprinkle with sugar and serve.

A softened raisin is a raisin that has had its wrinkles removed by the simple operation of soaking in water.

COCOA TOAST

Melt 4 tablespoons butter (or margerine) in pan. Add 6 tablespoons cocoa and 5 tablesepoons sugar. Spread on toast, roll or muffin. For a little spice, sprinkle cinnamon on top.

Snacks on a toothpick make immediate eating possible.

• Spear a cube of American cheese, a walnut half and a sweet pickle.

• Spear cube of smoked cheese, then a grape.

• Spear a cube of pineapple, a cube of cheddar cheese and a maraschino cherry.

Did you find a package of rolls in the refrigerator? Here's a recipe just for you.

MOON ROLLS

Before baking a package of refrigerated crescent rolls, spread with a sharp cheese spread and fill with tuna or cocktail franks. Roll up and bake as directed.

Try one of these low-cal but refreshing snacks.

APPLE COLA

Pour 4 ounces of chilled unsweetened apple juice in your glass. Fill completely with an ice-cold low-calorie cola soda and float a slice of lemon or lime on top.

SPICED TOMATO

Combine 1 cup plain yogurt, 1 or 2 sliced green onions, 1 small cubed tomato, 1 tablespoon basil and salt to taste.

ANGEL APPLE ANGEL

Whipped-cream cakes are definitely out. Therefore, for your pleasure, cut a homemade or storebought angel food cake in half lengthwise. Make a mixture of unsweetened applesauce and cinnamon to taste; spread thickly between two layers of the cake. Let the applesauce mixture soak into the fluffy white cake and then cut yourself a piece and enjoy.

Best buys this week

Fall is here and it's time for apples, one of the best buys this week in area grocery stores. Jonathan, McIntosh and Golden Delicious are now in season and perfect for your favorite apple pie. Choose a Red Delicious for eating and salads.

Look for specials on whole fryer chickens and chickens parts this week also. For vegetables, choose head lettuce, winter squash and canned corn and green beans. Don't forget the margarine and paper goods, also on sale this week.

Fresh produce consumption up

Fresh fruit and vegetable consumption is up as the average American ate 86.6 pounds of fresh fruit, an increase of nearly three pounds, and 100.2 pounds of fresh vegetables in 1976. Although the fresh vegetable figure does not include potatoes, vegetable consumption is up 4 per cent since 1970.

Fruit cocktail ideas

For a delicious gingerbread topping, blend softened cream cheese with partially drained fruit cocktail. Its refreshing tang pleases all tastes.

If your family likes a touch of ginger now and then, add some chopped candied ginger to canned fruit cocktail. It makes a delicious topping over soft ice cream or frozen yogurt.

FRESH MEAT AVAILABLE WHENEVER YOUR JEWEL IS OPEN, EXCEPT SUNDAYS AND HOLIDAYS.

You see, we have very exacting standards for our birds at Jewel. And, if they don't measure up, we don't buy them or sell them to anybody! A Jewel bird must be fully formed, meaty, tender and juicy. He must have no missing parts or skin tears and no blemishes. And, he's got to be flavorful!

How do we make sure there are no bad birds in our flock? Well, first of all, all our poultry must have earned the government's grade "A" stamp — the highest poultry seal. And to be sure it stays plucky until you get it home, we put our chicken in Jewel's Chill Pac. The Chill Pac is just cold enough to freeze the moisture in the poultry without freezing the meat itself. It all makes for a pretty fine bird. Makes for a pretty fine dinner, too! From Jewel!

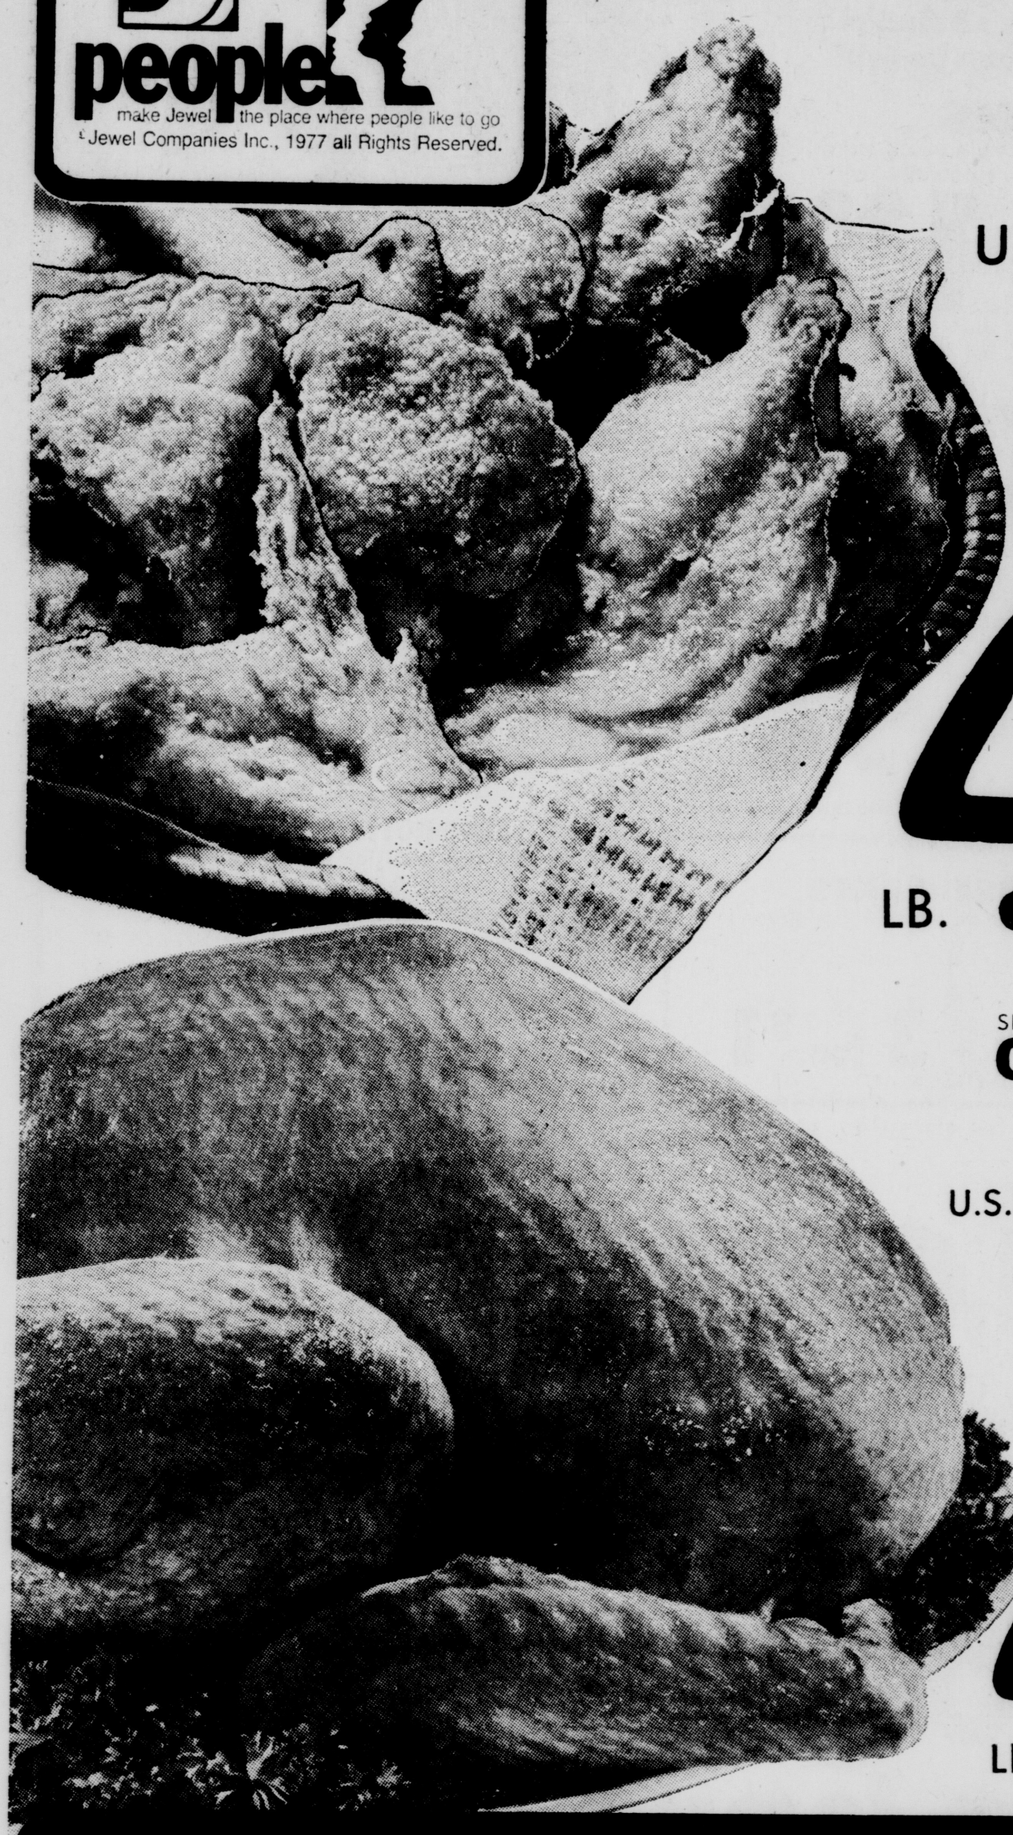
When you know poultry, you know it's best at Jewel!

PRICES EFFECTIVE, UNLESS OTHERWISE INDICATED, WED., SEPT. 21 THRU SAT., SEPT. 24, 1977, AT ALL JEWEL STORES IN COOK, LAKE DUPAGE AND MC HENRY COUNTIES (EXCLUDING RIVER OAKS AND ELGIN).

FRESH MEAT AVAILABLE WHENEVER YOUR JEWEL IS OPEN, EXCEPT SUNDAYS AND HOLIDAYS.



You see, we have very exacting standards for our birds at Jewel. And, if they don't measure up, we don't buy them or sell them to anybody! A Jewel bird must be fully formed, meaty, tender and juicy. He must have no missing parts or skin tears and no blemishes. And, he's got to be flavorful!

How do we make sure there are no bad birds in our flock? Well, first of all, all our poultry must have earned the government's grade "A" stamp — the highest poultry seal. And to be sure it stays plucky until you get it home, we put our chicken in Jewel's Chill Pac. The Chill Pac is just cold enough to freeze the moisture in the poultry without freezing the meat itself. It all makes for a pretty fine bird. Makes for a pretty fine dinner, too! From Jewel!

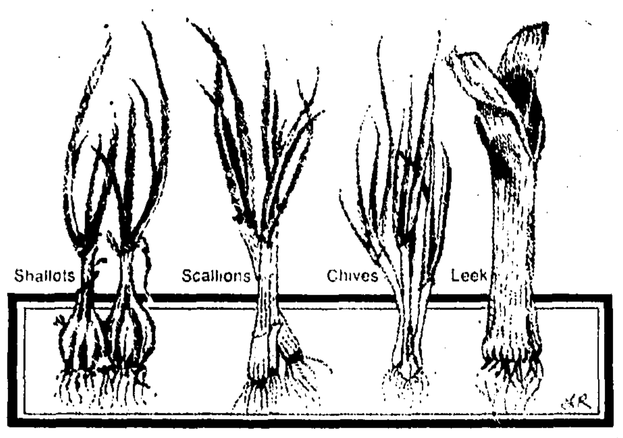
Green onions add zest

Green onions add zest to meals and deserve attention for their menu interest and good nutrition.

A green onion is essentially an onion harvested very young with the green leaves tender enough to chop and eat. Types of green onions are:



SCALLIONS:
Any shoots from the white onion varieties that are pulled before the bulb has formed. They include the tender green stem.

LEEKS:
Similar in appearance to scallions, only much larger, with flat green leaves and a white stalk with a diameter of about one and one-half inches and 6 to 8 inches in length.

Fresh approach

SHALLOTS:
Have small clustered bulbs. Used like garlic only is much milder. Sometimes sold in pots in produce departments.

CHIVES:
Tiny onions whose root and tops are both used for flavoring. Generally sold in pots, all green and pencil-lead thin.

SHOPPING TIPS:
Look for fresh, green tops, medium-sized necks, well-blanched for 2 to 3 inches from the root. Should be young, crisp, tender. Wilted or discolored tops indicate poor quality.

TO STORE:
Keep in the refrigerator in a plastic bag or in hydrator. Use quickly.

NUTRITION:
Green onions, including the tops, are a good source of vitamin C, vitamin A and iron.

TO SERVE:
A favorite to eat raw. Chop green tops to mix with cottage cheese or add to salad. Very good in Chinese cookery. Scallions can be cooked briefly and served like asparagus or with cream sauce. Leeks also good cooked as vegetable and sauced or used to make soup, such as potato and leek cream soup.

Casseroles handy time-savers

Eileen Kelly

Let's learn to micro-cook

Casseroles are a delicious crutch we can lean on quite contentedly. Besides being easy to prepare, they are tasty, usually economical and lend themselves readily to staggered dinner hours. As I've explained before, the purpose of this column is to help you adapt your regular menus to microwave cooking. I think you'll agree with me when I cite the tuna casserole among the list of regulars on the weekly menu.

Cooking a tuna casserole in the microwave oven provides even more convenience. If you wish to saute onions, peppers, celery or mushrooms to add to the casserole, you do this as your first step in the glass casserole you will be using to continue preparating the meal. The dish used in preparation also will be the serving dish, eliminating unnecessary cleanup of pots and pans.

The basic sketch for a tuna casserole is the tuna, of course, plus a sauce, usually soup-based, additional milk or water, either rice or noodles and any special touches such as curry powder, pimiento, mushrooms and perhaps a crunch topping of potato chips or canned french fried onion rings.

PREPARE THIS mixture in a large enough covered glass casserole and then heat in the microwave oven on high for 8-10 minutes. Stir at least once. A microwave oven with a variety of settings would cook this dish on reheat or one setting below high. Then let the casserole stand, covered for 5 minutes. Sprinkle some crushed potato chips or the onion rings on top and serve. If you have prepared this dish ahead of time and refrigerated it, then you will have to add about 5 minutes to the cooking time.

In hopes you read a previous column covering the preparation of rice in a microwave let's use a recipe including rice.

TUNA RICE CASSEROLE

2 quart covered glass casserole

Using the high setting, saute 1/3 cup chopped onion and 1 cup chopped green pepper in 6 tablespoons butter or margarine for five minutes in the uncovered glass casserole.

Blend in ¼ cup all-purpose flour and gradually stir in 1 cup of milk.

Cook two minutes on high, stirring several times.

Add 2 cups of cooked rice, stir well.

Add 2 cans (6½ ounces each) tuna.

1 can (10¾ ounces) cream mushroom soup

room soup

1 can (10¾ ounces) cream chicken or cream of celery soup

1 jar or can (2 to 3 ounces) of mushrooms stems and pieces, drained

Mix well and microwave on high or reheat for approximately 10 minutes or until well heated. Stir several times during the cooking period. Let stand, covered for five minutes, then serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Give spinach new flavor

Spinach is that stringy green vegetable that often brings cries of "But, mon, do I have to eat it?" It is true that a colorful salad or a cheesy potato surpasses the serving of cooked spinach in appearance and in taste — at least for the spinach haters. But spinach gives iron and vitamins A and C to the diet and is easily combined with other foods for appetizers or a main dish.

If yoi want to give spinach another chance at your house, try dumplings made with spinach. A blend of spinach and two cheeses, ricotta and parmesan, plus other seasonings gives a light mixture for dumplings or manicotti filling.

For dumplings, follow recipe directions, chilling mixture before shaping into balls. For manicotti, omit bread crumbs and eggs, fill manicotti shells and top with your favorite tomato sauce. Bake for 30 to 45 mniutes at 375 degrees. Use the spinach and ricotta filling also as a nutritious sandwich spread on whole wheat bread.

CALORIE COUNTS:

Spinach is low in calories with 23 calories for ½ cup. One cup of ricotta cheese made with partially skim milk contains 340 calories and 428 calories if made with whole milk.

SPINACH RICOTTA DUMPLINGS

1 (10-ounce) package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and squeezed dry squeezed dry
1½ cups ricotta cheese
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 beaten eggs
½ cup grated parmesan cheese
¼ cup finely chopped green mnion
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 garlic clove, crushed
Flour
Sauce

Combine spinach, ricotta cheese, dry bread crumbs, eggs, parmesan cheese, onion, salt, basil, nutmeg and garlic. Form into walnut-sized balls. Roll lightly in flour. Arrange on baking sheet, cover with waxed paper and chill, or freeze for later use. Once frozen, dumplings can be placed in freezer bags for more compact storage.

To serve: Thaw ricotta balls. In deep pan boil 2 inches of water with 1 teaspoon salt. Reduce to simmer. Drop in half of the ricotta balls. They will sink to bottom. When they float to surface (3 or 4 minutes) they are cooked. Using slotted spoon, remove them to warm dish and keep warm while poaching the remainder. Meanwhile heat sauce. Serve dumplings topped with sauce. Serves 8.

Serve as a main dish with Italian sausage and a delicious tomato and wine sauce. Or drizzle cooked dumplings with melted butter, generously sprinkle with parmesan cheese, then glaze under the broiler. Serve with Italian antipasto, bread sticks and dry red wine or try serving as a hot hors d'oeuvre.

Oriental dish uses chuck cut

Americanized versions of Oriental dishes are ways to make use of less tender beef cuts and come up with flavorful dishes.

Boneless beef chuck is the base for an attractive and vegetable crisp dish.

The secret is slicing the chuck thinly and allowing it to marinate briefly with soy sauce, sherry (or wine vinegar), cornstarch and sugar. This breaks down the fibers of the beef and can be done while you are cooking the vegetables. Cook beef strips quickly and combine with vegetables to reheat for a minute and serve over hot cooked rice.

BEEF STRIPS WITH FRESH VEGETABLES

1 pound boneless beef chuck
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons dry sherry (or wine vinegar)
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon sugar (optional)
1 onion, cut into thin wedges
4 tablespoons vegetable oil
¼ pound mushroom caps, halved if large
1 medium green pepper, slivered
2 medium tomatoese, cut into wedges

Slice beef thinly into 2½ x 3-inch strips. Combine with soy sauce, sherry, cornstarch and sugar. Cook onion wedges in 2 tablespoons oil in large skillet, stirring, over medium heat briefly or until tinged with brown. Add mushrooms and green pepper. Cook, stirring until tender but crisp. Spread tomatoes on large plate and turn cooked vegetables from skillet over tomatoes. Add remaining 2 tablespoons oil to skillet. Add beef and cook, stirring, about 3 minutes or until done as desired. Slide all vegetables from plate into skillet. Cook 1 minute or just until heated. Serve promptly over hot cooked rice. Serves 4.

A HAPPY COOK is a good cook — at least that's the case with Mrs. Pat Covey, Mount Prospect.

Irish heritage won't stop her from Italian delights

Pat Covey of Mount Prospect may be of Irish descent, but with true culinary skill she has put together a recipe for Veal Parmesan that Italians would declare "magnifico!"

Cooking is Pat's favorite hobby, and she has taken several courses at adult evening school, becoming proficient at bread and pie baking and cutting her own meats.

She changes recipes to suit her taste, and her Veal Parmesan is a combination of two recipes, with her own improvisations which make it extra special. Even the tomato sauce that the veal is baked in is extraordinary. Along with a variety of spices and herbs, it contains ground beef and sausage, and is cooked for an hour for the flavors to blend. Pat uses this same sauce for the spaghetti and lasagna.

WHILE THE SAUCE is cooking, Pat prepares the veal cutlets, coating them with egg, bread crumbs and parmesan cheese. After browning, they are baked in the tomato sauce with mozzarella cheese.

Pat's Broccoli Noodle Casserole complements the spicy flavor of the Veal Parmesan. She was served this dish at a luncheon of the Women's Board of Mercy Hospital, of which she is a member. It was such a hit, that the hospital dietitian provided everyone with the recipe.

The appealing casserole consists of layers of broccoli, noodles and toasted almonds covered with a rich and creamy cheese-flavored sauce. It can be made ahead and baked with the Veal Parmesan.

Her favorite salad is from Canlis Restaurant, which has branches in San Francisco, Seattle and Honolulu.

Lois Seiler
Cook of the week

They offer the recipe to their guests "with no apology to Caesar." Although some of the ingredients are similar to those used in a Caesar salad, bacon and a hint of mint contribute to different and delicious flavor.

TO TOP OFF this tasty meal, she suggests an orange marshmallow dessert. Pat either bakes a package mix or buys an orange chiffon cake, using half or more of it for this recipe. It is broken up into an oblong glass dish and covered with a custard-like sauce made from orange juice, gingerale, marshmallows and whipped cream. Coconut covers the top. The dessert is light and refreshing after a hearty dinner.

A former kindergarten teacher, Pat is now the mother of three: Geralyn, 8, Michael, 5, and Regis, 4. She and her husband, Frank, have lived in Mount Prospect seven years. Pat is a volunteer at St. Raymond's school and coordinator of the catechism program. She also serves as secretary of the Mount Prospect Center of the Infant Welfare Society.

VEAL PARMESAN

1 pound ground beef
½ pound hot Italian sausage, removed from casing
1 clove garlic, minced
¾ cup chopped onion

Fresh pasta idea

Cheese, fresh zucchini and pasta — a light combination for a meatless dinner meal. Look for zucchini — an economical choice for fresh vegetables this week.

ZUCCHINI WITH PASTA

2 tablespoons butter
4 cups thinly sliced zucchini
½ cup chopped sweet red peppers or pimiento
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon oregano
Dash pepper
8 ounces shell macaroni
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons light cream or half and half
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded provolone cheese
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded mozzarella cheese

Melt butter; add zucchini and red pepper and saute just until tender, 10 to 15 minutes. Add salt, oregano and pepper. Cook macaroni according to package directions; rinse and drain. Stir in butter, cream and provolone cheese. Divide mixture into 4 gratin dishes or individual shallow baking dishes. Divide zucchini mixture over macaroni; top with mozzarella cheese. Broil 3 to 5 inches from heat until lightly browned.

Serves 4.

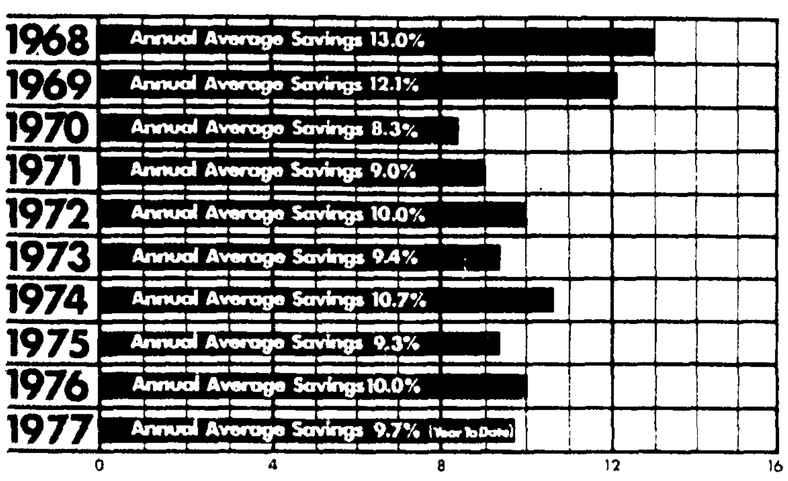
The Experts

Research Report!

On Where You Get The Most For Your Family's Food Dollars. Compare The Eagle Way!



The Savings Chart. Proven Savings

Since 1968, we have conducted 1,433 shopper comparison tests to document our claims of lower prices and lower totals. Shoppers were selected at random, and asked to use their own shopping lists to compare at Eagle, total for total, with another supermarket of their choice.

Of those 1,433 shopping comparison tests, all but 26 have proven lower totals at Eagle. As the chart above indicates, the average annual savings has never been lower than 8.3%. To date, total average savings for these past 10 years is 10.2%!

Your test is the best test.

How much could you save by shopping Eagle? You owe it to your food budget to find out by comparing the Food Experts for yourself. Put us to the test with any other supermarket you choose. It's as easy as 1-2-3.

1. Your list
2. Your test
3. Your answer

First make out your family's regular shopping list. Include all items you normally purchase on your weekly shopping trip to the supermarket.

Secondly, take your list to Eagle and note the prices for everything on it. Then go to any other supermarket you choose and do the same.

Finally add up the prices and compare totals. It's important to compare totals because that's where real food savings are measured.

Year after year, more and more shoppers are finding out that the Experts' approach to food pricing...a sensible, no-nonsense program of consistently low prices throughout the store...can save them money on their family's food bills.

We're confident that when it's all added up at the checkstand you'll save at Eagle...the Food Experts!

We're one supermarket that gives you a good price...and a good deal more!

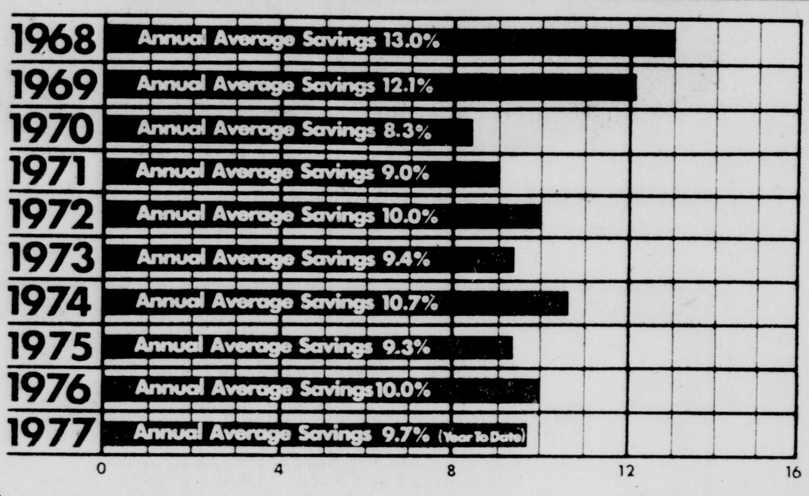
Research Report!

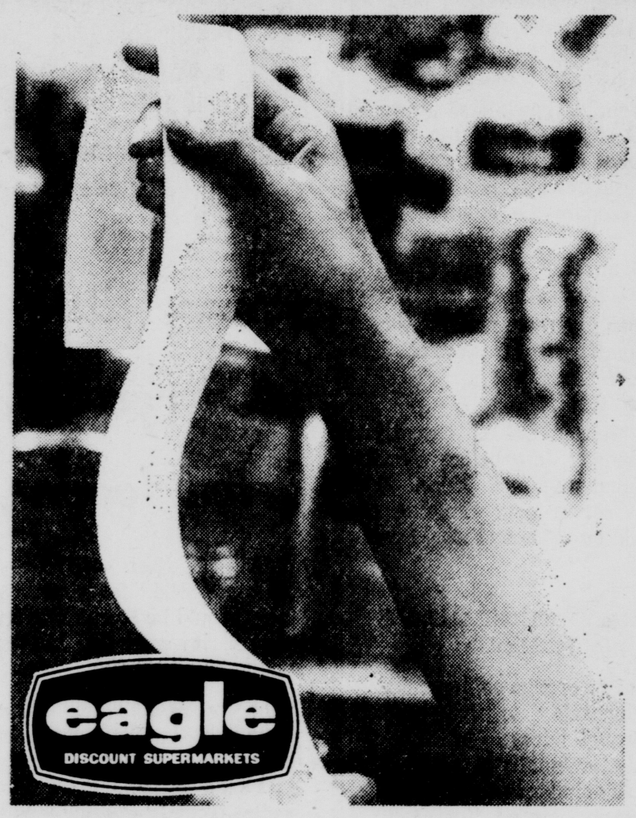
On Where You Get The Most For Your Family's Food Dollars. Compare The Eagle Way!



The Savings Chart. Proven Savings

Since 1968, we have conducted 1,433 shopper comparison tests to document our claims of lower prices and lower totals. Shoppers were selected at random, and asked to use their own shopping lists to compare at Eagle, total for total, with another supermarket of their choice.

Of those 1,433 shopping comparison tests, all but 26 have proven lower totals at Eagle. As the chart above indicates, the average annual savings has never been lower than 8.3%. To date, total average savings for these past 10 years is 10.2%!



Your test is the best test.

How much could you save by shopping Eagle? You owe it to your food budget to find out by comparing the Food Experts for yourself. Put us to the test with any other supermarket you choose. It's as easy as 1-2-3.

1. Your list
2. Your test
3. Your answer

First make out your family's regular shopping list. Include all items you normally purchase on your weekly shopping trip to the supermarket.

Secondly, take your list to Eagle and note the prices for everything on it. Then go to any other supermarket you choose and do the same.

Finally add up the prices and compare totals. It's important to compare totals because that's where real food savings are measured.

Year after year, more and more shoppers are finding out that the Experts' approach to food pricing...a sensible, no-nonsense program of consistently low prices throughout the store...can save them money on their family's food bills.

We're confident that when it's all added up at the checkstand you'll save at Eagle...the Food Experts!

We're one supermarket that gives you a good price...and a good deal more!

Cracked wheat bread—olde English sandwich treat

Men who enjoy making bread will find a braided cracked wheat ring a welcome addition to their repertoire. This is an old English sandwich bread, once served for a ploughman's lunch — the mid-day meal of English farmers which included a loaf of freshly baked bread and slices of Cheshire cheese. Visitors to England get a chance to sample this bread since it still is served in the inns a pubs.

Cracked wheat is available in the health food section of many supermarkets or at health food stores. If you can't find it, use whole wheat flour instead.

Shaping the long ropes for braiding is easier if you divide the dough so each piece weighs about the same. Clear plenty of space on the counter and roll with the palm of both hands so the diameter is uniform the entire length, start in the center and braid toward each end.

BRAIDED CRACKED WHEAT RING

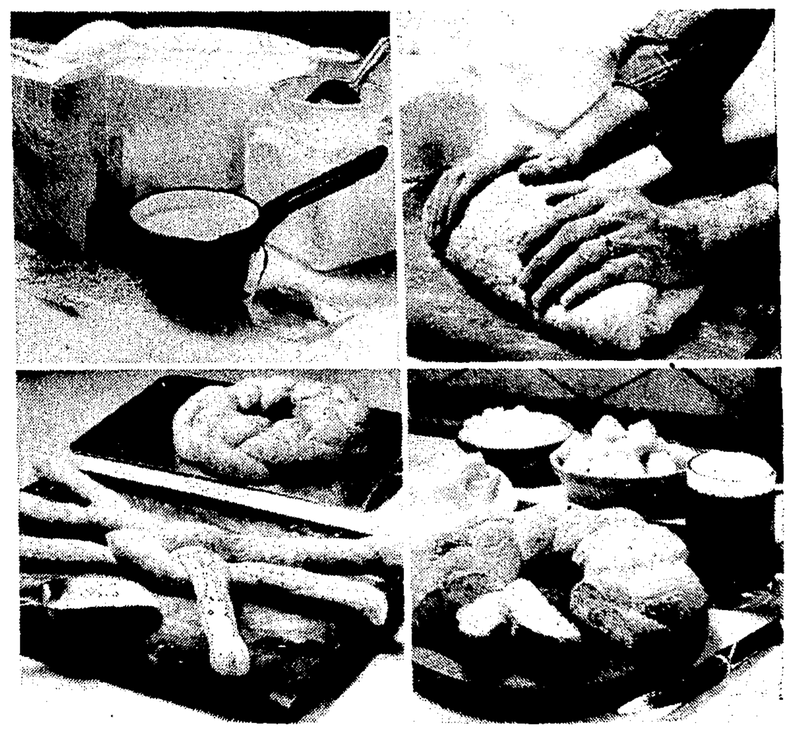
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons margarine
½ cup warm water (105-115 degrees)
1 package active dry yeast
1 cup cracked wheat or whole wheat flour
4¾ to 5¾ cups unsifted flour
Melted margarine
Coarse salt

Scald milk. Stir in sugar, 2 teaspoons salt and margarine. Cool to lukewarm. Measure warm water into large warm bowl. Sprinkle in active dry yeast; stir until dissolved. Add lukewarm milk mixture, cracked wheat and 3 cups flour. Beat until smooth. Stir in enough additional flour to form a soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover, let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. On lightly floured board divide dough in half. Divide each half into 3 equal pieces. Shape each piece into a 24-inch long rope. On a greased baking sheet, braid 3 ropes together bringing braid around to form a ring. Pinch corresponding ends together. Repeat with remaining dough. Brush with melted margarine and sprinkle with coarse salt. Cover. Let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake at 375-degrees about 35 minutes, or until done. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks. Makes 2 braided rings.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.



FOLLOW THESE step-by-step directions to knead the bread dough. Serve the cracked wheat loaf with cheese and beer.

Irish lass concocts Italian delights

1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce
1 can (29 ounces) tomato puree
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon marjoram
¼ teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon basil
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese

Brown beef, sausage, garlic and onion together. Drain off fat. Add remaining ingredients and simmer, uncovered, for one hour.

6 veal cutlets, sliced ¼-inch thick
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons water
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup cooking oil or shortening
8 ounces mozzarella cheese
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Combine egg and water. Dip cutlets into egg and then into bread crumbs and ¼ cup parmesan cheese, which have been mixed together. Refrigerate for 30 minutes to an hour.

HEAT 2 TABLESPOONS oil in a skillet and saute veal, 2 to 3 pieces at a time, until golden, turning only once. Repeat with remaining veal and 2 tablespoons oil.

Pour half of tomato sauce into a deep, 8-inch baking dish. Cut mozzarella cheese into 6 thick slices.

Over the sauce, place three cutlets, three slices of cheese, more sauce and then remaining cutlets, cheese and sauce on top. Sprinkle remaining 2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese on top. Bake at 350 degrees until sauce is bubbly and cheese melts, 20 to 25 minutes. Serves 6.

BROCCOLI NOODLES CASSEROLE

4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
½ to 1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
½ cup mayonnaise
4 teaspoons lemon juice
½ cup sour cream
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
2 packages (12 ounces each) frozen, chopped broccoli
2 to 2½ cups noodles
1 cup toasted almonds
Buttered bread crumbs

Make a white sauce first by melting butter and stirring in flour and salt. Slowly add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Cool slightly. Stir in the mayonnaise, lemon juice, sour cream and cheese.

Cook broccoli and noodles in separate pans and according to package directions and drain well.

Layer broccoli, noodles and almonds in a 9 by 13-inch baking dish, pouring sauce over each layer. Repeat one more time. Top with buttered crumbs. Bake 20 minutes at 350 degrees. Serves 10 to 12.

CANLIS SPECIAL SALAD

2 heads romaine lettuce
2 tomatoes, cut in eighths, or cherry tomatoes
¼ cup chopped green onion
½ cup freshly-grated romano cheese
1 pound rendered finely-chopped bacon
1 cup croutons

In a large, wooden bowl, pour approximately 2 tablespoons of olive oil. Sprinkle with salt and rub firmly with large clove garlic. Remove garlic.

In bottom of bowl, first place tomatoes. Add romaine, torn in one-inch strips, onion, cheese and bacon. Cover and place in refrigerator. Just before serving, prepare the following dressing:

3 ounces olive oil
Juice of 2 lemons
½ teaspoon freshly-ground pepper
¼ teaspoon chopped fresh mint
¼ teaspoon oregano
1 coddled egg

Into a blender, put oil, lemon juice and seasonigs. Just before blending, add coddled egg and blend. When ready to serve, pour dressing over salad. Add croutons and toss. Serves 8 to 10.

ORANGE MARSHMALLOW DESSERT

½ to ¾ of an orange chiffon cake
1 cup gingerale
¾ cup orange juice
1 pound marshmallows, cut in halves
1 pint whipping cream, whipped
Grated orange rind, if desired
1 can coconut (for topping)

Bring the gingerale and orange juice to a boil. Add marshmallows and stir to dissolve. Cool in refriger ator until it gels slightly. Fold in whipped cream.

Break up cake in the bottom of a 9 by 13-inch glass dish. Spread orange marshmallow mixture on top. Sprinkle coconut over top. Refrigerate overnight. Serves 10 to 12.

Freeze little-used cereals, dried foods

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Cereal and other dried foods not used routinely should be stored in a freezer to prevent invasion by kitchen pests such as small beetles.

The problem often increases in warm weather, Bob Roselle, extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, says. Most such beetles come from dried food products in cabinets.

"Although the adults may be meandering around on cabinets and in cupboards, the larvae are probably feeding in a hideaway somewhere nearby," he says.

The only way to control the beetles is to find and discard the infested products. Freezing kills the beetles and prevents others from developing.

Baking, reheating

Electric skillet has many uses

Think your electric skillet is just for frying? Think again. This energy-conserving appliance can be used to bake a cake or custard as well as cook old standbys such as grilled cheese sandwiches or pancakes. For the cook with a yen for Oriental foods but without the cash for a wok, an electric frypan can provide the even distribution of heat needed to cook Oriental specialties.

Electric skillets also come in handy for warming leftovers. Simply divide the inside of the pan into sections with a foil insert, then reheat or prepare several small dishes at once.

CHINESE LAMB SKILLET

2 tablespoons cooking oil
4 lamb shoulder chops, about ¾ inch thick
1 medium-size onion
1 3 cup diced green pepper
1 3 cup diced celery
1 can (5 ounces) sliced bamboo shoots
1 can (1 pound) bean sprouts (use fresh sprouts if available)
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1½ teaspoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon water
1 medium-size tomato, cut in wedges

Preheat skillet to 360 degrees. Pour in oil. Add lamb. Cook until lamb is browned on both sides, then add onion, green pepper and celery. Drain bamboo shoots and bean sprouts, and add liquids, and water to the lamb. Cover and simmer at 200 degrees for 30 minutes, or until lamb is tender. Add bamboo shoots and bean sprouts. Combine salt, pepper, cornstarch and soy sauce and stir into lamb mixture. Add tomato wedges. Cover and cook 5 minutes or until sauce thickens. Other Chinese vegetables — snow peas, lotus root and water chestnuts — may be added to this recipe, if desired. Serves 4.

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

1 package (14½ ounces) coffee cake mix
¼ cup margarine
6 slices canned pineapple, well drained
6 maraschino cherries, well drained

Cut circle of aluminum foil to fit bottom of 10½-inch electric frypan. Set foil aside. Preheat frypan at 300 degrees. Prepare coffee cake batter according to package directions. Set aside topping mix.

Place foil circle on top of preheated pan. Melt margarine on top of foil. Sprinkle topping mix evenly over margarine. Arrange pineapple slices on top; place one cherry in center of each pineapple sice. Carefully pour batter over fruilt mixture to cover the liquid; spread evenly around pan. Cover.

Bake about 20 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Turn heat off. Allow cake to cool 5 minutes before inverting onto cake plate or serving tray. Immediately remove foil from top of cale; serve.

FLAN (SPANISH CARMEL CUSTARD)

½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons water
4 eggs
¼ cup sugar
2½ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash salt
4 cups hot water

Heat ½ cup sugar with 2 teaspoons water over medium heat, stirring constantly. When sugar has partially melted, turn heat to low. Continue to heat, stirring, until mixture is golden and smooth. Immediately pour melted sugar into 6 custard cups. Set aside.

Beat eggs with remaining ¼ cup sugar until thick and lemon-colored, about 2 minutes. Add milk, vanilla and salt; beat on low speed until blended. Strain and pour into cups.

Arrange cups in electric frypan so they do not touch. Carefully pour hot water into pan. Turn heat control to 250 degrees. When light goes out, cover and cook 45 minutes. Remove cups and let cool slightly. Run a knife around each and unmold on dessert plates. If desired, custards may be chilled in refrigerator before unmolding. Serves 6.

4-H seeking new members

It's time for a happy new year — a new 4-H year that is. Prospective 4-H members and volunteer adults now may begin their 4-H career, says Bill Messerschmidt, North Suburban Cook County 4-H adviser.

Members may choose from more than 100 projects and activities including communication, arts and crafts, economics, environment, mechanical sciences, home economics, agriculture and plants and soils. Youngsters from 8 to 19 years of age may join and any adult with an interest in helping young people may become a 4-H leader.

Five youths are needed to organize a club with leader training and orientation classes provided during the year.

Interested persons may contact Bill Messerschmidt, 4200 W. Euclid Ave., Rolling Meadows, at 991-1160.

3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons margarine
½ cup warm water (105-115 degrees)
1 package active dry yeast
1 cup cracked wheat or whole wheat flour
4¾ to 5¾ cups unsifted flour
Melted margarine
Coarse salt

Scald milk. Stir in sugar, 2 teaspoons salt and margarine. Cool to lukewarm. Measure warm water into large warm bowl. Sprinkle in active dry yeast; stir until dissolved. Add lukewarm milk mixture, cracked wheat and 3 cups flour. Beat until smooth. Stir in enough additional flour to form a soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover, let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. On lightly floured board divide dough in half. Divide each half into 3 equal pieces. Shape each piece into a 24-inch long rope. On a greased baking sheet, braid 3 ropes together bringing braid around to form a ring. Pinch corresponding ends together. Repeat with remaining dough. Brush with melted margarine and sprinkle with coarse salt. Cover. Let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake at 375-degrees about 35 minutes, or until done. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks. Makes 2 braided rings.

FOLLOW THESE step-by-step directions to knead the bread dough. Serve the cracked wheat loaf with cheese and beer.

1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce
1 can (29 ounces) tomato puree
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon marjoram
¼ teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon basil
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese

Brown beef, sausage, garlic and onion together. Drain off fat. Add remaining ingredients and simmer, uncovered, for one hour.

6 veal cutlets, sliced ¼-inch thick
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons water
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup cooking oil or shortening
8 ounces mozzarella cheese
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Combine egg and water. Dip cutlets into egg and then into bread crumbs and ¼ cup parmesan cheese, which have been mixed together. Refrigerate for 30 minutes to an hour.

HEAT 2 TABLESPOONS oil in a skillet and saute veal, 2 to 3 pieces at a time, until golden, turning only once. Repeat with remaining veal and 2 tablespoons oil.

Pour half of tomato sauce into a deep, 8-inch baking dish. Cut mozzarella cheese into 6 thick slices.

Over the sauce, place three cutlets, three slices of cheese, more sauce and then remaining cutlets, cheese and sauce on top. Sprinkle remaining 2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese on top. Bake at 350 degrees until sauce is bubbly and cheese melts, 20 to 25 minutes. Serves 6.

BROCCOLI NOODLES CASSEROLE

4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
½ to 1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
½ cup mayonnaise
4 teaspoons lemon juice
½ cup sour cream
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
2 packages (12 ounces each) frozen, chopped broccoli
2 to 2½ cups noodles
1 cup toasted almonds
Buttered bread crumbs

Make a white sauce first by melting butter and stirring in flour and salt. Slowly add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Cool slightly. Stir in the mayonnaise, lemon juice, sour cream and cheese.

Cook broccoli and noodles in separate pans and according to package directions and drain well.

Layer broccoli, noodles and almonds in a 9 by 13-inch baking dish, pouring sauce over each layer. Repeat one more time. Top with buttered crumbs. Bake 20 minutes at 350 degrees. Serves 10 to 12.

CANLIS SPECIAL SALAD

2 heads romaine lettuce
2 tomatoes, cut in eighths, or cherry tomatoes
¼ cup chopped green onion
½ cup freshly-grated romano cheese
1 pound rendered finely-chopped bacon
1 cup croutons

In a large, wooden bowl, pour approximately 2 tablespoons of olive oil. Sprinkle with salt and rub firmly with large clove garlic. Remove garlic.

In bottom of bowl, first place tomatoes. Add romaine, torn in one-inch strips, onion, cheese and bacon. Cover and place in refrigerator. Just before serving, prepare the following dressing:

3 ounces olive oil
Juice of 2 lemons
½ teaspoon freshly-ground pepper
¼ teaspoon chopped fresh mint
¼ teaspoon oregano
1 coddled egg

Into a blender, put oil, lemon juice and seasonigs. Just before blending, add coddled egg and blend. When ready to serve, pour dressing over salad. Add croutons and toss. Serves 8 to 10.

ORANGE MARSHMALLOW DESSERT

½ to ¾ of an orange chiffon cake
1 cup gingerale
¾ cup orange juice
1 pound marshmallows, cut in halves
1 pint whipping cream, whipped
Grated orange rind, if desired
1 can coconut (for topping)

Bring the gingerale and orange juice to a boil. Add marshmallows and stir to dissolve. Cool in refriger ator until it gels slightly. Fold in whipped cream.

Break up cake in the bottom of a 9 by 13-inch glass dish. Spread orange marshmallow mixture on top. Sprinkle coconut over top. Refrigerate overnight. Serves 10 to 12.

Freeze little-used cereals, dried foods

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Cereal and other dried foods not used routinely should be stored in a freezer to prevent invasion by kitchen pests such as small beetles.

The problem often increases in warm weather, Bob Roselle, extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, says. Most such beetles come from dried food products in cabinets.

"Although the adults may be meandering around on cabinets and in cupboards, the larvae are probably feeding in a hideaway somewhere nearby," he says.

The only way to control the beetles is to find and discard the infested products. Freezing kills the beetles and prevents others from developing.

Baking, reheating

Electric skillet has many uses

Think your electric skillet is just for frying? Think again. This energy-conserving appliance can be used to bake a cake or custard as well as cook old standbys such as grilled cheese sandwiches or pancakes. For the cook with a yen for Oriental foods but without the cash for a wok, an electric frypan can provide the even distribution of heat needed to cook Oriental specialties.

Electric skillets also come in handy for warming leftovers. Simply divide the inside of the pan into sections with a foil insert, then reheat or prepare several small dishes at once.

CHINESE LAMB SKILLET

2 tablespoons cooking oil
4 lamb shoulder chops, about ¾ inch thick
1 medium-size onion
1/3 cup diced green pepper
1/3 cup diced celery
1 can (5 ounces) sliced bamboo shoots
1 can (1 pound) bean sprouts (use fresh sprouts if available)
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1½ teaspoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon water
1 medium-size tomato, cut in wedges

Preheat skillet to 360 degrees. Pour in oil. Add lamb. Cook until lamb is browned on both sides, then add onion, green pepper and celery. Drain bamboo shoots and bean sprouts, and add liquids, and water to the lamb. Cover and simmer at 200 degrees for 30 minutes, or until lamb is tender. Add bamboo shoots and bean sprouts. Combine salt, pepper, cornstarch and soy sauce and stir into lamb mixture. Add tomato wedges. Cover and cook 5 minutes or until sauce thickens. Other Chinese vegetables — snow peas, lotus root and water chestnuts — may be added to this recipe, if desired. Serves 4.

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

1 package (14½ ounces) coffee cake mix
¼ cup margarine
6 slices canned pineapple, well drained
6 maraschino cherries, well drained

Cut circle of aluminum foil to fit bottom of 10½-inch electric frypan. Set foil aside. Preheat frypan at 300 degrees. Prepare coffee cake batter according to package directions. Set aside topping mix.

Place foil circle on top of preheated pan. Melt margarine on top of foil. Sprinkle topping mix evenly over margarine. Arrange pineapple slices on top; place one cherry in center of each pineapple sice. Carefully pour batter over fruilt mixture to cover the liquid; spread evenly around pan. Cover.

Bake about 20 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Turn heat off. Allow cake to cool 5 minutes before inverting onto cake plate or serving tray. Immediately remove foil from top of cale; serve.

FLAN (SPANISH CARMEL CUSTARD)

½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons water
4 eggs
¼ cup sugar
2½ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash salt
4 cups hot water

Heat ½ cup sugar with 2 teaspoons water over medium heat, stirring constantly. When sugar has partially melted, turn heat to low. Continue to heat, stirring, until mixture is golden and smooth. Immediately pour melted sugar into 6 custard cups. Set aside.

Beat eggs with remaining ¼ cup sugar until thick and lemon-colored, about 2 minutes. Add milk, vanilla and salt; beat on low speed until blended. Strain and pour into cups.

Arrange cups in electric frypan so they do not touch. Carefully pour hot water into pan. Turn heat control to 250 degrees. When light goes out, cover and cook 45 minutes. Remove cups and let cool slightly. Run a knife around each and unmold on dessert plates. If desired, custards may be chilled in refrigerator before unmolding. Serves 6.

4-H seeking new members

It's time for a happy new year — a new 4-H year that is. Prospective 4-H members and volunteer adults now may begin their 4-H career, says Bill Messerschmidt, North Suburban Cook County 4-H adviser.

Members may choose from more than 100 projects and activities including communication, arts and crafts, economics, environment, mechanical sciences, home economics, agriculture and plants and soils. Youngsters from 8 to 19 years of age may join and any adult with an interest in helping young people may become a 4-H leader.

Five youths are needed to organize a club with leader training and orientation classes provided during the year.

Interested persons may contact Bill Messerschmidt, 4200 W. Euclid Ave., Rolling Meadows, at 991-1160.

Notice of Public Hearing

To Whom it May Concern:

Public Notice is hereby given that a Public Hearing will be held September 30, 1977 at 7:30 p.m. in the Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 West Camp McDonald Road, Prospect Heights, Illinois to consider a request for a proposed variance on proposed lots 6 and 7 of the proposed Gall Courts subdivision, Prospect Heights, Illinois to permit relief from the 20,000 square foot lot requirement.

Applicant seeks reduction to approximately 19,450 square feet per lot. Variance to apply to following described property: the West ½ of the East ½ of the West ½ of the Northwest ¼ of the Southeast ¼, and the East 66 feet of the West ½ of the Northwest ¼ of the Southeast ¼, all in Section 21, Township 42 North, Range 11 East of the Third Principal Meridian in Cook County, Illinois.

Said request was made by Rudy Reimer, developer. Application is on file in the office of the Zoning Administrator, James Deal, 305 East School Lane, Prospect Heights, Illinois. All interested persons are invited to attend said hearing and be heard for or against said proposal.

Notice of Public Hearing

To Whom it May Concern:

Public Notice is hereby given that a Public Hearing will be held September 30, 1977 at 7:30 p.m. in the Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 West Camp McDonald Road, Prospect Heights, Illinois to consider a request for a proposed variance on proposed lots 6 and 7 of the proposed Gail Courts subdivision, Prospect Heights, Illinois to permit relief from the 20,000 square foot lot requirement.

Applicant seeks reduction to approximately 19,450 square feet per lot. Variance to apply to following described property: the West ½ of the East ½ of the West ½ of the Northwest ¼ of the Southeast ¼ and, the East 66 feet of the West ½ of the West ½ of the Northwest ¼ of the Southeast ¼, all in Section 21, Township 42 North, Range 11 East of the Third Principal Meridian in Cook County, Illinois.

Said request was made by Rudy Reimer, developer. Application is on file in the office of the Zoning Administrator, James Deal, 305 East School Lane, Prospect Heights, Illinois. All interested persons are invited to attend said hearing and be heard for or against said proposal.

The hardest noses in Chicago run the Crusade of Mercy.

The Crusade of Mercy learned a long time ago how to say, "No". It is not charitable to give money to sloppy, ineffective organizations— no matter how good their cause may be.

Every dollar you give to the Crusade must deliver a dollar's worth of service to the people who need help.

To insure this delivery, the Crusade's partner organizations have set up a simple but tough-minded system. First, Priorities Committees, like the one shown above, rank the needs of each community in order. Child care. Drug treatment. Care for the aged. Visiting nurse services. Job counseling. All of these and other needs are reviewed regularly by the Priorities Committees.

Second, a skilled team of auditors, made up of professionals and volunteers, reviews in detail not only the business procedures and finances of all Crusade-funded agencies, but also the quality and quantity of services promised and delivered.

If an agency flunks the audit, it is put on warning. Help is offered in solving the problem. Then a second audit is performed, and if the agency fails again, out it goes.

This year, sadly, a neighborhood development group had to leave the Crusade because it simply could not deliver the services promised in its application. Last year, two other groups were cut off from Crusade funds for the same reason.

It gives us no pleasure to be tough. But, we believe that Americans want real work performed with the hard-earned dollars they give to the Crusade.

We believe our system allows us to keep a promise to you. Not only will your dollar deliver a dollar's worth of services to people in need, it can deliver up to four dollars' worth. For every dollar contributed through the Crusade to the Chicago United Way agencies, for example, the Federal Government adds a dollar, foundations and individuals interested in a specific agency add another dollar, and people who can pay part or all of the cost of a service add still another dollar.

Metropolitan Chicago—the city and its suburbs—should be proud of its hard noses. The tough work they do makes your precious dollars work much, much harder.

Thank you for your help.

On the road with busy Gogo Carter

by ELLIE GROSSMAN

Ooo-eee, that Miss Lillian! Like a tonsillectomy, she's apt to cut you up before she coddles you with ice cream.

"I call her vinegar and sugar and never the twain do meet," says her daughter, Gloria Carter Spann, laughing heartily if somewhat humorlessly, and vaguely resembling her brother, the President.

Actually, just the other day, she says, "Jimmy said, you know, Gloria, we were looking at pictures of Mother when she was 52 and you look so much like her. And I said, Jimmy, if you had told me that before I wrote the book, I would have said, I don't want to look like her or be like her," she whoops.

THAT WAS BEFORE she came across the box marked "letters from India" in her closet last year. Then she reread the hundreds of letters she couldn't help and who just wouldn't die.

And Miss Lillian's joy among the darkskinned people she cared for, who came to care themselves for the old woman with the strange white skin.

Those letters should be published, she told Miss Lillian. "And she said, well, you really have got so sweet lately from reading them and you don't get mad anymore like you used to at what I say. If they can do that for the rest of the family, go right ahead!"

EVERYONE LOVES the book, Mrs. Spann says. Miss Lillian. Jimmy. Even her second husband, Walter Spann, the soybean and peanut farmer she's been married to for 27 years, had a whale of a time with it and he doesn't read much.

"He told me, this thing you call a book," she drawls, delighted, "it kept me up until two in the morning because I wanted to find out how it turns out!" And here he knew all the time.

She lights another cigaret and reheats the coffee the St. Regis sent up and says her life is an open book.

She's just Gloria Spann — the publisher stuck "Carter" in there on the book cover. In fact, in Plains, she's "Gogo."

"Jimmy called me that when I was born. He was two and couldn't say Gloria."

She's just a dirt farmer's wife who gets up at seven every day, puts the three rat terriers outside and makes breakfast, washes clothes, cleans, watches some TV game shows. "And I go to the grocery store about 10 miles away in my little red Datsun — rvoom! — which I just love!"

AND SHE VISITS with Miss Lillian and late in the afternoon she and Walter get on their motorcycles and zoom around the back roads, communing with nature and feeling part of things.

"We love motorcycles and the people that ride them. We go all around the country. Motorcycle people are so friendly, it's almost a brotherhood because other people just don't like us," she laughs.

Then there's Union Life, the religious brotherhood she and Walter belong to, which she doesn't really want to discuss because she's not a proselytizer. It's just a family of people all round the country, all kinds of people, she says, "who have come to the realization that we don't have to control our lives. God does."

Miss Lillian believes that, too. And that "you should love everyone not in spite of what they are but because of it." And you should be just who you were meant to be and don't worry if some people don't love you back.

THERE'S HER ONLY child William, but — "he doesn't really come into this," she snaps.

William, 32, is serving five years

"I DID NOT know my mother as a person until I edited this book." — Gloria Carter Spann.

Miss Lillian wrote when she was a Peace Corps nurse near Bombay in '67-'68 when she was 67, and suddenly Miss Lillian wasn't just her sharp-tongued mother anymore.

"I did not know my mother as a person until I edited this book ('Away From Home: Letters to My Family' by Lillian Carter, published by Simon and Schuster). Now I'm just so proud of her."

The letters made her laugh and cry and hurry up the road in Plains a mile to Miss Lillian's house, "to make sure she was really back and see if she needed anything. I wanted to wait on her hand and foot."

TEN YEARS AFTER the fact, she had finally gasped the physical deprivation Miss Lillian suffered; the homesickness and exhaustion from overwork; the heartache passing a leprous woman on the road every day who drank from mud puddles, whom

Jaycees

Civic joiners in Northwest suburbs find no old cliches in organization that allows no active members past 36

Alas, all Jaycees big and small eventually must shed their civic feathers and follow the lonely flight of the Exhausted Rooster. It's a sad fact of life.

Perhaps the most active young men's organization in the nation (excluding, of course, the armed services), the group fights a constant battle with its own rule — the rule that keeps the organization young by continually dropping its older members.

When a Jaycee turns 36, he loses all voting privileges and must relinquish any offices he holds in the local, state and national organizations. He becomes what they call an Exhausted Rooster.

Some Exhausted Roosters remain active in their chapters for a time, attending the monthly meetings and helping out on special projects. Many of the Jaycees truly are exhausted, however, and take the opportunity to leave the organization posthaste.

IF THE RETIRING member was a particularly active one, his sudden departure can drain much of the spirit out of his chapter and precipitate a rapid decline in membership. The effect can be crippling.

Scott Fosdick

Byline report

Five years ago, under the leadership of Bart Barrow, the Arlington Heights Jaycees hit its peak of activity, with more than 70 active members. Bob Braasch, current chapter president, said Barrow was the driving force of the group.

"He was a very dynamic member, he did things right," Braasch said.

Then the inexorable happened. Barrow was claimed like the aging citizens of the television show "Logan's Run." He turned 36.

BARROW TOOK A LOT of spirit and expertise with him, and membership began to fall. Recently, Braasch said, the membership stabilized, and even has climbed to 50.

"Any time a chapter stays above 40 members, it's a healthy chapter," he said.

Chapters in the forever mobile Northwest suburbs are especially vulnerable to another membership-robber: relocation. Men in their twenties and early thirties are often in a stage of their careers where they have to leave town, either because their companies move them to a different office, or because they change companies.

"You have a fair degree of turnover because of job changes," Braasch said. "But by the same token, we pick some up."

LOYAL JAYCEES don't always reaffiliate with the new local chapter when they move, however. "That holds true about half the time," Braasch said. So, for every two moves, the Jaycees of the nation lose one member.

It's a constant battle to keep members interested and to attract new members. Two local chapters that appear to be losing that battle are located in Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

More than 8,000 persons have moved to Buffalo Grove since 1971, but membership in the Jaycees there has steadily declined from 125 to about 50. If new blood isn't found soon, chapter president Leon Gapon recently said the club may fold.

The Rolling Meadows chapter is reportedly in even worse shape. (We were unable to locate any of its members for comment.)

BUT ACCORDING TO Randal G. Melind, member of the Elk Grove Village chapter and public relations chairman of the state organization ever since the Jaycees was born 62 years ago, the name of the game has been "involvement."

Originally called the St. Louis Progressive Citizen Assoc., the Jaycees was formed in St. Louis in 1915. It early on associated with the Chamber of Commerce, and became known as the J.C.s, for Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In 1965 it changed its image and disassociated completely from the Chamber of Commerce in an effort to attract more nonbusiness types.

THE CHANGE REAPED fast rewards. In the past 10 years the number of Jaycees in the country has more than doubled. There are now 500,000 Jaycees in America, and, with chapters in 80 countries (including the United States), there are more than

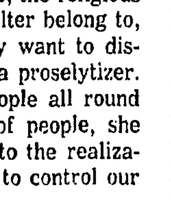
Victorian splendor to unfold at forum

Grace Carolyn

Collecting



Last year I almost made it. This year, Dearborn or bust. I'm speaking of the 18th annual Midwest Antiques Forum, to be held at Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Mich., Oct. 18-22. This year's Adrenalin-upper theme is "Collecting Americana: The World Under Glass - The Age of Extravagant Decoration, 1837-1888."

Since my home decor might be considered extravagant not by means of money spent but by over-decoration and since I'm not known for my Japanese restraint, the emphasis on Victorian appeals to me. Actually, I like anything made during the 1900s, but my pocketbook lies more in the area of Early Garage Sale or Thrift Shop Thirties.

But, ah, to be at Dearborn this October. Five days of total immersion in this quite remarkable period of American growth, expansion and development. There will be illustrated lectures on architecture, horticulture, furniture and all other facets of decorative art, along with group discussions, teas and tours of the museum, adjacent Greenfield Village and the Belle Isle Conservatory in Detroit.

DR. WILLIAM SEALE, historian from Alexandria, Va., will open the five-day forum with the topic "The Spirit of the Times, 1837-1888." Later the same day Dr. Wayne Andrews, archivist at Wayne State University, will speak on "The Gothic, from Dynamite to Dividend — American Architecture from Jackson to Harrison."

Paul Hollister, artist, author, collector, closes the day with "The World Under Glass - New York City, 1853." Wednesday morning, Dr. Kenneth L. Ames, of the Winterthur Museum in Delaware, another beautiful place, offers "Furniture — the Romantic Revivals." The other two lectures Wednesday are "Patent and Innovative Nineteenth Century Furniture" by Joseph Butler, curator of Sleepy Hollow Restoration, Tarrytown, N.Y., and "Metals — a Potpourri, 1837-1888" by H. Parrott Bacot, curator of the Anglo-American Museum of Baton Rouge, La.

Other lectures during the forum include the "Horticultural Extravaganza of the Victorian Era" by James R. Buckler of the Smithsonian Institution, and "Plants in Pots — Indoor Victorian Gardening" by Elizabeth Taylor Childs, of the Valentine Museum, Richmond, Va. Then "Textiles in the Domestic Interior," "Schoolgirl Arts and Crafts," and "Views of a Developing Nation." That last title rates an "ouch!" — it will be about early photography.

THE FORUM WILL close Oct. 22 with "Gilding the Ceramic Lily" about pottery (my favorite) by a particular hero of mine, Richard Carter Barret, of The Bennington Museum, Vermont, and another presentation on the Centennial of 1876. Interesting to compare with the Bi-you-know-what.

The $70 weekly registration fee will include all lectures, programs, Thursday special tour and dinner in Lovett Hall Saturday evening, or one may attend any one of the series, mornings for $12, evenings, $6. One day's programs and doings costs $16. For a leaflet giving more details and a reservation blank, as well as lodging and restaurant information, write Midwest Antiques Forum, Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, Mich. 48121.

On the road with busy Gogo Carter

by ELLIE GROSSMAN

Ooo-eee, that Miss Lillian' Like a tonsillectomy, she's apt to cut you up before she coddles you with ice cream.

"I call her vinegar and sugar and never the twain do meet," says her daughter, Gloria Carter Spann, laughing heartily if somewhat humorlessly, and vaguely resembling her brother, the President.

Actually, just the other day, she says, "Jimmy said, you know, Gloria, we were looking at pictures of Mother when she was 52 and you look so much like her. And I said, Jimmy, if you had told me that before I wrote the book, I would have said, I don't want to look like her or be like her," she whoops.

THAT WAS BEFORE she came across the box marked "letters from India" in her closet last year. Then she reread the hundreds of letters she couldn't help and who just wouldn't die.

And Miss Lillian's joy among the darkskinned people she cared for, who came to care themselves for the old woman with the strange white skin.

Those letters should be published, she told Miss Lillian. "And she said, well, you really have got so sweet lately from reading them and you don't get mad anymore like you used to at what I say. If they can do that for the rest of the family, go right ahead!"

EVERYONE LOVES the book, Mrs. Spann says. Miss Lillian. Jimmy. Even her second husband, Walter Spann, the soybean and peanut farmer she's been married to for 27 years, had a whale of a time with it and he doesn't read much.

"He told me, this thing you call a book," she drawls, delighted, "it kept me up until two in the morning because I wanted to find out how it turns out!" And here he knew all the time.

She lights another cigaret and reheats the coffee the St. Regis sent up and says her life is an open book.

She's just Gloria Spann — the publisher stuck "Carter" in there on the book cover. In fact, in Plains, she's "Gogo."

"Jimmy called me that when I was born. He was two and couldn't say Gloria."

She's just a dirt farmer's wife who gets up at seven every day, puts the three rat terriers outside and makes breakfast, washes clothes, cleans, watches some TV game shows. "And I go to the grocery store about 10 miles away in my little red Datsun — rvoom! — which I just love!"

"I DID NOT know my mother as a person until I edited this book." — Gloria Carter Spann.

AND SHE VISITS with Miss Lillian and late in the afternoon she and Walter get on their motorcycles and zoom around the back roads, communing with nature and feeling part of things.

"We love motorcycles and the people that ride them. We go all around the country. Motorcycle people are so friendly, it's almost a brotherhood because other people just don't like us," she laughs.

Then there's Union Life, the religious brotherhood she and Walter belong to, which she doesn't really want to discuss because she's not a proselytizer. It's just a family of people all round the country, all kinds of people, she says, "who have come to the realization that we don't have to control our lives. God does."

Miss Lillian believes that, too. And that "you should love everyone not in spite of what they are but because of it." And you should be just who you were meant to be and don't worry if some people don't love you back.

THERE'S HER ONLY child William, but — "he doesn't really come into this," she snaps.

Miss Lillian wrote when she was a Peace Corps nurse near Bombay in '67-'68 when she was 67, and suddenly Miss Lillian wasn't just her sharp-tongued mother anymore.

"I did not know my mother as a person until I edited this book ('Away From Home: Letters to My Family' by Lillian Carter, published by Simon and Schuster). Now I'm just so proud of her."

The letters made her laugh and cry and hurry up the road in Plains a mile to Miss Lillian's house, "to make sure she was really back and see if she needed anything. I wanted to wait on her hand and foot."

TEN YEARS AFTER the fact, she had finally gasped the physical deprivation Miss Lillian suffered; the homesickness and exhaustion from overwork; the heartache passing a leprous woman on the road every day who drank from mud puddles, whom

Jaycees

Civic joiners in Northwest suburbs find no old cliches in organization that allows no active members past 36

Scott Fosdick

Byline report

Alas, all Jaycees big and small eventually must shed their civic feathers and follow the lonely flight of the Exhausted Rooster. It's a sad fact of life.

Perhaps the most active young men's organization in the nation (excluding, of course, the armed services), the group fights a constant battle with its own rule — the rule that keeps the organization young by continually dropping its older members.

When a Jaycee turns 36, he loses all voting privileges and must relinquish any offices he holds in the local, state and national organizations. He becomes what they call an Exhausted Rooster.

Some Exhausted Roosters remain active in their chapters for a time, attending the monthly meetings and helping out on special projects. Many of the Jaycees truly are exhausted, however, and take the opportunity to leave the organization posthaste.

IF THE RETIRING member was a particularly active one, his sudden departure can drain much of the spirit out of his chapter and precipitate a rapid decline in membership. The effect can be crippling.

Five years ago, under the leadership of Bart Barrow, the Arlington Heights Jaycees hit its peak of activity, with more than 70 active members. Bob Braasch, current chapter president, said Barrow was the driving force of the group.

"He was a very dynamic member, he did things right," Braasch said.

Then the inexorable happened. Barrow was claimed like the aging citizens of the television show "Logan's Run." He turned 36.

BARROW TOOK A LOT of spirit and expertise with him, and membership began to fall. Recently, Braasch said, the membership stabilized, and even has climbed to 50.

"Any time a chapter stays above 40 members, it's a healthy chapter," he said.

Chapters in the forever mobile Northwest suburbs are especially vulnerable to another membership-robber: relocation. Men in their twenties and early thirties are often in a stage of their careers where they have to leave town, either because their companies move them to a different office, or because they change companies.

"You have a fair degree of turnover because of job changes," Braasch said. "But by the same token, we pick some up."

LOYAL JAYCEES don't always reaffiliate with the new local chapter when they move, however. "That holds true about half the time," Braasch said. So, for every two moves, the Jaycees of the nation lose one member.

It's a constant battle to keep members interested and to attract new members. Two local chapters that appear to be losing that battle are located in Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

More than 8,000 persons have moved to Buffalo Grove since 1971, but membership in the Jaycees there has steadily declined from 125 to about 50. If new blood isn't found soon, chapter president Leon Gapon recently said the club may fold.

The Rolling Meadows chapter is reportedly in even worse shape. (We were unable to locate any of its members for comment.)

BUT ACCORDING TO Randal G. Melind, member of the Elk Grove Village chapter and public relations chairman of the state organization ever since the Jaycees was born 62 years ago, the name of the game has been "involvement."

Originally called the St. Louis Progressive Citizen Assoc., the Jaycees was formed in St. Louis in 1915. It early on associated with the Chamber of Commerce, and became known as the J.C.s, for Junior Chamber of Commerce.

In 1965 it changed its image and disassociated completely from the Chamber of Commerce in an effort to attract more nonbusiness types.

THE CHANGE REAPED fast rewards. In the past 10 years the number of Jaycees in the country has more than doubled. There are now 500,000 Jaycees in America, and, with chapters in 80 countries (including the United States), there are more than

Victorian splendor to unfold at forum

Grace Carolyn

Collecting

Last year I almost made it. This year, Dearborn or bust. I'm speaking of the 18th annual Midwest Antiques Forum, to be held at Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, Mich., Oct. 18-22. This year's Adrenalin-upper theme is "Collecting Americana: The World Under Glass - The Age of Extravagant Decoration, 1837-1888."

Since my home decor might be considered extravagant not by means of money spent but by over-decoration and since I'm not known for my Japanese restraint, the emphasis on Victorian appeals to me. Actually, I like anything made during the 1300s, but my pocketbook lies more in the area of Early Garage Sale or Thrift Shop Thirties.

But, ah, to be at Dearborn this October. Five days of total immersion in this quite remarkable period of American growth, expansion and development. There will be illustrated lectures on architecture, horticulture, furniture and all other facets of decorative art, along with group discussions, teas and tours of the museum, adjacent Greenfield Village and the Belle Isle Conservatory in Detroit.

DR. WILLIAM SEALE, historian from Alexandria, Va., will open the five-day forum with the topic "The Spirit of the Times, 1837-1888." Later the same day Dr. Wayne Andrews, archivist at Wayne State University, will speak on "The Gothic, from Dynamite to Dividend — American Architecture from Jackson to Harrison."

Paul Hollister, artist, author, collector, closes the day with "The World Under Glass - New York City, 1853." Wednesday morning, Dr. Kenneth L. Ames, of the Winterthur Museum in Delaware, another beautiful place, offers "Furniture — the Romantic Revivals." The other two lectures Wednesday are "Patent and Innovative Nineteenth Century Furniture" by Joseph Butler, curator of Sleepy Hollow Restoration, Tarrytown, N.Y., and "Metals — a Potpourri, 1837-1888" by H. Parrott Bacot, curator of the Anglo-American Museum of Baton Rouge, La.

Other lectures during the forum include the "Horticultural Extravaganza of the Victorian Era" by James R. Buckler of the Smithsonian Institution, and "Plants in Pots — Indoor Victorian Gardening" by Elizabeth Taylor Childs, of the Valentine Museum, Richmond, Va. Then "Textiles in the Domestic Interior," "Schoolgirl Arts and Crafts," and "Views of a Developing Nation." That last title rates an "ouch!" — it will be about early photography.

THE FORUM WILL close Oct. 22 with "Gilding the Ceramic Lily" about pottery (my favorite) by a particular hero of mine, Richard Carter Barret, of The Bennington Museum, Vermont, and another presentation on the Centennial of 1876. Interesting to compare with the Bi-you-know-what.

The $70 weekly registration fee will include all lectures, programs, Thursday special tour and dinner in Lovett Hall Saturday evening, or one may attend any one of the series, mornings for $12, evenings, $6. One day's programs and doings costs $16. For a leaflet giving more details and a reservation blank, as well as lodging and restaurant information, write Midwest Antiques Forum, Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, Mich. 48121.

The doctor says

He's worried by prostate trouble

I am now in my 80th year and except for some prostate trouble I am in fairly good health.

Last year I started having to get up at night and have to relieve myself more often during the day. Whenever I rise from the sitting position I have to go. In addition, the starting of the flow is difficult and I do not empty completely so that after a few minutes I am compelled to relieve myself again. I saw my urologist and after a complete examination including a cystoscopy the only remark he made was to see him in six months or sooner if necessary.

Now, Dr. Lamb, I have a few questions. Can a malignancy be involved? I realize that the enlarged prostate diminishes the lumen of the urethra so that there is difficulty in starting the flow, but why do I get another urge a minute or two later?

Although the urologist has not suggested it, is there any reason why a prostatectomy is indicated at this time?

Do you think the urologist is waiting for me to close up before he operates? Is this the usual procedure in similar cases?

If there is no malignancy at present, can a malignancy be precipitated by operating?

Just because a man has an enlarged prostate or an obstructed flow from the prostate does not mean a malignancy is present. A prostate gland may have an acute infection, a chronic infection, become enlarged or develop a malignancy.

The older a man gets the more likely he is to have nests of cancer cells in the prostate. The later these occur the less likely they are to grow rapidly or spread. A man may live out his life span and never have any trouble from such cells. A number of these are diagnosed only by examination after death, or found only during a prostate operation. Frequent examinations by your doctor will detect any lump or nodule that might signal a change and still gives the doctor time to provide an actual cure of the cancer. The cancer growth should be detected as early as possible. That is the reason for repeated examination.

The enlarged prostate prevents complete emptying of the bladder and because it is distended it is constantly sending out signals through your nervous system that you need to empty it. That is the basic reason for the frequent need to relieve yourself. Your doctor knows just how much residual urine is in your bladder from your tests. Apparently he doesn't think it is enough to justify surgery in your case at this time.

If there is a malignancy involved it must be a small nest of cells in the prostate and probably has nothing to do with your obstructive symptoms or your doctor would have advised surgery.

Whether or not you need a prostate operation depends upon how much obstruction you have. Doctors usually do not wait until the opening is completely closed. Surgery will not cause a malignancy but if there are any small nests of cells that cannot be felt by finger examination these might then be found.

Cacti give children early nature lesson

Kidstuff: Let the children watch at close hand one of nature's wonders: buy them various cactus species. If their bedrooms have a window with an eastern exposure, they've got it made. They can forget weekly or every two-week feedings, and still enjoy seeing their cacti grow — and perhaps even produce baby shoots. (Supermarkets sell soil prepared for cacti.) The kids will think they are greenery specialists: their cacti will live on and on.

Dear Roberta: Those who are just starting out with fish as pets should know the rule of thumb for feeding them. The proper amount of fishfood is what the fish can eat in five minutes. If they've finished their food in less than that time, they might not have had enough. If they're still eating after five minutes, they've had too much. More fish die from overfeeding than from any other cause. — Mrs. Gilda Atchison

New Products Department: A new frozen soup has come onto the market with a wide line of varieties. They're fully prepared and need only to be heated in their sealed packages in boiling water. One plus is that they contain no preservatives, fillers or other artificial additives. I tried some of the vegetable soups. They're super. The chicken broth types were less satisfying. The others I'm going to try one-by-one. I'll give you an updated report when all have been tested. But, if you want to, go ahead and try the vegetable soup and the pea soup. These aren't gourmet items: they're just plain good. And they're not oversalted as most convenience soups are.

The hectic and happy life of Jimmy Carter's sister to life for armed robbery in California, but she told all about him in a magazine once and that was enough.

Still, she did say her life was an open book, and if Miss Lillian is such a source of strength, she must have helped her cope with the situation.

"Let's put it this way," she says coldly. "When we were adjusting to being a President's family and having these things come out, my mother's letters were a constant strength to me. Is that okay? Thank you."

A MOMENT LATER, she's happily confiding that she tells the tour bus in Plains to stop at the big house nearby because her own "isn't feasible for the sister of a President!"

Then, as she explains how she lives day to day and doesn't ever look back or ahead, her eyes get soft and she says, quietly, "My son is in jail for a purpose. Maybe his life will help others later on. His being in jail turned me to God, and Ruth (Carter Stapleton), too, and every day I get hundreds of letters and phone calls from people who say, I never thought I could live through having a son in jail until I read that you did, too."

She's "Gogo," whose door is always open to anyone, any time, and who leaves everything to God. Whooping again, she adds, "whoever she may be!"

Homeline recipe repeated

The quick and easy salad recipe in Wednesday's Homeline was neither quick nor easy because of some dropped lines so we are repeating the instructions:

"This fabulous rice and seafood salad from Frieda Campbell can be dressed up or down by using a variety of seafoods or by using shrimp only — increased in amount to make up for what seafoods in the recipe you choose to leave out. For at least 16 servings, cook two cups regular (not instant or quick-cooking) rice according to package directions. In the meantime, make a simple French dressing by combining one-half cup salad oil, two tablespoons vinegar, one tablespoon salt and one teaspoon freshly ground black pepper. Drain rice and toss immediately with this dressing. Cool. Add one-eighth teaspoon hot pepper sauce, two teaspoons Worchestershire sauce and one cup minced onion. Gently mix in two cooked and cooled 10-ounce packages of tiny baby peas. Add two small packages (thawed) frozen, shelled and devined cooked baby shrimp, one can flaked, drained, cooked lobster or one package (thawed) frozen langostinos and one small can drained, flaked crabmeat. Chill. Before serving, combine two-thirds cup mayonnaise with two tablespoons fresh lemon juice and fold into salad."

YOUR ASSURANCE OF SATISFACTION —our 113-year reputation for working with music educators. The less you know about instruments, the more you need Lyon-Healy; the more you know, the more you'll appreciate Lyon-Healy.

FULL PROTECTION—for maintenance, repair and replacement if lost or stolen, optional at low cost.

BAND INSTRUMENT PLAN

- UNIQUE TRIAL-PURCHASE PLAN lets you use an instrument as little as one month (no 3-month minimum) or as long as you like.
- LOW MONTHLY RATES—Used instruments available at even lower rates. All payments apply toward purchase price if you decide to buy.
- NO OBLIGATION TO BUY—Return instrument at any time and trial-purchase agreement will be cancelled.

STRINGED INSTRUMENT PLAN

- RENT the proper-size instrument, to exchange later for a larger instrument as the child grows.
- LOW MONTHLY PAYMENTS can apply on purchase of full-size instrument.

Both stores open weekdays 'til 9:30 P.M.; Sat. 'til 5:30; Sun. 12 noon 'til 5.

Jaycees boost new image to attract new membership

Every chapter runs into occasional drops in membership, but drastic declines such as the one faced by the Buffalo Grove chapter are the exception, not the rule. Melind said Jaycees chapters in the Northwest suburbs never have been healthier.

"We have really grown in the last five years," he said.

THE JAYCEES chapters in the Northwest suburbs belong to the state organization's North Region. With 57 growing chapters, Melind said the North Region is the 10th in the country. Five-years ago there were about 2,000 Jaycees in the North Region; now there are 2,800.

The Jaycees didn't get this big by just drinking beer together. They've been involved in a vast range of projects, helping senior citizens, raising money for funds to fight disease, setting up youth groups and organizing local Fourth of July celebrations.

A striking example of the ability of the Jaycees to get things done occurred nine years ago in Hoffman Estates. It began when a handicapped member of the local Jaycees complained of having trouble getting his wheelchair up the steps into village hall. They made it a chapter project, and eventually convinced the village to build a ramp.

BASED ON THIS success, the state organization took it on as a project, and it later became a national Jaycees project. As a result, today the law demands that all new federal and state buildings must provide wheelchair access.

Through all its fund-raising events and community involvement, the Jaycees has tried to remain nonpolitical. But it hasn't been entirely successful, and controversy has somehow managed to dog its tracks.

Jaycees are currently embroiled in a debate over the site of their International World Congress. The annual convention opens next month in South Africa, the country where segregation is official policy.

JOSEPH K. LUNN, president of the Chicago Jaycees, said he will boycott the convention to show support for human rights, and he encouraged other Jaycees to do the same.

Charles Fries, a member of the Schaumburg chapter and national vice president of the Jaycee Senate, is one of the few suburban members who plan to attend. (Most say they can't afford the expense of the trip, estimated to cost from $1,200 to $2,000.)

Fries said the South Africa Jaycees group was the first organization in that country to admit black members, and it deserves to have the convention.

PERHAPS THE LARGEST controversy facing the Jaycees is over women's membership. The controversy has precipitated legal battles reaching as high as the Supreme Court. The courts have decided that the Jaycees are within their rights to bar women, but the topic remains a hot one within the organization.

The Chicago chapter admits women members, but has lost its national and state voting privileges as a result.

Melind says he expects the issue to be debated at length at next year's national convention.

In the meantime, there is still the Jaycees women's organization. there is only one national organization, though several local chapters go under different names: Jaycettes, Jaycee-ettes, Jaycee Auxiliary and Jaycee Wives. Members of the women's groups don't have to be related in any way to a Jaycee.

TO ATTRACT MORE members, today's Jaycees are into personal development classes, teaching leadership skills, public speaking and techniques for identifying and attaining career goals.

With less emphasis on small projects — what one Jaycee calls the "Mickey Mouse" activities — and more emphasis on personal programs that can help a man get ahead in his career, the Jaycees hope to attract more and more members. With the flock to Exhausted Roosters growing daily, the young Jaycees seem willing to try anything.

Savageaus 50th anniversary

A mass, dinner and open house marked the golden wedding anniversary Sept. 17 of Mr. and Mrs. George Savageau, residents of Arlington Heights for 17 years.

The 9 a.m. mass was in St. James Church where the Savageaus are active members of the Friendship Club. George is president this year. The 1 p.m. dinner was at Plentywood Farm and the open house at their home.

Among the well-wishers were their children, Robert of Cincinnati, Ohio; their daughter, Carol Birong, Arlington Heights; 13 grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

The couple enjoys traveling, having visited most of the United States, plus Canada, Mexico and Europe. This year they are planning to tour Texas by bus.

It's like starting a whole new life!

At least once, in every life, a chance for change comes along. And the few — the bright few — who recognize and seize it are those who can gain real control of their lives.
We believe one such opportunity is now available for you here at Better Living. Through the field of direct sales, you can bring both excellent and proven products to your community, as well as a new and profitable way of life to yourself.

ANY (OR ALL) OF FIVE CAREERS.

Product research and market research are both major activities of our corporate function. Thereby, distributors such as yourself can be confident of offering high-quality products to a responsive marketplace — a marketplace currently reached with nutritional products & weight control programs, personal care products, home care products and our newest line of custom made jewelry.

Some distributors serve all these markets. Some choose one or two. But all make that decision themselves.

NO BRIDGES TO BURN.

Part time or full time. Daytime or evening. Individual, family or group. You'll find, as your own boss, that a best method of operation develops from your own particular needs and strengths. And through Better Living's investment-free opportunity, you actually can build your own business while working at your current job.

AID AND COMFORT.

You may be your own boss, but you're never alone. From Trenton, Detroit, Chicago and San Jose, we're only a call away. Whether to fill an order or answer a question, we're here and we'll help. (Remember, we didn't start with all the answers either).

However, more than moral support, we offer a total promotion program of national advertising, a mobile training staff which travels throughout the U.S., product catalogs, sales aids, incentives and bonuses along with a monthly newsletter to keep you posted on local training, new products, new markets, new achievements, conventions and all the news of Better Living.

HARD WORK, HIGH REWARDS.

The American Ethic is often portrayed as one of honest endeavor being the means to lasting happiness. Well, that's true, but only partly so. We think our distributors have added to that portrait to make it more realistic: A good product delivered with honest endeavor to a receptive audience surely can add to and lengthen one's happiness. In fact, those new to direct sales often tell us they never before realized the fun involved in meeting new people, in proudly offering needed products, in being called back for repeat orders.

DO YOURSELF A FAVOR.

But do it now! Dial this number 956-0904 for more information or to set up an interview.

Remember this could be the start of a whole new way of life.

Conversation best way to meet that certain guy

Listen to Marian

Dear Marian,

I like this guy in my class a real lot. I see him every day. The problem is that I can't think of anything to say to him. We have real good eye contact. we catch each other's eyes and we stare and smile. Sometimes he sits next to me, but I get nervous and don't say anything.

One day we were assigned partners and he was mine. After class was over I think he wanted to walk home with me. The problem there is we live in opposite directions.

He seems really nice and I'd like to get to know him better. Any suggestions?

J.P

Dear J.P.,

Since it seems you both like each other but are shy, the only thing for you to do is try to start a conversation. School is a God-given opportunity for conversation making. If it's a math class, ask him if he understands the latest assignment. (Pretend you don't.) If it's an English class, ask him if he read the assignment and if he likes it. Think of a number of things to say ahead ot time to keep the conversation going. If he really likes you, he'll try to do his part.

Dear Marian,

I have this close girl friend. We are both in athletics at our school. When we don't talk about our sport, we get along really good. The problems are when we talk about it, she tells me what I'm doing wrong and tells me it's my fault for losing. Another problem is when we talk if I say something wrong she corrects me. She always has to be right. Also when we are in school, she wants to copy off my paper. When I try to look at hers, she covers it up and tells me to look in the book.

What can I do? I like her a lot but she has her faults too.

Nobody's Perfect

Dear Nobody's Perfect

If you want to go on being friends with this girl, you can either tell her the things that bug you about her and ask her not to do it, or just accept the things that annoy you about her. If you tell her, she may get angry and you have to decide if it's worth it. If you decide not to tell her, you can try to get her to stop by ignoring the rude things she does. For example, when she tells you the things you do wrong in sports, just say "Do you think so?" and change the subject. As for her copying off you, do the same thing she does: cover your paper.

Marian,

I've got this friend. She was really nice to me, but when she went into high school she changed.

She is on the pom-pon squad at our school. She was okay the first year she made it, but the second year was impossible. School hasn't started yet, but I'm starting to dislike her now.

Every day she calls me up to do something. I have other friends I'd like to see, but she insists I see her all the time. Wherever we go, she brings less than a dollar. She calls me every night and we talk about nothing. When we go into a store and I see some guys from our school and I say "Hi," she tells me to shut up.

What has come over her? Ever since pom-pon she is unbearable. I like her, but I'm limited to what I can do. I'm starting to feel uncomfortable around her because she doesn't like some of my actions.

Should I leave her alone or go out with her every day?

Want to Stay Home

Dear W.S.H.,

If you don't enjoy her company don't see her. Even if you do want to see her occasionally, you shouldn't let her monopolize your time like that. When she wants to go out, only go when you want to go; don't let here talk you into doing something you don't enjoy. When she calls, only stay on the phone a few minutes and then say you have to go. If you let her keep you from seeing other people, you will regret it.

Weddings

Rhonda Motzkus—Kenneth Johnson

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Johnson

St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights, was the setting for the Aug. 20 wedding of Rhonda Lynne Motzkus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton D. Motzkus of Arlington, and Kenneth Lee Johnson, son of the Herbert E. Johnsons of Mount Prospect.

The 3:30 p.m. ceremony was followed by a reception with dinner and dancing for 200 at the Ramada-O'Hare Inn, Rosemont. After a honeymoon in California, the newlyweds are lving in Schaumburg.

Rhonda chose Christel Strunk, Arlington Heights, as maid of honor. Lynne Johnson, Mount Prospect; the groom's sister Pat; Diana Bowling, Arlington Heights; and Kristi Spears, Cahokia, Ill., were bridesmaids. They all wore apricot knit gowns, halter style, with floral capes and each carried a basket of white and apricot carnations, glads, stephanotis and baby's breath.

RHONDA WORE a white knit jersey gown trimmed in Venise lace, complemented by a fingertip veil edged in lace and a lace headpiece. She carried pale apricot and white roses, miniature carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Frank Blum, St. Paul, Minn., was Ken's best man, and groomsmen were Tom McHugh, Madison; John Nelson and Bill Hartmann, Mount Prospect and the bride's brother Kent.

Soloist for the service was Nancy Crabill Grzych, Metamora, Ill., acolyte was the bride's brother, Kyle; ushers were Rob Beck, Mount Prospect, and Randy Cooper, Charleston, Ill.

Rhonda is a 1973 graduate of Hersey High School and Ken a 1972 graduate of Prospect High. Both are graduates of Eastern Illinois University, where the bride was affiliated with Kappa Delta sorority, and she also earned a master's at EIU. Ken is now with Consumer Systems, Oakbrook.

Barbara Smith

John Feekin

Putting their heads together at an after-school conference regarding one of their students led to putting their lives together at Palatine Presbyterian Church on Aug. 20 for Barbara Jean Smith and John Alan Feekin.

Barbara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Smith, is a tutor, and a teacher in Round Lake area schools. John, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Feekin, teaches in Palatine Township Dist. 15. Both families are Palatine residents.

For the 1 p.m. double ring ceremony, Barbara wore a white silk-faced jersey gown with scalloped appliques of Venise lace. Her mantilla veil was held by a Camelot headpiece of matching lace. In her hand was her mother's white Bible, adorned with white roses, baby's breath and ivy.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Feekin

MATRON OF HONOR was Anne K. Sharp, Minneapolis, sister of the bride, and Jan E. McWhirter, Fort Worth, Tex., was bridesmaid. Both wore mint green gowns in a silk-satin fabric and carried nosegays of yellow tea roses, white carnations and baby's breath.

John chose Keith J. One as best man, and his brothers, Bob and Roger as groomsmen. All are from Palatine.

A sit-down dinner for 100 guests was served at Uncle Andy's Cow Palace, following the wedding.

The newlyweds are now at home in Vernon Hills, after a five-day honeymoon in Oconomowoc, Wis. Barbara is a '71 graduate of Fremd High School and a '75 graduate of Texas Christian University. John, a '71 graduate of Palatine High, graduated from Western Illinois University in 1975.

Joyce Macaluso— Karl Heitman

Cancun, a new resort city in the Yucatan peninsula of Mexico, was the honeymoon site for Joyce Lynn Macaluso and Karl Heitman.

During her high school years at Hersey, Joyce, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Macaluso of Chicago, made her home with her brother and sister-in-law, the Charles Macalusos in Arlington Heights. Mrs. Macaluso was Joyce's matron of honor for the Aug. 20 wedding which took place in Christ the King Lutheran Church in Houston, Tex..

Joyce is studying nursing at Texas Women's University in Houston, and Karl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Talmage Heitman Jr., Houston, is studying architecture at the University of Houston. He also is employed by Nordic Constructors in Houston.

BRIDESMAIDS for the double ring service were Mrs. Colleen Foster, Kingsville, Tex., and Diane Mangrum, Houston. They and Mrs. Macaluso wore peach satin halter gowns with floral chiffon capelets, and carried nosgays of peach daisies, baby's breath and white pompons.

Joyce chose an ivory chiffon gown with Alencon lace trim, and instead of a veil she wore a cluster of white orchids in her hair. Her bouquet included an assortment of white flowers and greenery.

Mr. Heitman served as his son's best man, and groomsmen were John Garrison and the groom's brother-in-law, John Jordan, Houston. Ushers were James R. MacDonald and Kim Jones, also of Houston.

A buffet reception for 100 was held in the church parlors.

'Rosetti-Ryan' – NBC's strong case

When we last left "Rosetti and Ryan," the free-wheeling criminal attorneys were attempting to charm their way into a strong defense for a woman accused of killing her husband.

That was back in May in an NBC pilot labeled, "Rosetti and Ryan: Men Who Love Women." That was supposed to be an eye-catcher, but if it sounds a little exploitative of the "weaker sex" to you, consider yourself in good company. The stars of the show thought so too.

"Rosetti and Ryan" premieres tonight in what looks to be NBC's only decent new series for the fall season. The duo still will be eager to applaud anything in a skirt, but will be deliverately less glib about it.

"ROSETTI AND RYAN"

"I THINK the title of the pilot, 'Men Who Love Women' was misleading. We didn't like it at all and it wasn't the title on the script when we did it," said the very talented Tony Roberts who stars as Joe Rosetti, a bright, upper middle class fellow who is slick and smooth with the ladies.

His partner, played by Squire Fridell, is Frank Ryan, an ex-cop who went to night school to study law and comes across as the fall guy of the twosome.

Their characters became classic in the pilot during a scene when the two were on their way into an elevator. As they entered, three women were on their way out. Each of the girls walked past them and when the parade finally had filed by, the two lawyers dropped their briefcases to the floor and applauded enthusiastically.

"That particular scene came off very well, but it was dangerously on the line," Roberts said.

"It wasn't the fact that these were a great pair of hips passing by. It was just a chance to applaud the girls as they went by . . . and I don't feel that's chauvinistic," he said.

NEEDLESS TO SAY, "Rosetti and Ryan" appear to think of themselves as men of the world, but no more so than other fun-loving, smooth male chums on television.

It's that same charisma and comaraderie shared by "Starsky and Hutch" that will make "Rosetti and Ryan" one of television's most popular duos this fall.

The maverick heroes in this hour-long mystery-comedy, which airs Thursdays at 9 p.m. on Channel 5, have a healthy disregard for the judicial procedure. They most often are winners of their puzzling and bizarre cases and a love interest for many of their desperate female clients.

It sounds like a tempting assignment for two actors who seem to be a lot of fun in real life. But, the series actually is offering both Roberts and Fridell the chance to flex their muscles regularly in another branch of the entertainment world.

Roberts, a native New Yorker and good friend of Woody Allen, has made his biggest and brightest strides so far on Broadway in stage productions such as the comedy "Play It Again, Sam," and the musical "Promises, Promises." One of his claims to fame is that he succeeded Robert Redford in the stage production of "Barefoot in the Park."

MANY WILL recognize him as Al Pacino's friend in "Serpico," Woody Allen's friend in "Annie Hall," "Phyllis' " periodic television boyfriend and the detective in the television drama, "The Lindbergh Kidnaping Case."

There was simply no other line of work he could have entered, Roberts said, explaining his father, Ken Roberts, a long-time announcer for the soap opera "Love of Life," the perfume "Arpege" and past radio series such as "Quick as a Flash," instilled the acting bug in him from an early age.

Fridell, on the other hand, is a theater and television production teacher who turned actor. A California native, Fridell made his professional debut in 1968 in television's "The Bold Ones."

Both actors have become very rich over the years doing voice-overs for television commercials and both were asked to audition for the lead roles in "Rosetti and Ryan" by the show's executive producer, Leonard Stern, whose credits include "McMillian," "Get Smart," "He and She," "Holmes and Yoyo" and writing for comedian Steve Allen.

"This is the steadiest job you can have as an actor. To know that you've got someplace to go everyday for six months or so is a wonderful gift and that's why I accepted this part," Roberts said.

BOTH ACTORS have been meeting with Stern and his writers before the shooting of each episode begins to review their lines. Roberts said he doesn't want to portray a "womanizer."

"I don't think of my character as a womanizer. I was afraid of that when I first read the script and was careful to try and avoid it during the shooting of it," he said.

"There were scenes in the pilot that were obviously intended to be lewd. Hopefully they didn't come across that way because I'm scared to death of doing that," Roberts said.

Robert and Fridell are serious about their new television responsibility which they hope will be a "good cut above the average program." A lot of that will depend on the writing.

But, if the two young actors have things their way, and they are obviously set out to have just that, the show won't reflect anything they don't want. If that's the case, "Rosetti and Ryan" stands a good chance of survival in the television jungle.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- The Kotters' lifestyle does a flipflop when they bring their newborn twins home on "Welcome Back, Kotter" at 7 p.m. on Channel 7.
- Patrick Duffy returns as "The Man From Atlantis," an underwater hero of sorts in a new series that premieres at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

Vincent Price conquers in Oscar Wilde treatment

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

You've just got to admire a man who can verbally skewer everything from Indiana farmers to English poetry. Even if he offends your sensibilities (and chances are, he will) he's sure to generate envy in anyone who has clutched for the perfect response — and come up emptyhanded.

Oscar Wilde, English author and playwright, "The Picture of Dorian Gray," "The Importance of Being Earnest," was just such a character: a superb wit who relished in informing his staid Victorian audience that "good manners are far more important than good morals." Vincent Price brings him to Chicago in "Diversions and Delights," a one-man show at the Studebaker Theater, and the result is a diverting, if not always delightful, evening of theater.

"Diversions and Delights" takes the form of a lecture in a rather seedy Paris hall, circa 1899. Oscar Fingal O'Flahertie Wills Wilde (alias Price) is at a low ebb, having recently left England after imprisonment on a highly publicized morals charge. Unable to write, he nevertheless retains his punch — thanks to playwright John Gay's skillful blending of Wilde's correspondence and published works.

Mid-week review

WILDE WINDS UP by taking potshots at Americans. Chicago, a stop on his United States lecture tour, is described as a city full of "bustles and bores." Indianapolis is even worse: "I called the farmers peasants, and I was crucified."

Women receive their share of lambasting too: "Twenty years of romance makes a woman look like a ruin; twenty years of marriage makes her look like a public building." And even the Catholic Church is not immune to Wilde's barbs. He recalls gleefully that he visited the Vatican once and was blessed seven times — "until the novelty wore off."

Though the insults and epigrams keep coming, there are plenty of serious moments in "Diversions and Delights." The first act's closing speech is a poignant recollection of a friend's farewell before Wilde left Dublin for Trinity College and the beginnings of fame. The second hour, while often rambling and melodramatic, shows Wilde as a bitter failure, protesting his homosexual lover's betrayal, his treatment in the press and his excruciating two-year prison term.

AND PRICE'S portrayal? Practically perfect.

From his manicured hairstyle and feathery hands to the way he trills his r's and curls his lip in a frequent sneer, the star of "Theater of Blood" and "The Conqueror Worm" shows he's done his homework. ("Do I appear to be overdressed?" he asks his audience. "If so, I atone for it by by being immensely overeducated") are displayed to their best — or worst — advantage.

Joseph Hardy's skillful direction helps, too. Working with only a lectern, armchair and small table, he manages to keep the lecture format from generating more yawns than chuckles.

Two hours of Price's nasal witticisms, self-congratulations and occasionally maudlin soliloquies may be overbearing for some. But you're guaranteed at least a few laughs, and who knows: if you take notes, you just might be provided with your next zinging comeback.

Preacher of airwaves brings show biz to pulpit

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Hey," big Duke Wayne rumbled to Jimmy Stewart after the wedding ceremony, "How'd you like the way he read those lines?"

"Terrific!" Jimmy replied.

Glenn Ford, still flushed by the excitement of his marriage rites to Cynthia Howard, could only nod agreement.

The movie stars weren't discussing the bridegroom's performance. They were praising the delivery of the preacher, the Rev. Dr. Robert H. Schuller, who replied somewhat piously, "When you really feel deeply what you're doing, your lines always come across very effectively."

DR. SCHULLER knows as much about delivering lines as any actor in Hollywood. The Protestant minister brings church biz to show biz with his "Hour of Power" on 156 TV stations every Sunday.

His effectiveness cannot be denied. Schuller's mailbag bulges with an average 40,000 letters a week, more than Wayne, Stewart and Ford combined. But then, presumably, the preacher's got God on his side.

Arbitron ratings reflect an audience of 1.5 million viewers each week, perhaps making his ministry the largest in the nation.

A PRODUCER CASTING a man of the cloth would have to go a long way to find a better prototype for the role than Schuller, a tall, silver-haired man somewhat austere in repose but whose smile radiates benevolence.

He swept into the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel — filmtown's favorite watering hole — resplendent in wide-lapelled black suit. The jacket cuffs were turned back and handsomely edged. His shirt cuffs were monogramed with an "S."

Schuller was asked what he thought of Billy Graham's recent crusade in Hungary.

TAKEN ABACK, the parson made a face expressing disapproval. "I don't know who is using whom," he said. Then, hastily, he added, "I'm not a general critic of Billy's. We're good personal friends.

"I have to meet the Sunday morning spiritual needs of people dying on both sides of the political fence. People who tune in are dying emotionally or spiritually."

Schuller preaches from an awesome proscenium with fountains and lights and soaring columns, much like an actor. It was suggested that Schuller's success on television might be ascribed to his dramatic talent.

THE THOUGHT clearly displeased him.

"I don't want my sincerity questioned by saying I'm a dramatic actor," said the spellbinder. "Hopefully, we are good communicators, not dramatists. An artist knows all the tools available for his trade and when to use them.

"The spoken word is just part of preaching. The non-verbal tools are facial expressions, use of the hands, body language and the pause. The word 'dramatic' means ability to perform a show business act."

Repellent as "acting" might be, Schuller does, in fact, dramatize his sermons. He tempered the observation by saying his preachments "are an emotional portrayal of historical events of the Bible which transcends drama."

ASKED IF HE thought his show, now in its seventh year, was partially responsible for what appears to be a resurgence of church attendance, Schuller's eyes brightened behind his highly polished spectacles.

"When a question poses an inner conflict between my modesty and honesty, then I've got a problem," he replied. "But television is part of it because of the significance of our own work.

"The big return to church involves many movements of the basic vitality of evangelical elements of Christendom."

Schuller is a member of the Dutch Reform Church, which he describes as the oldest Protestant denomination with an unbroken ministry in the United States, going back to 1628.

'Rosetti-Ryan' – NBC's strong case

When we last left "Rosetti and Ryan," the free-wheeling criminal attorneys were attempting to charm their way into a strong defense for a woman accused of killing her husband.

That was back in May in an NBC pilot labeled, "Rosetti and Ryan: Men Who Love Women." That was supposed to be an eye-catcher, but if it sounds a little exploitative of the "weaker sex" to you, consider yourself in good company. The stars of the show thought so too.

"Rosetti and Ryan" premieres tonight in what looks to be NBC's only decent new series for the fall season. The duo still will be eager to applaud anything in a skirt, but will be deliverately less glib about it.

"ROSETTI AND RYAN"

"I THINK the title of the pilot, 'Men Who Love Women' was misleading. We didn't like it at all and it wasn't the title on the script when we did it," said the very talented Tony Roberts who stars as Joe Rosetti, a bright, upper middle class fellow who is slick and smooth with the ladies.

His partner, played by Squire Fridell, is Frank Ryan, an ex-cop who went to night school to study law and comes across as the fall guy of the two-some.

Their characters became classic in the pilot during a scene when the two were on their way into an elevator. As they entered, three women were on their way out. Each of the girls walked past them and when the parade finally had filed by, the two lawyers dropped their briefcases to the floor and applauded enthusiastically.

"That particular scene came off very well, but it was dangerously on the line," Roberts said.

"It wasn't the fact that these were a great pair of hips passing by. It was just a chance to applaud the girls as they went by . . . and I don't feel that's chauvinistic," he said.

NEEDLESS TO SAY, "Rosetti and Ryan" appear to think of themselves as men of the world, but no more so than other fun-loving, smooth male chums on television.

It's that same charisma and comaraderie shared by "Starsky and Hutch" that will make "Rosetti and Ryan" one of television's most popular duos this fall.

The maverick heroes in this hour-long mystery-comedy, which airs Thursdays at 9 p.m. on Channel 5, have a healthy disregard for the judicial procedure. They most often are winners of their puzzling and bizarre cases and a love interest for many of their desperate female clients.

It sounds like a tempting assignment for two actors who seem to be a lot of fun in real life. But, the series actually is offering both Roberts and Fridell the chance to flex their muscles regularly in another branch of the entertainment world.

Roberts, a native New Yorker and good friend of Woody Allen, has made his biggest and brightest strides so far on Broadway in stage productions such as the comedy "Play It Again, Sam," and the musical "Promises, Promises." One of his claims to fame is that he succeeded Robert Redford in the stage production of "Barefoot in the Park."

MANY WILL recognize him as Al Pacino's friend in "Serpico," Woody Allen's friend in "Annie Hall," "Phyllis' " periodic television boyfriend and the detective in the television drama, "The Lindbergh Kidnaping Case."

There was simply no other line of work he could have entered, Roberts said, explaining his father, Ken Roberts, a long-time announcer for the soap opera "Love of Life," the perfume "Arpege" and past radio series such as "Quick as a Flash," instilled the acting bug in him from an early age.

Fridell, on the other hand, is a theater and television production teacher who turned actor. A California native, Fridell made his professional debut in 1968 in television's "The Bold Ones."

Both actors have become very rich over the years doing voice-overs for television commercials and both were asked to audition for the lead roles in "Rosetti and Ryan" by the show's executive producer, Leonard Stern, whose credits include "McMillian," "Get Smart," "He and She," "Holmes and Yoyo" and writing for comedian Steve Allen.

"This is the steadiest job you can have as an actor. To know that you've got someplace to go everyday for six months or so is a wonderful gift and that's why I accepted this part," Roberts said.

BOTH ACTORS have been meeting with Stern and his writers before the shooting of each episode begins to review their lines. Roberts said he doesn't want to portray a "womanizer."

"I don't think of my character as a womanizer. I was afraid of that when I first read the script and was careful to try and avoid it during the shooting of it," he said.

"There were scenes in the pilot that were obviously intended to be lewd. Hopefully they didn't come across that way because I'm scared to death of doing that," Roberts said.

Robert and Fridell are serious about their new television responsibility which they hope will be a "good cut above the average program." A lot of that will depend on the writing.

But, if the two young actors have things their way, and they are obviously set out to have just that, the show won't reflect anything they don't want. If that's the case, "Rosetti and Ryan" stands a good chance of survival in the television jungle.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- The Kotters' lifestyle does a flipflop when they bring their newborn twins home on "Welcome Back, Kotter" at 7 p.m. on Channel 7.
- Patrick Duffy returns as "The Man From Atlantis," an underwater hero of sorts in a new series that premieres at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

Vincent Price conquers in Oscar Wilde treatment

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

You've just got to admire a man who can verbally skewer everything from Indiana farmers to English poetry. Even if he offends your sensibilities (and chances are, he will) he's sure to generate envy in anyone who has clutched for the perfect response — and come up emptyhanded.

Oscar Wilde, English author and playwright, "The Picture of Dorian Gray," "The Importance of Being Earnest," was just such a character: a superb wit who relished in informing his staid Victorian audience that "good manners are far more important than good morals." Vincent Price brings him to Chicago in "Diversions and Delights," a one-man show at the Studebaker Theater, and the result is a diverting, if not always delightful, evening of theater.

"Diversions and Delights" takes the form of a lecture in a rather seedy Paris hall, circa 1899. Oscar Fingal O'Flahertie Wills Wilde (alias Price) is at a low ebb, having recently left England after imprisonment on a highly publicized morals charge. Unable to write, he nevertheless retains his punch — thanks to playwright John Gay's skillful blending of Wilde's correspondence and published works.

Mid-week review

WILDE WINDS UP by taking pot-shots at Americans. Chicago, a stop on his United States lecture tour, is described as a city full of "bustles and bores." Indianapolis is even worse: "I called the farmers peasants, and I was crucified."

Women receive their share of lambasting too: "Twenty years of romance makes a woman look like a ruin; twenty years of marriage makes her look like a public building." And even the Catholic Church is not immune to Wilde's barbs. He recalls gleefully that he visited the Vatican once and was blessed seven times — "until the novelty wore off."

Though the insults and epigrams keep coming, there are plenty of serious moments in "Diversions and Delights." The first act's closing speech is a poignant recollection of a friend's farewell before Wilde left Dublin for Trinity College and the beginnings of fame. The second hour, while often rambling and melodramatic, shows Wilde as a bitter failure, protesting his homosexual lover's betrayal, his treatment in the press and his excruciating two-year prison term.

AND PRICE'S portrayal? Practically perfect.

From his manicured hairstyle and feathery hands to the way he trills his r's and curls his lip in a frequent sneer, the star of "Theater of Blood" and "The Conqueror Worm" shows he's done his homework. ("Do I appear to be overdressed?" he asks his audience. "If so, I atone for it by by being immensely overeducated") are displayed to their best — or worst — advantage.

Joseph Hardy's skillful direction helps, too. Working with only a lectern, armchair and small table, he manages to keep the lecture format from generating more yawns than chuckles.

Two hours of Price's nasal witticisms, self-congratulations and occasionally maudlin soliloquies may be overbearing for some. But you're guaranteed at least a few laughs, and who knows: if you take notes, you just might be provided with your next zinging comeback.

Preacher of airwaves brings show biz to pulpit

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Hey," big Duke Wayne rumbled to Jimmy Stewart after the wedding ceremony, "How'd you like the way he read those lines?"

"Terrific!" Jimmy replied.

Glenn Ford, still flushed by the excitement of his marriage rites to Cynthia Howard, could only nod agreement.

The movie stars weren't discussing the bridegroom's performance. They were praising the delivery of the preacher, the Rev. Dr. Robert H. Schuller, who replied somewhat piously, "When you really feel deeply what you're doing, your lines always come across very effectively."

DR. SCHULLER knows as much about delivering lines as any actor in Hollywood. The Protestant minister brings church biz to show biz with his "Hour of Power" on 156 TV stations every Sunday.

His effectiveness cannot be denied. Schuller's mailbag bulges with an average 40,000 letters a week, more than Wayne, Stewart and Ford combined. But then, presumably, the preacher's got God on his side.

Arbitron ratings reflect an audience of 1.5 million viewers each week, perhaps making his ministry the largest in the nation.

A PRODUCER CASTING a man of the cloth would have to go a long way to find a better prototype for the role than Schuller, a tall, silver-haired man somewhat austere in repose but whose smile radiates benevolence.

He swept into the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel — filmtown's favorite watering hole — resplendent in wide-lapelled black suit. The jacket cuffs were turned back and handsomely edged. His shirt cuffs were monogramed with an "S."

Schuller was asked what he thought of Billy Graham's recent crusade in Hungary.

TAKEN ABACK, the parson made a face expressing disapproval. "I don't know who is using whom," he said. Then, hastily, he added, "I'm not a general critic of Billy's. We're good personal friends.

"I have to meet the Sunday morning spiritual needs of people dying on both sides of the political fence. People who tune in are dying emotionally or spiritually."

Schuller preaches from an awesome proscenium with fountains and lights and soaring columns, much like an actor. It was suggested that Schuller's success on television might be ascribed to his dramatic talent.

THE THOUGHT clearly displeased him.

"I don't want my sincerity questioned by saying I'm a dramatic actor," said the spellbinder. "Hopefully, we are good communicators, not dramatists. An artist knows all the tools available for his trade and when to use them.

"The spoken word is just part of preaching. The non-verbal tools are facial expressions, use of the hands, body language and the pause. The word 'dramatic' means ability to perform a show business act."

Repellent as "acting" might be, Schuller does, in fact, dramatize his sermons. He tempered the observation by saying his preachments "are an emotional portrayal of historical events of the Bible which transcends drama."

ASKED IF HE thought his show, now in its seventh year, was partially responsible for what appears to be a resurgence of church attendance, Schuller's eyes brightened behind his highly polished spectacles.

"When a question poses an inner conflict between my modesty and honesty, then I've got a problem," he replied. "But television is part of it because of the significance of our own work.

"The big return to church involves many movements of the basic vitality of evangelical elements of Christendom."

Schuller is a member of the Dutch Reform Church, which he describes as the oldest Protestant denomination with an unbroken ministry in the United States, going back to 1628.

Ask Andy

Avocado is fruit with skin of an alligator

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Mike Hellebrand, 10, of Huntsville, Ala., for his question:

IS THE AVOCADO A FRUIT OR VEGETABLE?

The avocado is related to the laurel, and it is definitely a fruit tree. It can be found growing from Mexico south to Colombia and Peru and north to Florida and California. Leading supplier of the North American avocado market is California.

In 1911, an American named Carl Schmidt was hired by the West Indian Nursery in Altadena, Calif., to bring back from Mexico an avocado that would do well in Southern California. He brought back a number of varieties, but the Fuerte type proved to be the best when it survived a great freeze in 1913 and went on to grow and produce in a strong and vigorous way.

First plantings in California actually were made in 1848 by Henry Dalton in an area just east of Los Angeles. An additional orchard was established by a man named R. B. Ord in Santa Barbara in 1871.

What a great fruit the avocado is. It has no cholesterol at all and its oil is polyunsaturated. Although it is considered to be an exotic and glamorous item of food, it is actually most practical and very nourishing. It is highly nutritious and contains large amounts of the E vitamins as well as vitamin A, ascorbic acid, niacin, thiamine, riboflavin, magnesium, iron, phosphorus, calcium and potassium. One-half of an avocado contains only 138 calories.

The nutrient content, combined with a delicious and gentle flavor as well as a smooth texture, makes the avocado an especially good food for both adults and children. It's also very easy to digest.

The tropical avocado is shaped very much like a pear and comes in varieties that have skin of dark green or purplish-black. A large seed is found in the center of a yellow-green pulp that has a nutty flavor. The pulp is a perfect addition for any salad but can stand as the main ingredient in many other dishes.

Some people call the fruit alligator pear.

If you have a little patience, you can grow your own avocado tree at home. The next time you use an avocado at your house, save the seed and wash it carefully. Fill a jar with water. Stick three toothpicks into the sides of the seed and suspend it broad-side down a little way into the jar. In a few weeks the seed will crack and sprout. Roots will go down into the water and a stalk will climb into the air. When the roots are very thick, plant your small tree in a 12-inch pot filled with rich soil.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Namita Sachdev, 13, of Tucson, Ariz., for her question:

HOW DO SCARS FORM?

Wounds from cuts, surgical incisions or injuries from such diseases as acne and smallpox can result in permanent welts on the skin called scars. The scars are actually fibrous connective tissue that has grown over an opening that penetrated the skin.

We have two layers of skin: the outer layer, or epidermis as it is called, and the deeper layer called the dermis. Injuries that involve a cutting of both layers will produce a scar when they heal. If the injury only penetrates the epidermis, the cells will regrow and the skin will heal without a scar.

The size and characteristics of a scar will depend on how long it takes the wound to heal, how clean the opening was and how much tissue was destroyed during the illness or accident.

Send your question on a post card in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

South was very disappointed when North dropped him at two notrump, but was delighted when he saw the dummy. The game was match-point duplicate and it looked as if spade declarers would have to lose two hearts, a ruff, the ace of spades and king of clubs to wind up with just eight tricks and South could see eight tricks at notrump unless East held a six-card heart suit.

East allowed dummy's eight of hearts to hold the first trick. The seven of spades was led to the king. West ducked! West also played low on the second spade. If South had been looking at all the cards he would have played nine, but he did play the jack. East dropped the nine of clubs and South saw he would have to abandon the spade suit and look for some other way to find eight tricks.

It wasn't hard for him. He just cashed the diamonds to get to six tricks; threw East in with a heart and waited.

East cashed four hearts and had to lead a club. South rose with his queen and had his eighth trick and a top score.

Note that this play would not have succeeded if East had cashed ace-king of hearts and led a third heart to start the defense.

Ask Andy

Avocado is fruit with skin of an alligator

IS THE AVOCADO A FRUIT OR VEGETABLE?

The avocado is related to the laurel, and it is definitely a fruit tree. It can be found growing from Mexico south to Colombia and Peru and north to Florida and California. Leading supplier of the North American avocado market is California.

In 1911, an American named Carl Schmidt was hired by the West Indian Nursery in Altadena, Calif., to bring back from Mexico an avocado that would do well in Southern California. He brought back a number of varieties, but the Fuerte type proved to be the best when it survived a great freeze in 1913 and went on to grow and produce in a strong and vigorous way.

First plantings in California actually were made in 1848 by Henry Dalton in an area just east of Los Angeles. An additional orchard was established by a man named R. B. Ord in Santa Barbara in 1871.

What a great fruit the avocado is. It has no cholesterol at all and its oil is polyunsaturated. Although it is considered to be an exotic and glamorous item of food, it is actually most practical and very nourishing. It is highly nutritious and contains large amounts of the E vitamins as well as vitamin A, ascorbic acid, niacin, thiamine, riboflavin, magnesium, iron, phosphorus, calcium and potassium. One-half of an avocado contains only 138 calories.

The nutrient content, combined with a delicious and gentle flavor as well as a smooth texture, makes the avocado an especially good food for both adults and children. It's also very easy to digest.

The tropical avocado is shaped very much like a pear and comes in varieties that have skin of dark green or purplish-black. A large seed is found in the center of a yellow-green pulp that has a nutty flavor. The pulp is a perfect addition for any salad but can stand as the main ingredient in many other dishes.

Some people call the fruit alligator pear.

If you have a little patience, you can grow your own avocado tree at home. The next time you use an avocado at your house, save the seed and wash it carefully. Fill a jar with water. Stick three toothpicks into the sides of the seed and suspend it broad-side down a little way into the jar. In a few weeks the seed will crack and sprout. Roots will go down into the water and a stalk will climb into the air. When the roots are very thick, plant your small tree in a 12-inch pot filled with rich soil.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Namita Sachdev, 13, of Tucson, Ariz., for her question:

HOW DO SCARS FORM?

Wounds from cuts, surgical incisions or injuries from such diseases as acne and smallpox can result in permanent welts on the skin called scars. The scars are actually fibrous connective tissue that has grown over an opening that penetrated the skin.

We have two layers of skin: the outer layer, or epidermis as it is called, and the deeper layer called the dermis. Injuries that involve a cutting of both layers will produce a scar when they heal. If the injury only penetrates the epidermis, the cells will regrow and the skin will heal without a scar.

The size and characteristics of a scar will depend on how long it takes the wound to heal, how clean the opening was and how much tissue was destroyed during the illness or accident.

Send your question on a post card in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.
